

Downtown L.B. quietly dying as businesses leave

By LARRY LARUE
Staff Writer

In the phraseology of the latest urban crisis, the city of Long Beach is holding a running-out-of-business sale.

The hard facts of 1976 are indisputable:

— 17 retail businesses left downtown Long Beach.

— Nine industrial firms, most from the city's faltering Westside, moved out of the city.

— At least seven other major companies once based in Long Beach invested considerable money to develop headquarters in other cities, moving the majority of high-level jobs out.

Those figures, from the city's department of community development, are the "tip of the iceberg," according to economic development specialist Robert Taylor.

"For every company that left, two or three others suffered," Taylor said. "We're being left with businesses that have gone static, or those that are struggling along — and they certainly don't help you sell your city to new businesses."

URBAN FLIGHT, one city hall observer calls it — a metropolitan trend that has many cities — including nearly all major West Coast communities — scrambling.

James Wilson, mayor pro tem of Long Beach, says cities may have seen the end of the days when, as in the 1950s and 60s, they merely had to sit back and wait for the businesses to land.

"Every city is in the situation of competing for business now," Wilson said. "And city officials — all of us — are salesmen. We have to try to make room for new businesses and fight to retain those already here."

In Los Angeles, Fred Schnell, special economic adviser to Mayor Tom Bradley, points out that 37 companies employing 500 persons or more each, left the L.A. Basin during the past seven years.

Smaller companies, from "mom and pop" operations to firms with substantial employment, are harder to track, Schnell said.

"BUT WE'VE seen the red flag go up. If it's not a trend now, it's close enough to take notice," Schnell said.

Although businesses have been leaving the Southland's major cities, often to move into Orange County, the work force in Long Beach and Los Angeles has increased.

Brad Crowe, director of economic development in Los Angeles, says the trend found in the 1970 census — when L.A. was shown to have lost 133 residents for every 100 coming in — has reversed, slowly but steadily.

"Last year we know the city and county, overall, had a small population increase," he said. "We can't afford to lose any more companies."

Cities moving hurriedly into the recruiting field are, at the same time, casting an anxious eye on the homefront, watching as other cities make approaches to traditionally "safe" businesses.

IN LONG BEACH, a 15-member economic development commission has been named "to provide special insight in addressing the needs of local businesses," in a serious attempt to hold the line on existing commerce.

In Los Angeles, the city established a "business hotline" to provide merchants and executives instant contact with a source knowledgeable about loans, taxes and other business problems.

Los Angeles officials also questioned firms leaving the area and came up with a 14-point list of reasons for the moves. That list, Taylor concludes, could easily have been produced in Long Beach.

IT INCLUDES complaints on:

- Lack of vacant land, both for improvement of existing facilities and for new construction.

- The decay of downtown areas, which makes it "virtually impossible" for many merchants to compete with outlying shopping centers and malls.

- The avalanche of bureaucratic paperwork that faces businesses attempting to work within a major city.

- The attitude of city governments toward business.

There was a variety of others, ranging from graffiti on company property to the scarcity of existing buildings within a city like Long Beach.

Of all of them, however, none hit home at city hall quite as heavily as that of "attitude."

LONG BEACH SUPERTANKER FACILITY WOULD HANDLE 600,000 TO 1.2 MILLION GALLONS OF ALASKAN CRUDE OIL DAILY
Drawing by I.P.T. staff artist Irwin DeGroot

Oil terminal would make L.B. 'well' again

More than 600,000 barrels of oil will come pouring out of the giant Alaskan pipeline beginning this summer.

As of now, it has no place to go. The Port of Long Beach, in a draft lease, is promised a minimum of $9.8 million a year if they build a terminal to take the oil.

Port officials, like kids at Christmastime, can hardly wait. But state officials want the monetary present too.

So, it appears to have become a big political fight. Some say the prize could be the presidency of the United States.

IT HINGES on who—the State of California or the City of Long Beach—gets millions of dollars a year in rent from Alaskan oil operators as the West Coast terminal for Alaskan crude oil.

Long Beach stands to gain $9.8 million a year, according to a draft lease between the Port of Long Beach and Sohio (Standard Oil Company of Ohio) if the terminal is built in Long Beach. It would pull the city out of its near-bankrupt status.

The State of California stands to gain somewhere between $5 million and $25 million a year—depending on who is talking—if the terminal is built at Avila Beach or Estero Bay. It would put the governor in the enviable position of not having to raise taxes, furthering his status as presidential timber.

And the initial money is just for starters.

By the end of the year the price doubles as incoming oil jumps from 600,000 barrels a day to 1.2 million barrels a day.

MEANWHILE, the infighting—the use of governmental agencies, the use of city pressure, lobbyists, over-activity and nonactivity—has delayed the construction of any West Coast terminal for the oil.

Long Beach city and port officials have spent thousands of dollars in promoting the terminal for their city. A draft of a lease between the city and Sohio, the relatively small Ohio oil company that has blossomed into a giant as controller of 54 per cent of the Alaskan oil field, calls for a minimum rent of $9.8 million a year should the terminal be constructed in the city, it was learned. The amount is based on a minimum of 600,000 barrels daily. An additional $2 million is anticipated annually through taxation.

Parenthetically, Sohio in 1969 sold 54 per cent of its stock to British Petroleum Co. Ltd. to acquire both oil and gas leases at Prudhoe Bay and needed capital. Together, Sohio-BP, as it is now known, owns 54 per cent of the North Slope oil and 49 per cent of the Trans-Alaska pipeline.

An agreement between the city and Sohio, dated February 1976, and amended in December 1976, calls for Sohio to pay all costs related to the planning, promoting and pushing of the terminal in Long Beach—should it eventually be built in the harbor. And, percentages of the costs, should the Long Beach terminal not be given final approval by all agencies.

Carter hears the nation calling

WASHINGTON — President Carter listened to questions, complaints, compliments and even a pitch for a job from ordinary Americans Saturday, answering telephone calls on subjects ranging from Cuba to the Concorde to who pays the bills for his family in the White House.

A national radio audience heard a relaxed Carter field 42 calls from all over the country for two hours, and when it was over he told CBS anchorman Walter Cronkite he thought it was valuable for him to get questions that showed him what the American people are concerned about. "My inclination would be to do it again in the future," he said.

While some of the questions were very particular, such as whether he could come to a civic celebration in Minnesota this July or a change in the tax law reducing advantages for the disabled, most were of a general nature, focusing heavily on tax reform, veterans' benefits, his draft evaders' pardon and health.

One tragic note came 45 minutes after the end of the program when 55-year-old Rev. James E. Baker of Ridgeland, S.C., one of Carter's questioners, became ill and died. Authorities said the retired clergyman had a heart attack. Baker had been the 24th questioner to get through to Carter at about 12:15 p.m. PST, and he had asked the President a question about consumer protection.

People in the news

FDR's New Deal team together again

Combined News Services
WASHINGTON — It was a night of Washington memories that began with laughs and ended in quiet melancholy. It was a night of FDR and the New Deal.

las, threading her way into a packed, noisy ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. "We had such hope," Thomas "the Cork" Corcoran, a spry, 76-year-old lawyer who helped draft key New Deal legislation, gazed around the room and said. "We never thought we'd be alive this long — we all cheated heaven." More than 800 veterans of the New Deal held an emotional reunion, ending early Saturday morning and marking the 44th anniversary of Franklin D. Roosevelt's first inauguration.

The names of numerous guests instantly revived the New Deal. Rexford G. Tugwell, India Edwards, Claude Pepper, Jonathan Daniels, Leon Keyserling, Benjamin V. Cohen, James H. Rowe. There were also Alice Acheson, widow of the former secretary of state, Rep. Lindy Boggs, Curtis Roosevelt, the President's grandson and Grace Tully, a zesty 76-year-old who had been the FDR's secretary when he was governor of New York and stayed with him at the White House until his death.

"Some tried to follow in Mr. Roosevelt's footsteps but, believe me, no one, no one at all, can follow that man," said Miss Tully.

Although the reunion began informally ("I don't think any of you ever saw such a gang," said Corcoran) the mood veered through the evening. Vice President Walter Mondale, who was scheduled to appear, abruptly canceled at the last moment to fly to Minnesota for a rest, and there was annoyance at the switch. President Carter failed to send a formal message, although former Vice President Hubert Humphrey, now thin and frail, said that the White House conveyed its best wishes.

What marked the evening, however, were memories. There were 1930s folk songs by Joe Glazer, a film recalling the New Deal, speeches by Humphrey and Cohen and the recollections of guests about an era when they were young.

"I was 22 in 1932," I.F. Stone, the journalist, said with a smile. "I'm a relic, I suppose, of the New Deal. What it represented was hope, and the President transmitted that hope. There was a sense of concern and devotion. There was a feeling, with Roosevelt, of ebullience, of excitement. With Roosevelt the country wanted change. Now they're afraid of change."

Cohen, a Roosevelt brain-truster, speaking in a quavering voice, said: "Washington was the center of action and most of us wanted to be part of that action."

Cohen spoke quietly for 40 minutes, detailing the legislative accomplishments of the New Deal. "The miracle of Roosevelt's leadership was that he could summon the country's undiscovered depth of ability," he said.

And then he added quietly, as the guests sat in silence, "most of our New Deal years were the best years of our lives. Elihu Root once said, 'To be part of great things — that is life!'" Cohen paused. Some of the guests smiled; others began to applaud.

Appointed

President Carter announced Saturday he is nominating Patricia M. Derian, deputy director of his 1977 campaign, to be the State Department's coordinator for humanitarian affairs.

A graduate nurse, she was active in the civil rights movement in Mississippi and was elected that state's Democratic national committeewoman in 1968.

'Rochester' rites

A funeral was held Saturday in Los Angeles for Eddie Anderson, who was best known as "Rochester" on the Jack Benny radio and television shows.

Anderson, 71, died of apparent heart failure last Monday at the Motion Picture and Television Hospital in Woodland Hills.

Ford at play
Ex-President Ford, sporting a new hat bearing his name, talks with press after a day of skiing the new snow in Vail, Colo. He is in Vail for a week.

Rep. Jordan

The compelling force for bringing about change in the United States is the "outrage and concern" of people, not Congress or the presidency, says U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Texas.

"Whether we have a better government in the next four years will not depend on the will of the Congress. It will not depend on the determination of the President," she told an audience Friday night at Connecticut College in New London.

"It will depend on the outrage and concern of the citizens. This is the compelling force for precipitating change," said Mrs. Jordan. The congresswoman gained national prominence as a member of the House Judiciary Committee during the Nixon impeachment hearings. She also delivered the keynote speech at the 1976 National Democratic Convention.

Bing Crosby spent Saturday morning watching one of his old movies — "Pennies from Heaven" — on his Pasadena hospital room television set, hospital officials said.

The 72-year-old entertainer remained in Huntington Memorial Hospital another day, recuperating from a 20-foot fall from a stage during a benefit performance.

One of the songs Crosby sang during the performance was the theme from the 1936 movie.

Hospital spokesman John McCarthy said doctors would decide this morning whether Crosby could go home then. "He's still a little sore to go home," said McCarthy.

Crosby tumbled from the Ambassador Auditorium stage Thursday night at the end of a show celebrating his 50th year in show business. He suffered a small head cut and bruises, but was not seriously hurt.

The three-hour show was taped by CBS, which will air 90 minutes of it as "Bing!" on March 20. Also on the show, proceeds of which will go to charity, were Bob Hope, Paul Anka, Bette Midler, Rosemary Clooney and the Mills Brothers.

Mick Jagger

Margaret Trudeau and Mick Jagger arrived together in a limousine at the back door of a Toronto nightclub for a Rolling Stones concert.

When they entered the building, Jagger, lead singer of the Stones, was surrounded by fans seeking autographs. Mrs. Trudeau, wife of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, disappeared into the crowd.

She found a seat near the stage and sat quietly through the two-hour performance, the group's first club date since 1964.

The Stones are in Toronto to record an album and finish one they began last spring during a tour of Europe. Both albums require songs recorded before a live audience.

Russ dissidents fear renewed gag attempts

MOSCOW — The U.S. Embassy dismissed a Soviet allegation of spying as "a classical piece of dis-information" Saturday, but dissidents said they feared it signaled a further attempt to silence them.

Gromyko in open

MOSCOW — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko met with U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon on Saturday, ending a six-week absence from the public scene that sparked reports Gromyko was ill. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said "a variety of topics of mutual interest were discussed," but did not disclose specific subjects. The two men may have touched on the upcoming visit later this month of U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and on current tensions between the two countries.

Church indicted

SEOUL, South Korea — The government prosecutor's office indicted the Unification church of evangelist Sun Myung Moon, the church's pharmaceutical subsidiary and six of its officers on tax evasion charges Saturday. The indictments charge that the Hwa Pharmaceutical Co. evaded $6 million in taxes owed in connection with the production and export of ginseng tea.

Amin slates visit

NAIROBI, Kenya — Ugandan President Idi Amin said Saturday he will attend the Commonwealth Conference in London this June and will try to resolve the Northern Ireland problem while he is in Britain. Uganda Radio quoted Amin as saying he couldn't care less about British government reservations over his visit.

Moonies indicted

SEOUL, South Korea — The government prosecutor's office indicted the Unification church of evangelist Sun Myung Moon, the church's pharmaceutical subsidiary and six of its officers on tax evasion charges Saturday. The indictments charge that the Hwa Pharmaceutical Co. evaded $6 million in taxes owed in connection with the production and export of ginseng tea. Meanwhile Saturday, police halted a demonstration by some 200 opposition party members who attempted to march through downtown Seoul shouting anti-government slogans.

Coffee price rises

RIO DE JANEIRO — Brazil has raised its minimum coffee export price from $2.10 to $2.80 per pound, a 33 per cent hike. The new prices were not expected to be felt immediately in U.S. supermarkets, many of which are selling coffee at below wholesale prices to attract customers. But it was not known what impact the increase would have in the 1977 run on the U.S. market, where the price of regular ground coffee ranges between $2.80 and $3.20 a pound.

In a major article Friday the government newspaper Izvestia said some members of the embassy staff were involved in a spy ring with Soviet dissidents who passed them secret military and scientific information.

An embassy spokesman said the article was "interlarded with slander and innuendo and as such we find it unworthy of any further comment at this time."

But the dissidents, especially Jews on whom the attack focused, expressed concern. A statement signed by seven of them said they feared new anti-Semitic repressions, and one of the Jews, Vladimir Slepak, added, "We think there will be arrests."

Dissident leader Andrei D. Sakharov, physicist and Nobel Peace Prize winner, noted that the Izvestia accusations came on the eve of the 24th anniversary of Josef Stalin's death. He said the article was "disgusting and provocative" and recalled the dictator's methods. "The future depends on how decisive the forces of public opinion will be," he said in a reference to human rights statements by President Carter and other Western leaders.

Thousands riot

ROME — Thousands of leftists, angered by a police ban on a protest march, rampaged through downtown Rome on Saturday setting cars on fire, smashing hotel and shop windows, and exchanging gunfire with police, dozens of persons were injured and at least two policemen were shot during the three hours of hit-and-run clashes that left sectors of downtown Rome looking like a battleground. An estimated 10,000 students were involved in the fighting.

Arms aid refused

RIO DE JANEIRO — The rightwing military government of Brazil Saturday informed the U.S. it would not accept an expected $50 million in American military sales credits next year. Brazil linked the aid rejection to its displeasure over the Carter administration's criticism of the regime's human rights abuses. The rejection of military assistance here is part of the rapidly worsening U.S. relations not only with Brazil, but with other Latin American military regimes displeased over the strident human rights stand taken by the Carter administration.

FDR's New Deal team together again

Combined News Services

WASHINGTON — It was a night of Washington memories that began with laughs and ended in quiet melancholy. It was a night of FDR and the New Deal.

"We were so young then," said former Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas, threading her way into a packed, noisy ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. "We had such hope."

Thomas "the Cork" Corcoran, a spry, 76-year-old lawyer who helped draft key New Deal legislation, gazed around the room and said, "We never thought we'd be alive this long — we all cheated heaven."

More than 800 veterans of the New Deal held an emotional reunion, ending early Saturday morning and marking the 44th anniversary of Franklin D. Roosevelt's first inauguration.

The names of numerous guests instantly revived the New Deal. Rexford G. Tugwell, India Edwards, Claude Pepper, Jonathan Daniels, Leon Keyserling, Benjamin V. Cohen, James H. Rowe. There were also Alice Acheson, widow of the former secretary of state, Rep. Lindy Boggs, Curtis Roosevelt, the President's grandson and Grace Tully, a zesty 76-year-old who had been the FDR's secretary when he was governor of New York and stayed with him at the White House until his death.

"Some tried to follow in Mr. Roosevelt's footsteps but, believe me, no one, no one at all, can follow that man," said Miss Tully.

Although the reunion began informally ("I don't think any of you ever saw such a gang," said Corcoran) the mood veered through the evening. Vice President Walter Mondale, who was scheduled to appear, abruptly canceled at the last moment to fly to Minnesota for a rest, and there was annoyance at the switch. President Carter failed to send a formal message, although former Vice President Hubert Humphrey, now thin and frail, said that the White House conveyed its best wishes.

What marked the evening, however, were memories. There were 1930s folk songs by Joe Glazer, a film recalling the New Deal, speeches by Humphrey and Cohen and the recollections of guests about an era when they were young.

"I was 22 in 1932," I.F. Stone, the journalist, said with a smile. "I'm a relic, I suppose, of the New Deal. What it represented was hope, and the President transmitted that hope. There was a sense of concern and devotion. There was a feeling, with Roosevelt, of ebullience, of excitement. With Roosevelt the country wanted change. Now they're afraid of change."

Cohen, a Roosevelt brain-truster, speaking in a quavering voice, said: "Washington was the center of action and most of us wanted to be part of that action."

Cohen spoke quietly for 40 minutes, detailing the legislative accomplishments of the New Deal. "The miracle of Roosevelt's leadership was that he could summon the country's undiscovered depth of ability," he said.

And then he added quietly, as the guests sat in silence, "most of our New Deal years were the best years of our lives. Elihu Root once said, 'To be part of great things — that is life!'" Cohen paused. Some of the guests smiled; others began to applaud.

Appointed

President Carter announced Saturday he is nominating Patricia M. Derian, deputy director of his 1977 campaign, to be the State Department's coordinator for humanitarian affairs.

A graduate nurse, she was active in the civil rights movement in Mississippi and was elected that state's Democratic national committeewoman in 1968.

'Rochester' rites

A funeral was held Saturday in Los Angeles for Eddie Anderson, who was best known as "Rochester" on the Jack Benny radio and television shows.

Anderson, 71, died of apparent heart failure last Monday at the Motion Picture and Television Hospital in Woodland Hills.

Rep. Jordan

The compelling force for bringing about change in the United States is the "outrage and concern" of people, not Congress or the presidency, says U.S. Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Texas.

"Whether we have a better government in the next four years will not depend on the will of the Congress, it will not depend on the determination of the President," she told an audience Friday night at Connecticut College in New London.

"It will depend on the outrage and concern of the citizens. This is the compelling force for precipitating change," said Mrs. Jordan. The congresswoman gained national prominence as a member of the House Judiciary Committee during the Nixon impeachment hearings. She also delivered the keynote speech at the 1976 National Democratic Convention.

Bing Crosby spent Saturday morning watching one of his old movies — "Pennies from Heaven" — on his Pasadena hospital room television set, hospital officials said.

The 72-year-old entertainer remained in Huntington Memorial Hospital another day, recuperating from a 20-foot fall from a stage during a benefit performance.

One of the songs Crosby sang during the performance was the theme from the 1936 movie.

Hospital spokesman John McCarthy said doctors would decide this morning whether Crosby could go home then. "He's still a little sore to go home," said McCarthy.

Crosby tumbled from the Ambassador Auditorium stage Thursday night at the end of a show celebrating his 50th year in show business. He suffered a small head cut and bruises, but was not seriously hurt.

The three-hour show was taped by CBS, which will air 90 minutes of it as "Bing!" on March 20. Also on the show, proceeds of which will go to charity, were Bob Hope, Paul Anka, Bette Midler, Rosemary Clooney and the Mills Brothers.

Mick Jagger

Margaret Trudeau and Mick Jagger arrived together in a limousine at the back door of a Toronto nightclub for a Rolling Stones concert.

When they entered the building, Jagger, lead singer of the Stones, was surrounded by fans seeking autographs. Mrs. Trudeau, wife of Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau, disappeared into the crowd.

She found a seat near the stage and sat quietly through the two-hour performance, the group's first club date since 1964.

The Stones are in Toronto to record an album and finish one they began last spring during a tour of Europe. Both albums require songs recorded before a live audience.

Russ dissidents fear renewed gag attempts

Combined News Services

MOSCOW — The U.S. Embassy dismissed a Soviet allegation of spying as "a classical piece of dis-information" Saturday, but dissidents said they feared it signaled a further attempt to silence them.

Gromyko in open

MOSCOW — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko met with U.S. Ambassador Malcolm Toon on Saturday, ending a six-week absence from the public scene that sparked reports Gromyko was ill. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said a variety of topics of mutual interest were discussed, but did not disclose specific subjects. The two men may have touched on the upcoming visit later this month of U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and on current tensions between the two countries.

Church indicted

SEOUL, South Korea — The government prosecutor's office indicted the Unification church of evangelist Sun Myung Moon, the church's pharmaceutical subsidiary and six of its officers on tax evasion charges Saturday. The indictments charge that the Hwa Pharmaceutical Co. evaded $6 million in taxes owed in connection with the production and export of ginseng tea.

Amin slates visit

NAIROBI, Kenya — Ugandan President Idi Amin said Saturday he will attend the Commonwealth Conference in London this June and will try to resolve the Northern Ireland problem while he is in Britain. Uganda Radio quoted Amin as saying he couldn't care less about British government reservations over his visit.

Moonies indicted

SEOUL, South Korea — The government prosecutor's office indicted the Unification church of evangelist Sun Myung Moon, the church's pharmaceutical subsidiary and six of its officers on tax evasion charges Saturday. The indictments charge that the Hwa Pharmaceutical Co. evaded $6 million in taxes owed in connection with the production and export of ginseng tea. Meanwhile Saturday, police halted a demonstration by some 200 opposition party members who attempted to march through downtown Seoul shouting anti-government slogans.

Coffee price rises

RIO DE JANEIRO — Brazil has raised its minimum coffee export price from $2.10 to $2.80 per pound, a 33 percent hike. The new prices were not expected to be felt immediately in U.S. supermarkets, many of which are selling coffee at below wholesale prices to attract customers. But it was not known what impact the increase would have in the long run on the U.S. market, where the price of regular ground coffee ranges between $2.80 and $3.20 a pound.

In a major article Friday the government newspaper Izvestia said some members of the embassy staff were involved in a spy ring with Soviet dissidents who passed them secret military and scientific information.

An embassy spokesman said the article was "interlarded with slander and innuendo and as such we find it unworthy of any further comment at this time."

But the dissidents, especially Jews on whom the attack focused, expressed concern. A statement signed by seven of them said they feared new anti-Semitic repressions, and one of the Jews, Vladimir Slepak, added, "We think there will be arrests."

Dissident leader Andrei D. Sakharov, physicist and Nobel Peace Prize winner, noted that the Izvestia accusations came on the eve of the 24th anniversary of Josef Stalin's death. He said the article was "disgusting and provocative" and recalled the dictator's methods. "The future depends on how decisive the forces of public opinion will be," he said in a reference to human rights statements by President Carter and other Western leaders.

Thousands riot

ROME — Thousands of leftists, angered by a police ban on a protest march, rampaged through downtown Rome on Saturday setting cars on fire, smashing hotel and shop windows, and exchanging gunfire with police. dozens of persons were injured and at least two policemen were shot during the three hours of hit-and-run clashes that left sectors of downtown Rome looking like a battleground. An estimated 10,000 students were involved in the fighting.

Arms aid refused

RIO DE JANEIRO — The rightwing military government of Brazil Saturday informed the U.S. it would not accept an expected $50 million in American military sales credits next year. Brazil linked the aid rejection to its displeasure over the Carter administration's criticism of the regime's human rights abuses. The rejection of military assistance here is part of the rapidly worsening U.S. relations not only with Brazil, but with other Latin American military regimes displeased over the strident human rights stand taken by the Carter administration.

Panama Canal talks

PANAMA CITY — No major breakthrough was achieved during the last round of Canal treaty negotiations between the U.S. and Panama, but for the first time "the truly important substantive issues" were discussed in depth, according to Panama's chief negotiator. Romulo Escobar Betancourt, said that at last month's talks, the first to be held during the Carter Administration, the U.S. showed a willingness to tackle the "real issues" of the duration of any new treaty and the defense and neutrality of the Canal at the end of that treaty.

State drought cost set at $6 billion

By GIL BAILEY
From Our National Bureau

SAN FRANCISCO—The drought will cost California an estimated $6 billion, the top state water official told a congressional hearing here Saturday.

In addition, he and other water officials said the crisis facing the city of San Francisco is much more serious than previously reported.

Water officials said privately the city and its 2 million customers in Alameda, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties may have to be bailed out by other areas with less critical shortages.

"The city is going to have to go into further conservation," Ronald Robie, state director of water resources, told the House Interior Subcommittee on Water and Power. His comments came after San Francisco had already announced a mandatory 25 per cent cutback plan.

"The projection of runoff (by San Francisco of its Hetch Hetchy system) are not necessarily valid," Robie said under questioning by Rep. Del Clawson, R-Downey.

On the overall cost of the drought, Robie testified:

"Tentative results indicate that under the most likely scenario damage will amount to about $6 billion — an approximate 2.6 per cent decrease in gross state production."

Friday, the subcommittee heard estimates in Seattle that the drought in the Pacific Northwest, including Oregon, Washington and Idaho, is costing an estimated $2 billion. The San Francisco situation was brought out by Clawson.

Robie noted the low state of San Francisco reservoirs, adding, "I believe they have a problem."

Clawson asked whether San Francisco might go dry.

"I don't think so. We have emergency supplies from Lake Oroville and the Delta," Robie replied.

Other water officials said privately San Francisco had been warned of its problem but had ignored those warnings. However, they agreed San Francisco would be saved "even if we have to drain Lake Oroville dry," referring to the giant reservoir which is the heart of the state water system.

A total of 22 witnesses appeared before the subcommittee. Their testimony was uniformly pessimistic.

"Drought conditions in California have persisted now for some 16 months and are expected to continue and worsen through the balance of 1977," reported Billy B. Martin, regional director of the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

Barton W. Shackelford, senior vice president of Pacific Gas and Electric Co., said of the drought, "This will probably result in area hydroelectric generation about 30 per cent lower than in 1976, which in itself was lower than in 1975, during the previous dry year of record, 1931."

Shackelford also said, "The probability of rolling brownouts is pretty low, but we are asking people to prepare."

"The low flows which California is now experiencing, coming on the heels of the extreme deficiency of the previous year, present a new dimension to the availability of water in California," testified Robert J. C. Burnash, hydrologist in charge of the California-Nevada River Forecast Center.

Finally, water officials again privately expressed fears that because of the low flows the amount of salt in the water shipped to the San Joaquin Valley would increase to the point where the waters would poison the fertile fields of that valley.

Plastic grass

Our 40 by 80-foot backyard, but if water is going to be rationed, it wouldn't make much sense to plant it now. Could you give us information on synthetic grass? How much does it cost, where can it be bought and how durable is it? R.A., Long Beach

Because of its high cost and the fact that it should only be installed on a concrete slab, such artificial grass as AstroTurf probably offers no panacea for homeowners. The turf itself costs $10 to $20 a yard installed, according to a distributor, Clyde Gilna of Duraturf Corp., 11783 Cardinal Circle, Garden Grove. And it also would be costly to pour the proper concrete slab for the installation. However, Gilna said, some types of artificial grass look "quite realistic" and should last for years. If you will accept the appearance of gravel or pebbles as a groundcover, they can be spread after first dousing the soil with plant killer and covering it with sheet plastic. A similar cover without the problem of loose pebbles was developed by the Prairie Co., 510 E. Main St., Urbana, Ill. 61801, and called Prairie-Film. It utilizes rounded rocks or pebbles coated with clear epoxy resin in a concrete mixer. Spread on the ground, the rocks are bonded together with the epoxy but remain porous so water will soak through. The resin costs about $20 a gallon. The City of Long Beach used Prairie-Film in the parking lot dividing islands at the new North Long Beach Neighborhood Center in Houghton Park. Bermuda grass requires the least water of the grasses. Other hardy, drought-resistant ground covers are African daisy, sedums, and ice plant.

Can you please help us get the Social Security Administration to stop sending monthly disability checks to my husband? He had a heart attack in July 1975 and had open heart surgery the following December. He was eligible for disability benefits from that July until he went back to work last April 20. We notified Social Security the day he returned to work, and phoned them again two months later because the checks kept coming. We contacted the office in Norwalk in October and they sent us a paper to fill out, which we completed and returned to them. We've heard nothing from them since and are still getting the checks. We finally put them in the bank last month but haven't spent any of the money. A.H.E., Artesia.

The payments should end in about six weeks and you will be notified of the amount of money you must refund to Social Security. We phoned the Norwalk office for you and they contacted you and had you fill out new forms necessary to terminate the payments.

No parking

Can you find out why we in Cerritos can't park on the street in front of our homes six nights a week and park off the street for street cleaning the seventh night, as they do in Bellflower? It would save a lot of front lawn parking, which looks bad. B.C., Cerritos.

The City of Cerritos thinks street parking looks worse, so created the overnight parking ordinance, which prohibits parking on any city street between 3 a.m. and 5 a.m. The ordinance was aimed mainly at owners of recreational vehicles and extra cars that are used only occasionally, and are left parked on the street for weeks at a time. A spokesman for the city told Action Line. There is provision for a free, semi-annual exception permit to be issued to multi-car families living in older homes with inadequate garage space. Two-week permits, renewable twice, also will be issued to persons temporarily in possession of an extra car, or who have houseguests. Individuals planning a large party that might last past the 3 a.m. deadline can notify City Hall and the Sheriff's Department will be told not to ticket cars on that street the night of the party. The fine for parking violations is $5.

Laguna festival

Who can I contact about participating in Laguna Beach's Sawdust Festival? N.S., Long Beach.

Sawdust Festival exhibitors must live in Laguna Beach or South Laguna, but a similar arts and crafts display, the Art-A-Fair, held in conjunction with the annual Festival of Arts-Pageant of the Masters, accepts exhibitors from other cities. Participants in this exhibition display traditional arts and crafts, but no abstracts. "If you know what it is, it belongs in Art-A-Fair," said Jean Spiry, former president of the group. The Sawdust Festival is an offshoot of the Festival of Arts. It was formed about a dozen years ago by artists unable to get space on the main Festival grounds. Calling themselves the rejects, they set up booths across the street. Then dissension among the Sawdust Festival ranks brought about another split, with the traditional artists and artisans leaving to form Art-A-Fair. This year these three major display areas will be open in conjunction with the Festival of Arts July 15 through Aug. 28. All will be located near town along Laguna Canyon Road. For an Art-A-Fair membership application, write the group at P.O. Box 547, Laguna Beach, Calif. 92652. A jury will view applicants' work March 26 and select exhibitors. There is a $5 jury fee for each category of work you want to display and if you are accepted, the fee will be credited to the annual $15 membership dues. Cost for a booth for the six-week run will be about $70.

Sawdust Festival exhibitors must live in Laguna Beach or South Laguna, but a similar arts and crafts display, the Art-A-Fair, held in conjunction with the annual Festival of Arts-Pageant of the Masters, accepts exhibitors from other cities. Participants in this exhibition display traditional arts and crafts, but no abstracts. "If you know what it is, it belongs in Art-A-Fair," said Jean Spiry, former president of the group. The Sawdust Festival is an offshoot of the Festival of Arts. It was formed about a dozen years ago by artists unable to get space on the main Festival grounds. Calling themselves the rejects, they set up booths across the street. Then dissension among the Sawdust Festival ranks brought about another split, with the traditional artists and artisans leaving to form Art-A-Fair. This year these three major display areas will be open in conjunction with the Festival of Arts July 15 through Aug. 28. All will be located near town along Laguna Canyon Road. For an Art-A-Fair membership application, write the group at P.O. Box 147, Laguna Beach, Calif. 92652. A jury will view applicants' work March 26 and select exhibitors. There is a $5 jury fee for each category of work you want to display and if you are accepted, the fee will be credited to the annual $15 membership dues. Cost for a booth for the six-week run will be about $70.

"Old College Try"

Pres. Carter talks, but Amin is tied up

By A. ACE BURGESS
Staff Writer

There's an old saying, "seek and ye shall find." Well, I've been seeking a telephone interview with Ugandan President Idi Amin for the past four days, and the only thing I've found is that listening to busy signals makes my ear tired and dialing his number so often makes my finger sore.

You think I'm kidding? Why, I've called Amin so many times that half of the overseas operators know me by my first name, and the other half wish that they had never heard of me.

In spite of Amin's stature around the world, he seems to be as popular in Uganda as Elvis Presley is at a U.S. 1950's rock and roll revival. At least, he gets a lot of calls.

No matter what time you call, day or night, Amin's unlisted phone at his Kampala palace (given to me by a reporter at the Nairobi Daily Nation) is busy. And the few times times I have managed to get through, no one answers.

I SHOULD have expected as much when the reporter gave me the number because when I asked him who would answer the phone, he replied, "It could be the janitor standing around with nothing to do, or who knows, it could be the President himself. I've learned never to be surprised at what happens over there."

As it was, no one answered the phone, which doesn't do a budding journalist a heck of a lot of good. But, being of the old school of journalism, I figured hey, if you can't get in the front door, try the back.

And that's exactly what I did... also with little success.

After trying to reach Amin numerous times at his palace in Kampala, I received another number from the Nairobi newspaper.

By some stroke of luck it's hard getting a line, according to one overseas operator because Uganda has a "one-horse" telephone system, that call went through.

"CAN I help you?" asked a gruff voice. I said I wanted to speak to Amin and he quickly replied, "Are you an American?" Naturally, I said yes, and explained to him that I was a reporter wanting an interview.

"President Amin is not speaking to anyone, especially American reporters," he bluntly explained. I was on the verge of making my Kunta Kinte plea — "Hey, I'm a brother man" — but he loudly hung up before I could get my rap together.

Why the silence is anyone's guess, but it could be that Amin is upset with reports in Time and Newsweek magazines that portray him in an unfavorable light. Both had cover stories on Amin, but Time knocked him pretty hard. Their cover type read, "Madman of Africa."

It could be reports by refugees of massacres in Uganda that have cooled him to the press. Or it could be the story that Amin was arranging to have the Palestine Liberation Organization hijack a plane from Entebbe airport with Americans leaving the country after a meeting with Amin.

WHATEVER the reasons, Amin is not talking...at least not now.

I must say though, I gave it the old college try. I called in the morning, I called in the evening and I even stayed up until 3 a.m. trying to get in touch with him. Once, I even went to sleep on the phone waiting for an answer.

Besides the many, expensive phone calls, I also sent a telegram. It was a bit wordy, but I wanted him to know that I was shooting from the hip, and not at his back.

The telegram went something like this:

"I TRIED calling early this morning but the operator said she could not put me through to you." I offered, "This being the case, I've decided to contact you by wire. What I want, if you would consent, is a telephone interview..."

"The press, as you no doubt realize, has portrayed you as a madman, but for some reason, I don't think this is the case," I wrote. "If you have a mind, I would like you to state your position as to who and what makes up Idi Amin. I promise you, that what you say will be printed exactly as you say it."

"Call me collect at my office or my home," the telegram continued. "It makes no difference what time it is. I'll be happy to hear from you. I, and many people throughout the world, look forward to hearing from you. Until later, may your days be bright and your nights cool."

Carter fields two hours of calls from across nation

When Carter did not have the answer, he either promised that the caller would hear from someone in his administration (like Leslie Pfenninger of Lanham, Md., who wanted a civil service job, or got the answer himself later in the program, as he did with the tax situation of the disabled.

Carter outlined no new policy, but he explained his views on a variety of subjects. On Cuba, he told Mike Fendrick of Brooklyn, N.Y., that while there were major obstacles to a full restoration of relations — including Cuban withdrawal of troops from Angola and freeing its own political prisoners — he wanted improvement. "I do intend to see discussions initiated with Cuba quite early," he said.

He told one early caller that he and his sons were paying the bills for Carter family members living at the White House. "We're not mooching off the American people," he insisted.

HE DEFENDED his pardon of draft-evaders, but said he would not pardon any more, but would let the Defense Department deal with deserters and veterans with less than honorable discharges. But he also said that his administration would work to see that veterans from the Vietnam War got better treatment.

On many issues, Carter had to tell the callers that his policy was not yet fixed. He pledged a reform of the income tax system, as he has ever since he started running, but said he could not commit himself on specific details yet. His plan, he told one caller, would be ready "before the end of September." One feature he did say he wanted eliminated, if possible, was a quick that makes it cheaper in tax terms for some couples to live together without being married than if they tied the knot.

HE told another caller that while he was committed to comprehensive national health insurance, "it would be very expensive," and his administration was studying the problem to find the best way of handling it. "I hope that over a period of years we can have comprehensive health care," he said.

Cronkite served as an intermediary, introducing callers and occasionally cutting them off when they ran on. He also sometimes followed up Carter's answers with a question of his own, and closed the program by asking what Carter thought of the exercise. Carter replied: "I like it. The questions that come in from people all over the country are the kind that you would never get in a press conference. That news people would never raise, like the Ottawa Indian question." That referred to an inquiry, on which he was at first stumped but later supplied the answer, about a bill to pay the tribe's claims against the government. He found out it had been passed, and he had signed it.

"I think it's very good for me to understand directly from the American people what they're concerned about. . . . My inclination would be to do this again. I've enjoyed it and I've learned a lot from it."

HIS RELAXED, cheerful manner was sustained through the program. Asked how he liked his job, he said it was fine.

"The difficulty of the job and the number of hours I put in is about the same as when I was governor of Georgia," he told Cronkite.

Some of the questions he received — over a hookup that sometimes made the questions phoned to a toll-free number hard to understand over the radio — focused on particular local issues. A Philadelphia man asked about the closing of the Frankford Arsenal, and Vice President Walter Mondale's campaign pledges to help. Carter said Mondale had raised that issue "more than any other" with him, and he was seeking a way to do something at the facility to provide jobs.

Another particular concern came from a Trinity, N.C., woman who said her father was dying of cancer. She wanted to know why he could not be treated with the controversial drug Laetrile, which is banned by the Food and Drug Administration. Carter told her he would have someone from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare call her on Monday to discuss it in detail.

Some inquiries dealt with problems Carter said he couldn't solve, like lapsed veterans' benefits or the price of coffee.

"There's no way for us to control the price of coffee that comes in from Peru or Brazil," But, he said, consumers could react by drinking "less coffee as the price goes up." He noted that he was drinking hot tea during the program.

MANY CALLERS prefaced their questions with comments about Carter's performance in office. One volunteered to go to Vietnam to help deal with MIAs and reconstruction and also invited Carter to stay at his home.

A friendly caller hailed Carter's efforts to improve "ethics and morality in government" before getting around to consumer protection. Another argued with Carter about the recent congressional pay raise, which Carter defended.

Ronald Fouse of Centreville, Ga., caught Carter off balance. He began by saying he had seen Carter drive through town, and that he worked at the air base where the President lands in Georgia, then observed tartly, "You propose to pardon the junkies and deserters." Then he asked about veterans' benefits, and Carter lamented that he had hoped for a friendlier question from Georgia.

Carter often preferred to let the statement pass and answer only the question. But when a caller accused him of violating states' rights by lobbying for the Equal Rights Amendment, Carter said he had the right of free speech, just as she did. And he defended the amendment, saying, "Women have been cheated too long."

ABOUT HALFWAY through the show, the President announced that a man from Milwaukee, Wis., had the same number as the call-in number. "He has been getting calls since about 6 o'clock this morning from people asking to talk to me. He has asked me to announce that people who want to call the White House please to make sure to use the 900 prefix before dialing the number," Carter said.

The first question came to Carter at 11:04 p.m. PST from Joseph Willman of Sterling Heights, Mich., and concerned U.S. actions during the recent mini-crisis over Uganda. The second question, from a Denver man, asked Carter if he planned to impose a 25-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, as rumored, as a conservation measure.

The President, repeating his press conference answer of last week, denied any such intention.

FENDRICK of Brooklyn weighed in with the third question, a request for Carter's views on possible easing of relations with Castro Cuba. Noting the stories about the New York Yankees possibly playing exhibition games in Cuba before the start of the baseball season, Fendrick asked about prospects for normalization of relations "in the near future."

The President, noting that there are "varying degrees of relationships with Cuba," said the Castro government would have to make "further substantial changes in their attitude." He said the Cubans must "decrease their military involvement with Africa," for one thing.

Carter went on to outline other conditions for normalizing relations. "But what about the Yankees?" persisted Fendrick. "It's a possibility, yes," replied the President.

Although the calls were being monitored to weed out abusive or long-winded questioners, it was catch-as-catch-can for the President. Two of the early callers demanded to know who was paying the expenses of his two married sons Chip and Jeff, while they were living in the White House, and why Caron Carter, Chip's wife, was taken to the Bethesda (Md.) Naval Hospital to have her baby.

AT THIS point, Chip, who was watching the call-in show on closed circuit television in the White House Press Room, gave a shout of laughter and raised his fist in a victory salute.

Cronkite asked the President if some thought was being given to a bonus for Vietnam veterans. "No, sir," replied Carter.

It was precisely 11 a.m. PST when the special "Ask President Carter" switchboard opened for calls in Room 431 of the Executive Office Building. The first half-dozen calls came from all sections of the country — Brooklyn, San Bernardino, Denver, New Carrollton, Md., Sterling Heights, Mich., and Fort Worth, Tex.

Callers gave their names and home addresses to the 20 "incoming" operators, who then turned them over to the 12 "verification" operators for checking.

There were no bells on any of the phones in Room 431 — "we'd go nuts with the ringing," one operator said — but the volume of the incoming calls could be gauged by the constant winking red lights on all the telephone consoles.

THE OPERATORS were instructed to ask how the caller wanted to be identified — if a woman, as Mrs. Miss, or Ms., and if married, by her own or her husband's name — and to obtain a pronunciation guide for Cronkite and the President.

Once a call was logged and verified, two typists at another desk typed out the names and hometowns of the lucky callers on white 4-by-4 cards in extra-large block type. These cards were placed in front of a camera, which flashed the name and hometown to the monitor in front of the show's producer, Emerson Stone, as well as to the monitor in the Oval Office, where Carter and Cronkite were sitting.

The President, wearing a blue suit, pale blue shirt and red and white polka dot tie, sat in a yellow, high-backed chair near an ornate fireplace. Cronkite sat across from him in a similar chair.

It's worth the drive

Alaskan oil terminal would make L.B. 'well' again

The city, then, will recover most of the Sohio development costs regardless of whether the terminal is built.

But the costs are rising rapidly.

For example, Sohio agreed to pay 57 percent of the costs incurred by the city for preparation of environmental reports—not to exceed $855,000. Initially the 57 percent agreed to was $340,000.

Similarly, on the remainder of the promoting, planning and pushing, Sohio initially agreed to pay $2.7 million of the costs incurred. Now the agreement is to pay $5.4 million of the costs.

Meanwhile, the State Lands Commission is attempting to set a rate for "rent" should Sohio be forced to use Northern California sites—such as Estero Bay or Avila Beach—to bring the Alaskan crude to California.

The "rent" would be based on the amount of oil pumped into the state, across state-owned land from buoys anchored on state-owned tidelands. Further charges could come as the pipeline hops across state lands, inland. All will be computed. State Lands officials say, and be included in a throughput charge for each barrel of oil pumped into the state. Warren Abbot, a former State Lands Commission counsel, explains the charges previously were based on the length and diameter of the pipeline.

"THE CURRENT commission," he says, "adopted a throughput charge which is now being challenged. But they could charge both if they wanted to."

Says Les Grimes, assistant manager of operations for the lands commission, "We won't charge more than two cents a barrel."

But with an anticipated 1.2 million barrels coming from Alaska every day, beginning next year, the amount is substantial.

Meanwhile, a high government official said he had been "told" the throughput charge would be $1 a barrel. Sohio officials say they haven't been told a figure yet.

On this potential boon to California taxpayers ride Jerry Brown's hopes for a job better than governor, say many Sohio watchers. If the state gets the money, he'll be one of only a few governors who won't have to raise taxes.

Therefore, say the observers, the roadblocks to the Long Beach project, thrown up by state agencies such as the Air Resources Board. The board is headed by Tom Quinn, Brown's former campaign manager, who has voiced strong opposition to the establishment of Sohio's terminal at Long Beach.

MEANWHILE, Sohio, thinking money, has said it prefers Long Beach as the West Coast terminal for Alaskan oil. Reasons are many, but key is the fact that fewer miles of expensive pipeline will have to be built to bring surplus oil to Midland, Tex., refineries.

Another reason voiced by Sohio officials is that the chances of pollution problems are less at Long Beach. An oil spill, one official said, offshore from Avila Beach would be "almost impossible" to contain and the costs would be impossible to determine.

A third, they say, is that Long Beach is an experienced oil port, handling some 300,000 barrels of oil a day now. Sohio's initial shipment would triple the port's intake of crude.

Sohio and Long Beach both are straining to sign a lease agreement, but before the agreement—which already has been drawn up—can be signed, Long Beach Harbor Assistant General Manager James McJunkin says all EIRs must be completed. And that's one big hangup.

Cost of constructing the terminal alone, the port official says, is estimated at $61 million. A decision has not yet been made, whether to float a bond issue for the entire amount or use "some cash" the port already has, which it can use.

The Long Beach-to-Midland, Tex., pipeline to deliver the oil to the Midwest and Gulf states will cost at least another $450 million, but Long Beach money won't be involved in that project.

McJunkin claims that "as agreed" between the port and the oil firm, the $9.8 million to be charged to Sohio is based on a per-ton charge and will be a rental payment, not a tax.

Meanwhile, as EIRs are completed and the light continues as to where to put the terminal—Long Beach, Avila Beach, Estero Bay or in Canada—Long Beach officials appear to be sure they will get the oil, the terminal and the money.

AND THEY'RE spending as though they had the signed lease in their hands.

Although harbor officials continue to lobby in Washington for the project—bankrolled by Sohio—funds are being spent in the port to make ready for the terminal.

Pier J—proposed site of the terminal—will be strengthened on the basis of a draft of the Environmental Impact Report which indicated that in the event of a major earthquake the entire area would "liquefy." Liquefaction, according to the port official, is when the compacted earth becomes so loose it moves—like jelly. The six giant oil tanks, which are planned for the site, would burst, tip or collapse—or all three.

"The bearing quality of the area is excellent," McJunkin says. "We have no foundation problems—only in case of an earthquake would we have problems—and then we'd get liquefaction."

"The report indicated that there was insufficient compaction to combat liquefaction—but further compaction would eliminate the problem," McJunkin says.

ALTHOUGH the Pier J work goes on and Long Beach continues to spend money and send officials on lobbying trips across the country, the whole project is stalled—hanging on the outcome of the environmental reports.

And, once the oil starts coming through it can't stop.

If it comes to a halt, it freezes and there's no way to heat it back to flow—consistency without dismantling the pipeline—all 800 miles of it.

GOOD FOR DAYS SHOWN

More federal millions for jobless pouring into L.B.

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

The City of Long Beach, which only three months ago had feared a drastic cutback in federal manpower funding, instead will find itself on the receiving end of a $2.5-million federal employment grant this week.

What's more, say city officials, the prospects are excellent that the city will get another $1.3 million within the next three weeks.

The new federal funding means that the city will add another 350 public service jobs to the 300 that are already being subsidized under the government's Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, known as CETA. (The jobs are distributed between the city and approximately 30 nonprofit agencies.)

The latest funding is part of a larger disbursement that is going to cities throughout the country. It reflects a stepped-up commitment on the part of the Carter Administration to reduce the nation's unemployment by increasing the number of public service jobs under the CETA program.

But even as the new federal funds are being received in Long Beach, city officials are hurriedly going over their CETA blueprints with a view to reducing the city's dependency on the program and transforming it from a relatively long-term employment project (which it has become) to a short-term training program (which it was meant to be).

The transformation is expected to bring about a dramatic change in the makeup of the program.

During the past three years, CETA has become largely a shelter for the city's better-qualified unemployed — that is, those with skills and education. It was from that group — the aristocracy of the jobless — that the city drew a large number of recruits.

But all that is expected to change under City Manager John Dever's prodigious, along with the federal government's new and stricter eligibility requirements, which will demand longer periods of joblessness to qualify for the program.

City officials acknowledge that, instead of the upper- and middle-level unemployed, the program from now on will attract more of the hard-core jobless — those who have not only been unemployed for long periods of time but who also fit the popular notion of being poor.

Moreover, the likelihood is that many who have been in the program for two, three or even four years will soon find themselves in new situations. If they're not absorbed into the regular city work force — as some are expected to be — they'll be given a crack at some of the new training positions that will open up.

Barring those two possibilities, the city will try to help them find jobs outside of city government, says Art Chapman, the city's director of human resources.

How many will end up unemployed can't be predicted. But unless the city's jobless rate takes a sharp turn downward, the probabilities are that a percentage of the CETA "veterans" will find themselves in the ranks of the jobless again.

One thing seems evident: By July, when the new fiscal year has started, the city will have supplanted the "old" CETA with the "new."

During the waning days of the Ford Administration, federal officials gave every indication of cutting the manpower program and Long Beach city officials reacted with understandable concern.

Of the about 200 CETA employees working for the city, 131 stood to lose their jobs as a result of the Ford Administration's projected cutback.

More than that, though, the city stood to lose the work that was being performed by the 131, who were helping to provide some important services in the city.

It was apparent that, over a period of time, the city — and the CETA workers themselves — had become dependent on the program.

When it was learned, for example, that the 131 CETA workers might have to be let go, former Acting City Manager Robert Creighton warned the City Council that if it didn't want to reduce the level of services in the city, it would have to pick up the cost of the 131 jobs.

'Short-term' project just keeps on growing

It was hardly a cheerful prospect for a municipality that already was mired in financial difficulties.

But the fact was the city had enlarged some of its programs and added some new ones, largely because CETA money had been available, said Creighton. And it would be difficult to drop the services now that many citizens had become dependent on them.

The expansion of services was especially evident in the fields of planning and community development, and in areas where social services were involved, he said.

But all that was during the final months of the Ford Administration. This is the Carter era and the situation appears to have changed overnight.

Where, three or four months ago, the manpower revenue-sharing stream seemed ready to dry up, today it is flowing with renewed vigor — a reflection (in part, at least) of the new administration's "economic stimulus package."

U.S. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall signaled the Carter Administration's intentions last month, when he told the House Ways and Means Committee the government would boost the number of federally funded public service jobs under CETA from 310,000 to 600,000 by the middle of 1978.

An additional 725,000 jobs would be created the following year, he added.

As a consequence of the administration's latest actions, Long Beach, like a lot of other cities, now finds itself in a race against time, trying frantically to gear up for an enlarged and renewed CETA program that, only a few months earlier, almost seemed ready for burial.

The burden of planning has fallen on the city's director of manpower affairs, Taufiq Rushdy.

Rushdy is developing a two-pronged program. One part will encompass a number of short-term projects that will enable the city to hire the unemployed for up to six months at a time. The other will place individual CETA people in training slots throughout city government.

Among the short-term projects that Rushdy is considering are a graffiti-removal project and a plan for cleaning up the city's alleys.

Rushdy says the training positions will enable the newly hired CETA workers to pick up new skills — or sharpen old ones — while working for the city for anywhere from six months to a year. The skills will range from carpentry to bookkeeping.

One thing the city will take pains to avoid under the revamped program, however, is the practice of keeping CETA people on the work force for more than a year.

According to city officials, CETA was originally designed for relatively short-term employment. City governments — and the agencies they contracted with — were supposed to be way-stations to permanent employment for the jobless.

The cities and the agencies, in fact, were encouraged by the government to absorb many of their CETA employees into their regular work forces. But they were not supposed to keep them on from year to year under CETA funding — although most cities did.

(According to Rushdy, 50 to 60 per cent of the CETA employees in Long Beach found their way onto permanent payrolls.)

"The idea was to train people," says City Manager John Dever, "not lead to a dead end."

The new manager feels that revenue-sharing programs can seldom be counted on for any sort of permanency. And in the case of CETA, he foresees the funds drying up some day and the people in the program left hanging.

In Dever's view, the city has become the employer of last resort, and, he said, "It shouldn't be. It should be funneling people into permanent jobs."

One of Dever's priorities is to convince the city school systems, including the community college system, to assume a greatly expanded role in the new CETA program. To that end, he plans to meet with Long Beach City College President Frank Pearce this week.

City officials generally agree that once a CETA employee stays on the work force for more than a year or two, he begins to feel that "the job is owed to him," as Roger Keast, head of the city's Civil Service Department, says.

Moreover, says Keast, it's not uncommon for department officials to begin to feel the same sort of permanency about the relationship.

In that sense, the city may have encouraged many long-term CETA employees to think that their jobs were semi-permanent, if not actually permanent.

A number of CETA people, for example, came to work for the city four and five years ago under President Nixon's Public Employment Program, which was known as the PEP program.

Although the program was phased out, CETA took its place in 1974, and the same people were carried by the city under the new program.

That was especially true of a number of PEP policemen and firemen, who had hoped, eventually, to work their way into the permanent work force through civil service.

Others came on board when CETA was inaugurated — among them administrative analysts, civil service examiners, community relations representatives, planning department personnel, rehabilitation counselors and community analysts.

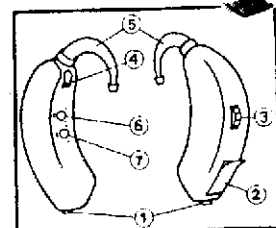

At this point, because the situation is in such a state of flux, their prospects are uncertain — although it seems fair to say that some of them will be absorbed into the permanent work force within the next two or three months. The rest will see their work lives disrupted to one degree or another, with some getting other jobs and the rest losing out altogether.

According to budget director James Phelps, city officials will better understand the situation in a week or two, when they will have completed a number of budget-planning sessions.

Trial bares tragic child abuse circle

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Thomas Kent Albrecht is charged with second-degree murder in the beating death of a 3-year-old girl he was babysitting. Psychiatrists at his trial call him "the classic picture of a battered child."

Tommy Albrecht is 13. He's charged with killing young Staci Chubin last Oct. 29.

Tommy's story began even before he was born. A psychiatrist testified Friday as the end of the trial approached.

TOMMY'S father was a man of uncontrollable rage, the doctor said, who constantly threatened his pregnant wife. After birth, Tommy cried all the time. That drove his father into frenzies.

"Beating Tommy was his answer to everything," the youngster's mother, Jean, testified. "He was always throwing things — a hammer or a rocking chair — at Tommy, if not Tommy himself."

As he grew older, Tommy "acted the same way as his father," she said. He often beat up his sister and would throw his tricycle when told to come inside. Once, he deliberately pedaled his tricycle over a neighbor girl's kitten, killing it.

When he was 4 years old, Mrs. Albrecht took Tommy to a psychiatric center, but the father refused to go along. Finally, she left her husband and filed for divorce in 1970. Tommy's counseling ended.

SHE SAID Tommy appeared to be mastering his temper, and "reached the point where I had to start trusting him. I couldn't hold his past record against him every time he wanted to do something."

Unknown to her, however, Tommy was still having problems. She said school officials never fully explained that he was involved in disturbances on the school bus and in the classroom.

Tommy did well on his first babysitting job, she said, so she reluctantly allowed him to work for July Chubin last October. Tommy was left alone overnight with Staci and a 6-year-old sister, Allison.

But the next morning, Mrs. Chubin's estranged husband, Steve, arrived. There apparently was friction between him and Tommy because Chubin did not like boys babysitting for his daughters, the psychiatrist testified.

ONE DOCTOR said the situation triggered a sudden, involuntary impairment of Tommy's mental faculties. Tommy said that after Chubin left, he kicked the crying Staci in the stomach. The baby fell backward over a small piece of furniture, cracking her head on the floor. Tommy then kicked her a second time in the abdomen and hit her at least once before placing her in bed.

When Mrs. Chubin returned home, she found her daughter unconscious. The child died the next day at a hospital.

Three psychiatrists testified that Tommy did not know that what he was doing could seriously injure Staci, although he generally is able to distinguish right from wrong.

More federal millions for jobless pouring into L.B.

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

The City of Long Beach, which only three months ago had feared a drastic cutback in federal manpower funding, instead will find itself on the receiving end of a $2.5-million federal employment grant this week.

What's more, say city officials, the prospects are excellent that the city will get another $1.3 million within the next three weeks.

The new federal funding means that the city will add another 350 public service jobs to the 300 that are already being subsidized under the government's Comprehensive Employment and Training Act, known as CETA. The jobs are distributed between the city and approximately 30 nonprofit agencies.

The latest funding is part of a larger disbursement that is going to cities throughout the country. It reflects a stepped-up commitment on the part of the Carter Administration to reduce the nation's unemployment by increasing the number of public service jobs under the CETA program.

But even as the new federal funds are being received in Long Beach, city officials are hurriedly going over their CETA blueprints with a view to reducing the city's dependency on the program and transforming it from a relatively long-term employment project (which it has become) to a short-term training program (which it was meant to be).

The transformation is expected to bring about a dramatic change in the makeup of the program.

During the past three years, CETA has become largely a shelter for the city's better-qualified unemployed — that is, those with skills and education. It was from that group — the aristocracy of the jobless — that the city drew a large number of recruits.

But all that is expected to change under City Manager John Dever's prodding, along with the federal government's new and stricter eligibility requirements, which will demand longer periods of joblessness to qualify for the program.

City officials acknowledge that, instead of the upper- and middle-level unemployed, the program from now on will attract more of the hard-core jobless — those who have not only been unemployed for long periods of time but who also fit the popular notion of being poor.

Moreover, the likelihood is that many who have been in the program for two, three or even four years will soon find themselves in new situations. If they're not absorbed into the regular city work force — as some are expected to be — they'll be given a crack at some of the new training positions that will open up.

Barring those two possibilities, the city will try to help them find jobs outside of city government, says Art Chapman, the city's director of human resources.

How many will end up unemployed can't be predicted. But unless the city's jobless rate takes a sharp turn downward, the probabilities are that a percentage of the CETA "veterans" will find themselves in the ranks of the jobless again.

One thing seems evident: By July, when the new fiscal year has started, the city will have supplanted the "old" CETA with the "new."

During the waning days of the Ford Administration, federal officials gave every indication of cutting the manpower program and Long Beach city officials reacted with understandable concern.

Of the about 200 CETA employees working for the city, 131 stood to lose their jobs as a result of the Ford Administration's projected cutback.

More than that, though, the city stood to lose the work that was being performed by the 131, who were helping to provide some important services in the city.

It was apparent that, over a period of time, the city — and the CETA workers themselves — had become dependent on the program.

When it was learned, for example, that the 131 CETA workers might have to be let go, former Acting City Manager Robert Creighton warned the City Council that if it didn't want to reduce the level of services in the city, it would have to pick up the cost of the 131 jobs.

'Short-term' project just keeps on growing

It was hardly a cheerful prospect for a municipality that already was mired in financial difficulties.

But the fact was the city had enlarged some of its programs and added some new ones, largely because CETA money had been available, said Creighton. And it would be difficult to drop the services now that many citizens had become dependent on them.

The expansion of services was especially evident in the fields of planning and community development, and in areas where social services were involved, he said.

But all that was during the final months of the Ford Administration. This is the Carter era and the situation appears to have changed overnight.

Where, three or four months ago, the manpower revenue-sharing stream seemed ready to dry up, today it is flowing with renewed vigor — a reflection (in part, at least) of the new administration's economic stimulus package.

U.S. Labor Secretary Ray Marshall signaled the Carter Administration's intentions last month, when he told the House Ways and Means Committee the government would boost the number of federally funded public service jobs under CETA from 310,000 to 600,000 by the middle of 1978.

An additional 725,000 jobs would be created the following year, he added.

As a consequence of the administration's latest actions, Long Beach, like a lot of other cities, now finds itself in a race against time, trying frantically to gear up for an enlarged and renewed CETA program that, only a few months earlier, almost seemed ready for burial.

The burden of planning has fallen on the city's director of manpower affairs, Taufiq Rushdy.

Rushdy is developing a two-pronged program. One part will encompass a number of short-term projects that will enable the city to hire the unemployed for up to six months at a time. The other will place individual CETA people in training slots throughout city government.

Among the short-term projects that Rushdy is considering are a graffiti-abatement project and a plan for cleaning up the city's alleys.

Rushdy says the training positions will enable the newly hired CETA workers to pick up new skills — or sharpen old ones — while working for the city for anywhere from six months to a year. The skills will range from carpentry to bookkeeping.

One thing the city will take pains to avoid under the revamped program, however, is the practice of keeping CETA people on the work force for more than a year.

According to city officials, CETA was originally designed for relatively short-term employment. City governments — and the agencies they contracted with — were supposed to be way-stations to permanent employment for the jobless.

The cities and the agencies, in fact, were encouraged by the government to absorb many of their CETA employees into their regular work forces. But they were not supposed to keep them on from year to year under CETA funding — although most cities did.

(According to Rushdy, 50 to 60 per cent of the CETA employees in Long Beach found their way onto permanent payrolls.)

"The idea was to train people," says City Manager John Dever, "not lead to a dead end."

The new manager feels that revenue-sharing programs can seldom be counted on for any sort of permanency. And in the case of CETA, he foresees the funds drying up some day and the people in the program left hanging.

In Dever's view, the city has become the employer of last resort, and he said, "It shouldn't be. It should be funneling people into permanent jobs."

school systems, including the community college system, to assume a greatly expanded role in the new CETA program. To that end, he plans to meet with Long Beach City College President Frank Pearce this week.

City officials generally agree that once a CETA employee stays on the work force for more than a year or two, he begins to feel that "the job is owed to him," as Roger Keast, head of the city's Civil Service Department, says. Moreover, says Keast, it's not uncommon for department officials to begin to feel the same sort of permanency about the relationship.

In that sense, the city may have encouraged many long-term CETA employees to think that their jobs were semi-permanent, if not actually permanent.

A number of CETA people, for example, came to work for the city four and five years ago under President Nixon's Public Employment Program, which was known as the PEP program.

Although the program was phased out, CETA took its place in 1974, and the same people were carried by the city under the new program.

That was especially true of a number of PEP policemen and firemen, who had hoped, eventually, to work their way into the permanent work force through civil service. Others came on board when CETA was inaugurated — among them administrative analysts, civil service examiners, community relations representatives, planning department personnel, rehabilitation counselors and community analysts.

At this point, because the situation is in such a state of flux, their prospects are uncertain — although it seems fair to say that some of them will be absorbed into the permanent work force within the next two or three months. The rest will see their work lives disrupted, to one degree or another, with some getting other jobs and the rest losing out altogether.

According to budget director James Phelps, city officials will better understand the situation in a week or two, when they will have completed a number of budget-planning sessions.

Carter sifts cuts in U.S. bases abroad

By ARTHUR L. GAYSHON
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's administration is pondering new cuts or closures in America's already contracting network of military bases and installations around the world.

A study of global foreign and strategic policies is under way to determine how the nation's defense priorities can best be achieved and its vital interests preserved.

U.S. officials, offering an overview of factors affecting the future of U.S. bases, installations and military activities abroad, stressed:

—Strategic interests keep shifting. The value of the Philippines bases was greater, for instance, when China seemed a threat and the Vietnam war was on.

—New weapons systems are outdating static defenses. A single missile shot could more effectively repel a would-be attacker than the 10,000-strong garrison guarding the Panama Canal.

—Political conditions rarely stand still. It would seem inconsistent for Carter to argue that morality should be a factor in foreign affairs and yet keep U.S. forces in a land where human rights have been suppressed.

—Costs of keeping foreign bases have soared into the billion dollar bracket, often binding future administrations to deals they may dislike.

—Bases often breed inertia in an age when air and sea mobility can more effectively demonstrate a nation's power to influence events.

A Pentagon official recalled: "In 1961, before the cold war had subsided, there were 452 significant U.S. military installations around the world. Now there are about 320 in about 30 countries, with roughly 180 in West Germany alone."

Barring unforeseen crises, the official added, Carter, in line with his campaign promise to economize, is expected to continue these cutbacks.

Another Angola-style venture by Russia and Cuba could, however, thwart that. On the other hand, successful completion and loyal observance of a new American-Soviet pact to limit strategic weapons (SALT II) plus beginnings of real disarmament, could in time spur the dismantlement of the worldwide network of bases and installations.

The process of reappraisal was, to some extent, forced on Carter by problems inherited from the era of former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

THESE difficulties span oceans and continents.

In Europe, Greece, Turkey, Spain and Portugal are involved.

In Asia, the Philippines and Taiwan present dilemmas.

Key states of the Caribbean, which took over commitments negotiated by their former British rulers, are expected this year to bargain for better terms.

The littoral states of the Indian Ocean still are pressing the Americans and Russians alike to keep their rivalries outside the region.

Only last month the administration began its first full-scale negotiations for a new treaty to regulate the use and management of the Panama Canal.

South Africa, a flash point in the black-white power struggle, presents a special problem if Carter intends to practice the morality he preaches. U.S. Air Force planes have staging rights there, and an American tracking station is operating not far from Johannesburg. Can Carter keep cooperating with South Africa while urging its reluctant white rulers to liberalize?

THE PROCESS of military reassessment also has origins in the President's devotion to the cause of cost-effectiveness. He promised in his campaign to work for a $5-billion cut in defense spending.

This suggests savings must come chiefly from consolidating, realigning, reducing, rationalizing or shutting down certain military activities, or installations, at home and abroad.

Accordingly, some troop withdrawals and some phasedown of activities should, after due inter-allied consultation, surprise nobody in South Korea or in Panama, to name just two examples.

Some of the recommendations expected from State Department, Pentagon, National Security Council and other reviewers will demand swift decisions from the administration.

Others, with a treaty or money content, will need the approval of Congress.

Quite a few of the situations interact — as in the case of Greece and Turkey still feuding over, among other things, Turkey's occupation of much of the eastern Mediterranean island of Cyprus.

JUST ABOUT all the problems facing Carter pack a load of political or military controversy in one form or another.

Take the case of Diego Garcia, the biggest coral atoll in the Chagos Islands archipelago in the Indian Ocean, 1,000 miles south of the subcontinent. That has become the setting for what the Pentagon calls a "naval communications station," but India and other littoral states say it is emerging as a full-size nuclear submarine and naval base. More than 1,000 islanders were evicted from this British possession and resettled in Mauritius — some claim against their will — to make way for the shared U.S.-British defense establishment.

Up until this year, about $175 million had been spent to lengthen an airplane runway from 8,000 to 12,000 feet, set up fuel storage depots, build barracks for stationed personnel and a pier for cargo handling and for in-harbor dredging and wages for service and construction men.

JAMES H. Noyes, former deputy assistant secretary of defense who gave this estimate, said that the Diego Garcia development could "sustain the normal carrier task group in a contingency situation for about 330 days in the absence of any external sources of supply." Noyes added that half the world's seaborne oil is in transit along Indian Ocean sea lanes at any given moment, meaning in times of conflict that the Soviet Red navy would be able — unless challenged — to throttle the non-Communist world.

In return for granting the Americans base rights on Diego Garcia, the British received a discount on the cost of some Polaris missiles they bought from this country.

U.S. officials of several departments gave this rundown of the most troublesome of the foreign base problems facing the Carter administration:

—Congress has approved a five-year treaty which Kissinger negotiated with Spain covering air and naval base rights, economic aid and other forms of cooperation. But Spain, moving toward democracy in the aftermath of the dictatorial regime of the late Generalissimo Francisco Franco, is a land still torn between leftist and rightist forces. Spanish socialists, who can count on Communist support, called last December for the scrapping of the base treaty. The pact provides, among other things, for a $1.2 billion program of military and economic grants and credits, much of which will be repayable.

48—Congress has yet to act upon another Kissinger military-economic deal, with Turkey, worth $1.3 billion over five years. But it has been the position of Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance to defer action on the agreement with Turkey pending some progress toward a Cyprus settlement. So that projected Kissinger accord remains in limbo. During the hiatus, no U.S. arms can be supplied to Turkey. In til-til style, the Turks have immobilized all major U.S. air bases on their territory.

—To balance his arrangement with Turkey, Kissinger offered Greece a four-year defense cooperation pact, spiced with economic aid and worth nearly $1 billion. But Prime Minister Constantine Carmanlis, who still suspects that Washington backed Turkey's invasion of Cyprus, has not yet bitten. Perhaps he wants to see first what Congress does with the Turkish deal. Perhaps he hopes for a better offer from Carter. At all events, he has deprived the U.S. Air Force and Navy of their longstanding base facilities in Greece. And he has led his country out of the military system of the North Atlantic (NATO) Alliance, weakening NATO's eastern flank.

—Kissinger also bequeathed a vacuum-like situation to the Carter administration over America's prized base facilities in Portugal's Azores Islands. Formally U.S. treaty rights expired in 1974. But the two governments agreed to keep the arrangements tenuously alive by engaging in renewal talks every six months or so. Presumably because of Portugal's unstable politics, Lisbon's socialist-led government has filibustered until now. But the word is that soon it will be ready to discuss new terms. These may include a condition that U.S. planes do not, as they did in the 1973 Mideast war, use the Azores as a staging-point for airlifting arms to Israel. Additionally, officials here have no doubt that Portugal will seek more money for the use of its facilities.

Yet the outlook in Europe for the Americans is not all bleak.

West Germany, where about 300,000 U.S. land and air personnel are based, remains a region of stability.

ICELAND in mid-Atlantic, after settling its cod war with Britain, no longer is threatening a shut-down of the valuable U.S. naval station complex. From Icelandic fields U.S. planes and electronic eavesdroppers are able to monitor the movement of Soviet vessels into the North Atlantic.

Byrd to support Warnke nomination 'reluctantly'

MARTIN TOLCHIN
New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd Thursday said that he had reluctantly decided to support the nomination of Paul Warnke as chief U.S. arms control negotiator, but said that he would not use his leadership position to seek to persuade other senators.

"I'm not voting for Mr. Warnke. I'm voting for the President of the United States and the United States Senate," the West Virginia Democrat told a group of newsmen. "The President is the ultimate negotiator, and I have confidence in the practical toughness and judgment of President Carter in dealing with the Soviets in this field," Byrd said.

Byrd said there had been "some slippage" in Senate support for Warnke's nomination as chief negotiator in the strategic arms limitation talks, and acknowledged that "my natural inclination is to vote against him."

The senator nonetheless predicted Senate approval Wednesday, with Warnke receiving between 53 and 65 votes. Warnke's other nomination, as head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, which Byrd also supports, is considered assured.

Byrd said that Carter's strong statements on human rights had been "very definitely a factor" in the senator's decision to support Warnke for the disarmament post.

"The leader of a society who speaks out with firmness on human rights is also a leader prepared to deal just as realistically and pragmatically with the Soviets on arms control limitations," Byrd said.

Conversely, he added, "Any nation that does not have a basic commitment to human rights cannot be trusted to keep its word in respect to an arms control agreement."

The senator said that he had informed Carter of his position Friday night. The senator, asked if his support was based on his being a team player, replied, "No it was not."

"The issue carries with it convictions and emotions that run so deep that I do not view it in any partisan spirit as a teamwork enterprise," Byrd added.

"I don't consider it a leadership role that I should play in this instance," he added.

Byrd said that he believed that the Soviet Union "should get a message out of the debate on this nomination."

"They must surely see deep reservations," the senator said. "There's a feeling that the Russians have cheated on SALT I, as they have on previous agreements, and on the Helsinki accords. We have a deep hunger and desire (for disarmament) but equally deep suspicion and fear."

The senator added that in "any treaty that results from these talks, there's not going to be any hesitancy on my part to vote against the treaty."

"One of the most tragic things that could happen is that the Senate of the United States could reject an arms control agreement," Byrd said. "But it would be even more tragic if the Senate ratified an agreement that legitimized and relegated the United States to a position of inferiority rather than equality and equivalency in the area of strategic weapons."

"A burned child dreads the fire," he added.

On another issue, Byrd said that he believed that prospects for repeal of the Byrd Amendment, banning importation of Rhodesian chrome, were "better now than in the past."

The amendment is named for its sponsor, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, independent of Virginia. The majority leader said, however, that he would continue to support the Byrd amendment, but, as in the case of the Warnke nomination he would not seek to persuade others.

MARTIN TOLCHIN

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd Saturday said that he had reluctantly decided to support the nomination of Paul Warnke as chief U.S. disarmament negotiator, but said that he would not use his leadership position to seek to persuade other senators.

"I'm not voting for Mr. Warnke. I'm voting for the President of the United States and the United States Senate," the West Virginia Democrat told a group of newsmen. "The President is the ultimate negotiator, and I have confidence in the practical toughness and judgment of President Carter in dealing with the Soviets in this field," Byrd said.

Byrd said there had been "some slippage" in Senate support for Warnke's nomination as chief negotiator in the strategic arms limitation talks, and acknowledged that "my natural inclination is to vote against him."

The senator nonetheless predicted Senate approval Wednesday, with Warnke receiving between 53 and 65 votes. Warnke's other nomination, as head of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, which Byrd also supports, is considered assured.

Byrd said that Carter's strong-statements on human rights had been "very definitely a factor" in the senator's decision to support Warnke for the disarmament post.

"The leader of a society who speaks out with firmness on human rights is also a leader prepared to deal just as realistically and pragmatically with the Soviets on arms control limitations," Byrd said.

Conversely, he added, "Any nation that does not have a basic commitment to human rights cannot be trusted to keep its word in respect to an arms control agreement."

The senator said that he had informed Carter of his position Friday night. The senator, asked if his support was based on his being a team player, replied, "No it was not."

"The issue carries with it convictions and emotions that run so deep that I do not view it in any partisan spirit as a teamwork enterprise," Byrd added.

"I don't consider it a leadership role that I should play in this instance," he added.

Byrd said that he believed that the Soviet Union "should get a message out of the debate on this nomination."

"They must surely see deep reservations," the senator said. "There's a feeling that the Russians have cheated on SALT I, as

The senator added that in "any treaty that results from these talks, there's not going to be any hesitancy on my part to vote against the treaty."

"One of the most tragic things that could happen is that the Senate of the United States could reject an arms control agreement," Byrd said. "But it would be even more tragic if the Senate ratified an agreement that legitimized and relegated the United States to a

"A burned child dreads the fire," he added.

On another issue, Byrd said that he believed that prospects for repeal of the Byrd Amendment, banning importation of Rhodesian chrome, were "better now than in the past." The amendment is named for its sponsor, Sen. Harry F. Byrd, independent of Virginia. The majority leader said, however, that he would continue to support the Byrd amendment, but, as in the case of the Warnke nomination, he would not seek to persuade others.

Against Racial Bias

UC discrimination case focuses on affirmative action

By GLEN ELSASSER
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — The anxious mother who dreamed of "my daughter the doctor" spotted William O. Douglas in the dinner crowd and pushed her way to his table.

Leaning back in his chair, the Supreme Court justice listened patiently to the mother's complaint — her daughter had not been accepted in medical school. She was a Phi Beta Kappa at a small Pennsylvania college, a campus leader and a top scorer in her medical aptitude test.

Why, the mother asked, should she have to wait while less qualified people in racial minorities were already accepted? Douglas assured the mother that her daughter would make it — the American system was built on merit, not privilege or special treatment.

Only a few weeks before, Douglas had condemned reverse discrimination in an opinion that has provided ammunition for another confrontation this year over the issue.

"There is no constitutional right for any race to be preferred," Douglas said in the 1974 case from the University of Washington. Most of his fellow justices said no grounds for the case existed since Marco DeFunis had been admitted to law school and, in fact, was near graduation.

The opinion of Douglas, now retired, in the DeFunis case is at the heart of a University of California discrimination case now before the high court. Alan Bakke, a white, sued the university and won after he was rejected twice for medical school in favor of less qualified minority applicants.

If the Burger court adopts Douglas' view as the law of the land in Bakke's case, the reverberations could be as widespread as the historic school desegregation decision of 1954.

The immediate impact would be on pro-minority admissions policies, which sprang from civil rights legislation of the 1960s and sought to break the cycle of inequality caused by segregation. The University of California defends its policy of reserving 16 places in the freshman medical class of 100 for minorities as a way to end "the effects of centuries of prejudice and suppression."

The deans of California's state law schools predict that a decision invalidating minority programs would leave professional schools "free to discriminate in favor of 'disadvantaged' applicants, without regard to race."

As a result, they said in a court statement, "disadvantaged white and Asian applicants would tend to overwhelm black and Chicano applicants," two groups now "grossly underrepresented" in the professions.

A Supreme Court decision striking down the California admissions policy also could provoke future legal attacks on affirmative action programs. Prompted by the civil rights laws of the 1960s, these programs require that employers, universities and schools receiving

New Korean probe focus

Shifts from bribery to tax fraud

By ANTHONY MARRO
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — Justice Department investigators, encountering difficulties in their attempts to obtain solid evidence of bribery in their probe of alleged influence-buying by the South Korean government, have begun concentrating on possible tax violations by congressmen, a number of government sources said Saturday.

The investigators have obtained additional help from the department's tax division in recent weeks, the sources said, and now see this as the best hope of obtaining at least a few indictments in a case that has been hampered by missing witnesses, a lack of records and evidence that may not be usable in court because it was obtained illegally by intelligence agencies.

Although the investigators were known to have been working all along to make some tax cases, the sources said that the action of recent weeks represents a significant shift in the focus of the investigation, because it means the investigators are pessimistic about being able to obtain indictments on bribery, conspiracy and extortion charges, and now are concentrating more of their energies on possible tax violations.

"I THINK it will pick up now," one Justice Department source said Saturday. "I think the investigation will get back on track."

The sources said that bribery cases are particularly difficult to make, since they involve questions of criminal intent. Tax violations are sometimes easier to prove, they said, because it is necessary to show only that a person received a gift and intentionally failed to report it as income and not that he had a criminal motive in accepting it.

They also noted that bribery and extortion cases often require cooperation of persons directly involved in the transactions, while in this case, the persons believed to be giving the government its most valuable information have only second-hand knowledge of the alleged payments.

The investigation, which began last spring and developed into a major investigation last summer, centers on allegations that the South Korean government, using the resources of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, attempted to create a favorable climate towards Korea in the Congress by dispensing gifts, favors and cash-filled envelopes to a large number of politicians and government officials.

MUCH OF the investigation has centered on the activities of Park Tong Sun, a Korean-born graduate of Georgetown University who was well-known here as a wealthy businessman, party-giver, friend of important persons, and advocate of strong United States support of the government of South Korean President Park Chung Hee.

Park fled the country for England last autumn, and his absence, as well as that of other key witnesses who returned to Korea, has hampered the investigation.

"What can they do without Park?" a lawyer for one of the targets of the investigation asked recently. "He's not a citizen, so they probably can't extradite him, and without him they haven't got much of a case."

SOME Justice Department sources agree, and one said Saturday that a recent review of the information the investigators had assembled showed that while a good deal had been learned about KCIA activities here, there was very little that could be corroborated and used as evidence in court. At the time of the review, he said, he it was clear that very few indictments were likely, and that none were certain.

Justice Department sources had been saying for months that the case was a particularly difficult one, and it was not certain that indictments would result. But the new attorney general, Griffin B. Bell, nonetheless touched off a minor furor when, shortly after taking office, he suggested that he felt the case had been dragging, and that he might tell the investigators to either ask for indictments or call it to a halt.

BECAUSE Bell is a Democrat and most of the congressmen thus far linked to the South Korean lobbying effort are Democrats, a number of Republicans in the Congress dropped heavy hints that they might be prepared to charge that a "cover-up" was taking place if the investigation ended prematurely.

It was after the Republicans began voicing these concerns that Bell issued a statement Thursday, saying that all "substantial leads" were being investigated, and that he intended to prosecute wherever proof of criminal conduct was found.

The next day, Friday, he held a meeting with several of the lawyers heading the probe, issued stern warnings that they were not to discuss the investigation with any reporters, and released a one-paragraph statement saying he was "satisfied that the investigation is progressing and is being vigorously pursued in a professional manner." Department officials noted that he did not say it was being pursued with any degree of success.

EVEN IF only a handful of minor indictments result, however, the matter is not likely to go away, and large numbers of congressmen — including a number of prominent Democrats — are likely to be embarrassed, if not indicted.

This past week, the House voted $300,000 to fund an investigation into the whole range of United States-Korean relations by a subcommittee headed by Rep. Donald M. Fraser, D-Minn. It is also expected to authorize another $530,000 next week for a separate investigation by the House Ethics Committee.

Last Wednesday, The Washington Star ran a front-page story saying that because the prospect of securing significant indictments was dim, some Justice Department officials were talking about backing away, and leaving the whole matter to the congressional committees.

SEVERAL persons close to the investigation complained privately about the paper's characterization of the investigation as "faltering," saying it might scare away potential witnesses on the verge of telling their stories to the federal grand jury.

But they did confirm that consideration was being given to the possibility of gathering up information they believe is true, but can't back up with the sort of evidence needed to go into court, and handing it over to the congressional investigators.

Congressional inquires can accept hearsay and second-hand testimony for their records, and could for example, receive the testimony of Kim Sang Keun, the Korean embassy official who defected last November and who is said to know a good deal about the Korean lobbying effort but not to have been directly involved in any of the payments.

SOME supporters of the Justice Department investigation argue strenuously that even if no indictments result, the probe might be considered a success, because it has developed a great deal of valuable information about South Korean lobbying activities in this country, and their attempts to influence our foreign policy.

Battles just beginning on congressional ethics codes

By ARTHUR SIDDON
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — The congressman was standing in the Speaker's Lobby, that "members only" area just behind the House chamber.

"Is it off the record?" he asked. "Then I'll tell you the truth. It's an exercise in self-flagellation. You can't legislate morality."

Then he shrugged his shoulders.

"But you can't vote against it either," he said and walked onto the House floor, where he voted along with 401 other members to adopt a stiff code of ethics for congressmen.

SPEAKER Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass., had won. He had kept his word to have the House vote a tough set of standards in return for the $12,000 pay raise congressmen got last month.

In one stroke the House limited outside income to $8,600 a year, required congressmen to reveal their assets, eliminated office "slush funds" and put new restrictions on foreign travel.

But the grumbling has just begun. The House action was only the first act.

The Senate will vote on its own code of ethics this week — probably on Wednesday — and the overwhelming vote in the House is expected to push the Senate toward adoption of its code.

THEN SPECIAL House and Senate committees will work together to reconcile differences between the two codes and write them into law, thus making violations of the code subject to investigation and prosecution by the Justice Department.

And there is the matter of the cost-of-living pay raise congressmen and senators will get in October, unless Congress moves to give it up.

When the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries recommended congressional pay be increased from $44,600 to $57,500 a year, Commission Chairman Peter G. Peterson said it should be tied to Congress giving up its annual cost-of-living increase.

But the new House code pinches the yearly income of many congressmen, and the talk in the House cloakrooms last week was of quietly letting the cost-of-living increase take effect.

"The real question here is: Can a congressman from Peoria find happiness in Washington on $66,100 a year ($57,500 in salary and $8,600 in outside income)?" said a New York congressman.

THE MAN from Peoria, Republican Rep. Bob Michel, thinks he can. So does Rep. Edward Derwinski, R-Flossmoor, Ill.

Derwinski, ranking Republican on the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, which has jurisdiction over the cost-of-living pay raise, is the sponsor of a bill to do away with the automatic increase.

"I don't know how it could do as a bill by itself, but I intend to attach it as an amendment in committee to the first bill to which it is germane," said Derwinski.

He predicted it would pass the committee and be on the House floor sometime in April. This would force members to stand up and be counted on whether they will accept another $2,800 to $3,700 pay raise this year.

"A congressman can live on the kind of money we will now be getting," said Michel, who is the GOP whip. "I would rather have seen us go to full and complete financial disclosure rather than limiting outside income, but I think we are getting fair compensation."

REP. Morgan Murphy, D-Chicago, disagreed. He tried to get the $8,600 a year outside income limitation taken out of the code of ethics, but failed.

UC affirmative action case

A number of organizations supporting special minority admissions and affirmative action programs pleaded with the Supreme Court to ignore the California case. Among them were the National Urban League, the National Organization of Women, the United Auto Workers and Mexican-American and Puerto Rican legal defense funds.

Stephen Schlossberg, a UAW counsel, warned that an unfavorable decision could force universities to adhere strictly to "mathematical standards, grades, aptitude tests" for professional schools.

"We would not be enriching our schools with peoples of different races, sex, and ethnic backgrounds," Schlossberg said. The effect could be disastrous, he added.

Melissa Thompson, legislative coordinator for NOW, accused the University of California of "trying to sabotage affirmative action" by deliberately setting up a discriminatory minority program.

"The university wanted to force the issue and get a lawsuit and a bad precedent for affirmative action," she charged. She is still hopeful the court will find a way to dismiss the case without ruling on the issue.

Looking at the case from the perspective of a generation of progress in civil rights, Nat Jones — chief counsel for the NAACP — regards the Bakke case as another conflict over how to eliminate the vestiges of discrimination.

"In the early 1970s the problem we ran into was the shibboleth of busing," Jones said. "It generated a firestorm of hypocrisy and just plain demagoguery from the White House and people in high places — all of which went to complicate the process of desegregation."

Now, he said, "the problem has spilled over into other areas where there have been attempts to eliminate discrimination through special admissions and affirmative action programs."

Jones characterized the Bakke case as a conflict over "whether we are going to use these techniques to guarantee racial, economic and ethnic inclusiveness in our society or else move toward a dual society at a faster rate."

The NAACP official complained that the Supreme Court already has placed legal technicalities in the way of desegregation. For instance, he cited the Arlington Heights, Ill., housing case in which the court refused to grant relief unless there was evidence of intentional discrimination.

Other groups — such as the Committee on Academic Nondiscrimination and Integrity and the Mid-America Legal Foundation — view the Bakke case as an opportunity to erase the "quota system" they charge has arisen with special admissions and affirmative action programs.

John W. Finley, a New York lawyer representing these organizations, has warned the Supreme Court of the "rapidly spreading practice . . . of overt or covert quotas for members of selected racial or ethnic groups or women" in admissions and hiring.

"This situation, along with reverse discrimination in employment, has caused a great deal of racial polarization and threatens to undermine the valuable concept of affirmative action with which reverse discrimination is constantly confused," Finley said.

In an interview Finley said that the court should remove any concept of "racial preference" and possibility of reverse discrimination in affirmative action programs. The sole criterion should be merit, he added.

The committee — composed of such intellectuals and educators as Daniel Boorstin, Bruno Bettelheim, Nathan Glazer, Oscar Handlin and Sydney Hook — contends that in case after case, despite claims of nondiscrimination, people have found themselves discriminated against because of their race, ethnic background or sex.

License delays cited on PG&E's A-plant

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas & Electric officials say the federal government will not issue an operating license for the utility's Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant this year.

"We hope that ways can be found expedite these procedures," said Barton Shackelford, senior vice president, Saturday at a hearing before the House subcommittee on water and power resources here.

Shackelford said the first unit of the new power plant could be generating "significant amounts of energy" by July but doubted if the federal government would have acted on the license in time.

His remarks came at a hearing on the current western drought.

Hydroelectric generation could be down by 30 per cent over 1976, he said, because of the scarcity of water.

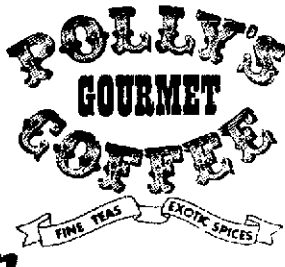

He said negotiations were being conducted with neighboring utilities on the possibility of importing energy.

A number of organizations supporting special minority admissions and affirmative action programs pleaded with the Supreme Court to ignore the California case. Among them were the National Urban League, the National Organization of Women, the United Auto Workers and Mexican-American and Puerto Rican legal defense funds.

Stephen Schlossberg, a UAW counsel, warned that an unfavorable decision could force universities to adhere strictly to "mathematical standards, grades, aptitude tests" for professional schools.

"We would not be enriching our schools with peoples of different races, sex, and ethnic backgrounds," Schlossberg said. The effect could be disastrous, he added.

Melissa Thompson, legislative coordinator for NOW, accused the University of California of "trying to sabotage affirmative action" by deliberately setting up a discriminatory minority program.

"The university wanted to force the issue and get a lawsuit and a bad precedent for affirmative action," she charged. She is still hopeful the court will find a way to dismiss the case without ruling on the issue.

Looking at the case from the perspective of a generation of progress in civil rights, Nat Jones — chief counsel for the NAACP — regards the Bakke case as another conflict over how to eliminate the vestiges of discrimination.

"In the early 1970s the problem we ran into was the shibboleth of busing," Jones said. "It generated a firestorm of hypocrisy and just plain demagoguery from the White House and people in high places — all of which went to complicate the process of desegregation."

Now, he said, "the problem has spilled over into other areas where there have been attempts to eliminate discrimination through special admissions and affirmative action programs."

Jones characterized the Bakke case as a conflict over "whether we are going to use these techniques to guarantee racial, economic and ethnic inclusiveness in our society or else move toward a dual society at a faster rate."

The NAACP official complained that the Supreme Court already has placed legal technicalities in the way of desegregation. For instance, he cited the Arlington Heights, Ill., housing case in which the court refused to grant relief unless there was evidence of intentional discrimination.

Other groups — such as the Committee on Academic Nondiscrimination and Integrity and the Mid-America Legal Foundation — view the Bakke case as an opportunity to erase the "quota system" they charge has arisen with special admissions and affirmative action programs.

John W. Finley, a New York lawyer representing these organizations, has warned the Supreme Court of the "rapidly spreading practice . . . of overt or covert quotas for members of selected racial or ethnic groups or women" in admissions and hiring.

"This situation, along with reverse discrimination in employment, has caused a great deal of racial polarization and threatens to undermine the valuable concept of affirmative action with which reverse discrimination is constantly confused," Finley said.

In an interview Finley said that the court should remove any concept of "racial preference" and possibility of reverse discrimination in affirmative action programs. The sole criterion should be merit, he added.

The committee — composed of such intellectuals and educators as Daniel Boorstin, Bruno Bettelheim, Nathan Glazer, Oscar Handlin and Sydney Hook — contends that in case after case, despite claims of nondiscrimination, people have found themselves discriminated against because of their race, ethnic background or sex.

Revival of city a top sales job

who simply hate the runaround, like all the rest of us," Taylor says, "but government has effectively ignored that for years."

"Traditionally, city governments are naysayers, they never tell companies 'Hey, that's a beautiful project, we can help you improve this or that.' It's always been negative. Businessmen really respond when you show some interest," he adds.

TAYLOR SAYS doing "small things" like showing prospective business executives around city hall, pointing out where to get permits, papers and required documents, can nip major problems in the bud.

A Los Angeles city study found that beginning a project within the city required seven separate permits from the department of building and safety alone — and Mayor Bradley has ordered "all city departments" to simplify paperwork.

Other problems, of course, are far more difficult — and expensive — to solve. Available land is at a premium in downtown Long Beach and Los Angeles.

One possible solution promoted both by Long Beach city manager John Dever and Los Angeles' Crowe, is recycling.

Dever has suggested ridding downtown Long Beach of some ancient, long out-dated structures and allowing new businesses to move in. Crowe believes that what open land does exist in cities is often left open because city government's don't bother checking on ownership.

"WE'VE FOUND government-owned land, in the hands of school districts, federal or state governments, that's going untouched because there are no plans for it," he said.

But, as Taylor explains, even the complete refurbishing of downtown Long Beach, complete with new businesses, would be only part of the over-all solution.

"We have to attract people, too," he says, "and more important, people who can spend money to keep businesses going."

"We need a broad mix. In the downtown area, for instance, our elderly are living on fixed incomes," Taylor said. "They can't spend much."

THE CITY'S spenders — those in outlying areas — find it easier and safer to shop in new malls like those in Cerritos, Carson and Westminster. Downtown Long Beach may have to accept the fact that it may never regain those lost customers, one city official indicated this week. All of which leaves the city with few alternatives.

"You have to build in your shoppers, bring in office buildings and apartments and let the people in them flow through downtown," Wilson said. "In Long Beach, we have some downtown area land we could partially develop between the freeway and Magnolia Avenue. I think given the choice and the kind of housing they want, people want to live closer in."

One recent city effort to "build in" those shoppers came with the sale, to a private developer, of some 26 acres of Westside land holding nothing but "condemned Navy houses."

TAYLOR, who helped engineer the sale, says the Navy got the money — "but the city gained 148 new homes in the low and middle income range."

"People kept telling me no one wanted to move down to that area, but I'll tell you: the first 28 of those houses put on the market sold in one hour — and there's a waiting list of 300 for the others," Taylor said.

Wilson says another downtown hope rides with the convention center — which in turn needs a major hotel to make it go.

"If we can attract that hotel, at least one, downtown, then we can attract people who'll spend money downtown," Wilson said.

And what if Long Beach can't land that hotel?

Wilson thought a moment, laughed and said: "Then we're dead."

THERE AGAIN, however, the answer lies in the selling. Long Beach and virtually every other major West Coast city, is going to have to sell itself to survive.

Dr. Robert Parry, chief economist with Security Pacific National Bank, contends Southern California "is no longer the nation's leader in any particular field," and therefore must scramble to bring in "a little bit of everything to make up for that."

"We don't have all the advantages to big business that we used to. We have a large employment market, but we also have strong unions — which means higher pay-rolls," Parry explained. "In some Southern cities, like Birmingham and Atlanta, the labor is cheaper."

Miner reached, but not yet free

TOWER CITY, Pa. (AP) — Rescuers reached stranded miner Ronald Adley Saturday night but were delayed in bringing him to the surface because the hole they cut into his underground chamber was too small.

Rescuers cut through a 50-foot seam of coal to reach the chamber where Adley has been trapped for more than four days, only to find out that the opening they had made was too small for his 5-foot-7 frame.

"They thought the hole was large enough but it wasn't, so they are enlarging it now," said Steve Shrawder, assistant to the president of the Kochar Coal Co.

Adley tried to get through the opening but couldn't because of its size and the angle at which it had been cut, Shrawder said. He added that he did not know how long it would take to enlarge the escape passage.

"IT SEEMS like forever," said Adley's sister-in-law, Kate Adley.

"This is a terrible thing. Why don't they tell us what is going on?" she added, referring to earlier reports that Adley was to be brought from the mine deep inside the 400-foot mountain long before midnight.

Shrawder said Adley remained "in good spirits and is anxious to get out."

The 37-year-old miner was the only known survivor of the 10 men who were trapped in the mine last Tuesday when a wall of water poured into an underground tunnel.

An ambulance waited at the mine entrance to take Adley to a hospital for observation.

"They found my daddy. He's alive," said Adley's 11-year-old daughter, Justina, when she heard on television that rescuers had reached her father.

"It's a miracle, a miracle from God above," Kate Adley said as tears streamed down her face. "And I pray the rest of the men down there will be following right behind him."

There was still no word Saturday night on the seven miners still missing in the mine. The bodies of two men were brought out Tuesday and Wednesday.

EVEN AFTER the rescuers

Checks, cash gone from hospital safe

Checks and cash totaling $499 and $7,019 were taken from a safe at Memorial Hospital Medical Center, Long Beach police said Saturday.

A walk-in patient, Ann Kinard, of 417 Atlantic Ave., had turned the checks and cash over to the hospital for safekeeping.

An envelope containing her valuables was taken by a thief who worked the combination of the safe.

reached the air-filled pocket where Adley had spent more than 100 hours. He had a long way to go to freedom.

First, there was the 50-foot long escape hatch his rescuers had spent 5½ days chiseling out of hard anthracite coal and quartz. Then, about 1,000 feet to the underground rail line. Finally, a one-mile ride on one of the flat rail cars which carry miners down into the earth to work.

While Adley waited for rescuers to reach him, he napped, sipped juice and chewed a plug of tobacco.

"You go ahead and dig," he told his rescuers through a narrow communications tube a few hours before they reached him. "I'm going to lay down and sleep. I hope when I wake up you're going to take me out."

ADLEY HAD been entombed for 32 hours before anyone knew he was alive. As searchers drilled through the hard anthracite coal Wednesday, they heard a tapping noise. They drilled a narrow hole through the coal, inserted a communications tube, and Adley told them he was alive and well.

The hole was widened enough to ship Adley food, drink, chewing tobacco, warm socks and blankets. He catnapped to the rat-a-tat-tat of jackhammers, confident of his rescue.

His spirits were high, said John Shuteck, regional director of the federal Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration.

Adley was one of scores of miners who was working when a wall of water burst into a tunnel. Most of the men fled ahead of the surging flood, but 10 men were trapped.

Two bodies have been found. The fate of the seven other men is still unknown, but the search for them continues.

ADLEY WAS alone in the air-

Nighttime blaze claims man, wife in Newport Beach

A pre-dawn fire roared through a Newport Beach home Saturday, fatally injuring a man and his wife despite the efforts of a neighbor to save them, police said.

George Andrew Harrah, 56, of 2848 Carob St., was dead on arrival at Hoag Memorial Hospital. His wife Evelyn, 56, was dead at the scene.

Police said the fire broke through the roof at 2:30 a.m. with flames pouring out of windows in the front and rear. A neighbor, Richard Elliott, tried to enter the home but was driven back by heat and smoke.

Fire Capt. T.E. Harlan said he also tried to enter the home while firemen laid out hoses after arriving.

Quake toll in 1,000s feared

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS Associated Press

BUCHAREST, Romania — Rescue workers dug through the ruins of collapsed apartment buildings Saturday looking for trapped survivors and victims of one of the strongest earthquakes ever recorded in Europe. Western diplomats estimated 2,000 to 3,000 people died in Bucharest alone.

The first official Romanian figures, released on Saturday night, said 298 bodies had been found in Bucharest and 72 bodies elsewhere in Romania, which bore the brunt of the quake. Damage and deaths also were reported in neighboring countries.

Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, who broke off a trip in Africa, inspected the ruins, the Romanian news agency Agerpres said.

Ceausescu said a new computer center that collapsed and 16 wrecked apartment buildings were poorly built and "asked that an investigation be made (and) for the guilty to be most severely held responsible."

OUTSIDE the most heavily stricken areas in Bucharest, where clusters of people watched rescue operations, most residents appeared to be going about life as usual, although there were unconfirmed reports of panic buying and hoarding.

The quake struck about 9:30 p.m. local time and registered 7.2 on the Richter scale. It jarred Romania and drove residents from buildings as far away as Moscow 920 miles to the northeast and Rome 700 miles to the southwest.

U.S. medical students helping in hospitals estimated the death toll in the Romanian capital alone would go beyond 2,000 and perhaps exceed 3,000.

The U.S. diplomatic mission quoted Radio Bucharest as reporting 72 persons known dead elsewhere in Romania and 1,700 people hospitalized in the capital city, of whom 1,200 were seriously injured.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the quake originated about 65 miles below the surface of the earth, so deep that aftershocks or secondary earthquakes were unlikely. None of significance have been recorded.

DAMAGE in Bucharest concentrated in the center of town, with the capital's grand avenue — Magheru Boulevard — closed and most of the buildings still standing too unsafe to be reoccupied immediately.

Taxis were pressed into service as ambulances in the Romanian capital while all available trucks carted off debris. Water in the capital was restored but natural gas was turned off again because of leaks.

In Yugoslavia, Romania's neighbor to the southwest, one man was killed, 100 persons were injured and 20 families were homeless, officials said.

The Yugoslav Embassy said heavy damage was reported in Ploesti, a Romanian refinery city at the center of one of Europe's largest oil fields to the northwest. The refineries were devastated by Allied bombers during World War II. Romania has the second-largest known oil reserves on the continent, after the Soviet Union.

To the south, in neighboring Bulgaria, early counts had 20 dead, 165 injured and 60 buildings destroyed.

No Americans were reported among the quake casualties.

In a telegram to Romania's president, President Carter said his family and the American people shared Romania's "shock and sorrow. The United States stands ready to extend emergency assistance."

TEAMS of soldiers and civilian volunteers in Bucharest worked into the night under floodlight to search for bodies in the heaps of rubble from collapsed apartment buildings, built before World War II.

But, as Taylor explains, even the complete refurbishing of downtown Long Beach, complete with new businesses, would be only part of the over-all solution.

"We have to attract people, too," he says, "and more important, people who can spend money to keep businesses going."

"We need a broad mix. In the downtown area, for instance, our elderly are living on fixed incomes," Taylor said. "They can't spend much."

THE CITY'S spenders — those in outlying areas — find it easier and safer to shop in new malls like those in Cerritos, Carson and Westminster. Downtown Long Beach may have to accept the fact that it may never regain those lost customers, one city official indicated this week. All of which leaves the city with few alternatives.

"You have to build in your shoppers, bring in office buildings and apartments and let the people in them flow through downtown," Wilson said. "In Long Beach, we have some downtown area land we could partially develop between the freeway and Magnolia Avenue. I think given the choice and the kind of housing they want, people want to live closer in."

One recent city effort to "build in" those shoppers came with the sale, to a private developer, of some 26 acres of Westside land holding nothing but "condemned Navy houses."

TAYLOR, who helped engineer the sale, says the Navy got the money — "but the city gained 148 new homes in the low and middle income range."

"People kept telling me no one wanted to move down to that area, but I'll tell you: the first 28 of those houses put on the market sold in one hour — and there's a waiting list of 300 for the others," Taylor said.

Wilson says another downtown hope rides with the convention center — which in turn needs a major hotel to make it go.

"If we can attract that hotel, at least one, downtown, then we can attract people who'll spend money downtown," Wilson said.

And what if Long Beach can't land that hotel?

Wilson thought a moment, laughed and said: "Then we're dead."

THERE AGAIN, however, the answer lies in the selling. Long Beach and virtually every other major West Coast city, is going to have to sell itself to survive.

Dr. Robert Parry, chief economist with Security Pacific National Bank, contends Southern California "is no longer the nation's leader in any particular field," and therefore must scramble to bring in "a little bit of everything to make up for that."

"We don't have all the advantages to big business that we used to. We have a large employment market, but we also have strong unions — which means higher pay-rolls," Parry explained. "In some Southern cities, like Birmingham and Atlanta, the labor is cheaper."

Miner reached, but not yet free

TOWER CITY, Pa. (AP) — Rescuers reached stranded miner Ronald Adley Saturday night but were delayed in bringing him to the surface because the hole they cut into his underground chamber was too small.

Rescuers cut through a 50-foot seam of coal to reach the chamber where Adley has been trapped for more than four days, only to find out that the opening they had made was too small for his 5-foot-7 frame.

"They thought the hole was large enough but it wasn't, so they are enlarging it now," said Steve Shrawder, assistant to the president of the Kocher Coal Co.

Adley tried to get through the opening but couldn't because of its size and the angle at which it had been cut, Shrawder said. He added that he did not know how long it would take to enlarge the escape passage.

"IT SEEMS like forever," said Adley's sister-in-law, Kate Adley.

"This is a terrible thing. Why don't they tell us what is going on?" she added, referring to earlier reports that Adley was to be brought from the mine deep inside the 400-foot mountain long before midnight.

Shrawder said Adley remained "in good spirits and is anxious to get out."

The 37-year-old miner was the only known survivor of the 10 men who were trapped in the mine last Tuesday when a wall of water poured into an underground tunnel.

An ambulance waited at the mine entrance to take Adley to a hospital for observation.

"They found my daddy. He's alive," said Adley's 11-year-old daughter, Justina, when she heard on television that rescuers had reached her father.

"It's a miracle, a miracle from God above," Kate Adley said as tears streamed down her face. "And I pray the rest of the men down there will be following right behind him."

There was still no word Saturday night on the seven miners still missing in the mine. The bodies of two men were brought out Tuesday and Wednesday.

EVEN AFTER the rescuers

Checks, cash gone from hospital safe

Checks and cash totaling $499 and $7,019 were taken from a safe at Memorial Hospital Medical Center, Long Beach police said Saturday.

A walk-in patient, Ann Kinard, of 417 Atlantic Ave., had turned the checks and cash over to the hospital for safekeeping.

An envelope containing her valuables was taken by a thief who worked the combination of the safe.

reached the air-filled pocket where Adley had spent more than 100 hours, he had a long way to go to freedom.

First, there was the 50-foot long escape hatch his rescuers had spent 3½ days chiseling out of hard anthracite coal and quartz. Then, about 1,000 feet to the underground rail line. Finally, a one-mile ride on one of the flat rail cars which carry miners down into the earth to work.

While Adley waited for rescuers to reach him, he napped, sipped juice and chewed a plug of tobacco.

"You go ahead and dig," he told his rescuers through a narrow communications tube a few hours before they reached him. "I'm going to lay down and sleep. I hope when I wake up you're going to take me out."

ADLEY HAD been entombed for 32 hours before anyone knew he was alive. As searchers drilled through the hard anthracite coal Wednesday, they heard a tapping noise. They drilled a narrow hole through the coal, inserted a communications tube, and Adley told them he was alive and well.

The hole was widened enough to ship Adley food, drink, chewing tobacco, warm socks and blankets. He catnapped to the rat-a-tat-tat of jackhammers, confident of his rescue.

His spirits were high, said John Shuck, regional director of the federal Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration.

Adley was one of scores of miners who was working when a wall of water burst into a tunnel. Most of the men fled ahead of the surging flood, but 10 men were trapped.

Two bodies have been found. The fate of the seven other men is still unknown, but the search for them continues.

Nighttime blaze claims man, wife in Newport Beach

A pre-dawn fire roared through a Newport Beach home Saturday, fatally injuring a man and his wife despite the efforts of a neighbor to save them, police said.

George Andrew Harrah, 56, of 2848 Carob St., was dead on arrival at Hoag Memorial Hospital. His wife Evelyn, 58, was dead at the scene.

Police said the fire broke through the roof at 2:30 a.m. with flames pouring out of windows in the front and rear. A neighbor, Richard Elliott, tried to enter the home but was driven back by heat and smoke.

Fire Capt. T.E. Harlan said he also tried to enter the home while firemen laid out hoses after arriving.

Quake toll in 1,000s feared

By ALEXANDER G. HIGGINS
Associated Press

BUCHAREST, Romania — Rescue workers dug through the ruins of collapsed apartment buildings Saturday looking for trapped survivors and victims of one of the strongest earthquakes ever recorded in Europe. Western diplomats estimated 2,000 to 3,000 people died in Bucharest alone.

The first official Romanian figures, released on Saturday night, said 298 bodies had been found in Bucharest and 72 bodies elsewhere in Romania, which bore the brunt of the quake. Damage and deaths also were reported in neighboring countries.

Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu, who broke off a trip in Africa, inspected the ruins, the Romanian news agency Agerpres said.

Ceausescu said a new computer center that collapsed and 16 wrecked apartment buildings were poorly built and "asked that an investigation be made (and) for the guilty to be most severely held responsible."

OUTSIDE the most heavily stricken areas in Bucharest, where clusters of people watched rescue operations, most residents appeared to be going about life as usual, although there were unconfirmed reports of panic buying and hoarding.

The quake struck about 9:30 p.m. local time and registered 7.2 on the Richter scale. It jarred Romania and drove residents from buildings as far away as Moscow 920 miles to the northeast and Rome 700 miles to the southwest.

U.S. medical students helping in hospitals estimated the death toll in the Romanian capital alone would go beyond 2,000 and perhaps exceed 3,000.

The U.S. diplomatic mission quoted Radio Bucharest as reporting 72 persons known dead elsewhere in Romania and 1,700 people hospitalized in the capital city, of whom 1,200 were seriously injured.

The U.S. Geological Survey said the quake originated about 65 miles below the surface of the earth, so deep that aftershocks or secondary earthquakes were unlikely. None of significance have been recorded.

DAMAGE in Bucharest concentrated in the center of town, with the capital's grand avenue — Magheru Boulevard — closed and most of the buildings still standing too unsafe to be reoccupied immediately.

Taxis were pressed into service as ambulances in the Romanian capital while all available trucks carted off debris. Water in the capital was restored but natural gas was turned off again because of leaks.

In Yugoslavia, Romania's neighbor to the southwest, one man was killed, 100 persons were injured and 20 families were homeless, officials said.

The Yugoslav Embassy said heavy damage was reported in Ploesti, a Romanian refinery city at the center of one of Europe's largest oil fields to the northwest. The refineries were devastated by Allied bombers during World War II. Romania has the second-largest known oil reserves on the continent, after the Soviet Union.

To the south, in neighboring Bulgaria, early counts had 20 dead, 165 injured and 60 buildings destroyed.

No Americans were reported among the quake casualties.

In a telegram to Romania's president, President Carter said his family and the American people shared Romania's "shock and sorrow. The United States stands ready to extend emergency assistance."

TEAMS of soldiers and civilian volunteers in Bucharest worked into the night under floodlight to search for bodies in the heaps of rubble from collapsed apartment buildings, built before World War II.

Summary of Secret Witness cases

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 70 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the caselist below, one of the selected and varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until such cases have been closed by police or until notification in print that reward offers have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To insure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information DIRECTLY through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness FIRST — either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing to the I.P.T. Secret Witness Editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge additional rewards to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— Rewards totaling $6,000 to $12,000, depending on the offense, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons responsible for the disappearance of Long Beach businessman Evan Allan Snider, 34, last seen Oct. 22 when he was checking on some property he owned on Cedar Avenue. Secret Witness guarantees a $1,000 reward for a kidnap conviction and $2,000 for a murder conviction. The victim's father, Dr. Allan Snider, has pledged $5,000 for a kidnap conviction and $10,000 for a murder conviction.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 38-year-old Henry Quezada, of Compton, shot and killed by an unknown assailant as he was changing a tire on his car at Acacia and Rosecrans Avenues in Compton at 9:30 p.m. on Dec. 31, 1976.

— A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest of fugitives Samuel Law, 23, and Robert Gary Lewis, 23, both formerly of Compton, sought in connection with the slaying of Lavern Speer, 50, who was shot to death execution-style before the eyes of his wife and young son after two handits accosted them as they were getting out of their car in a parking lot next to their Elm Avenue apartment at 7:15 p.m. on Nov. 2, 1976. If a murder conviction results from the arrests, the informant will be eligible for an additional $1,500 reward.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals.

For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press-Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not publicized in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone (213) 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to: Secret Witness, Independent, Press-Telegram, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90844.

Garcia's message: lib breakthrough

By ANGELA NOEL
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — "We're having to overcome a whole problem of violence against women which has become a part of the fabric of our society. Inez Garcia is a real breakthrough," said one feminist activist.

With the "innocent" verdict returned Friday in Mrs. Garcia's second trial for murder, women's groups chalked up another victory in the struggle to change views toward sexual assault on women. Mrs. Garcia was arrested after killing a man she said helped rape her.

"I think there is a changing attitude about rape," said Del Martin, a member of the National Organization of Women and leader of the San Francisco Commission on Women. "The age-old advice of 'relax and enjoy it' is no longer viable. What's happening now is that women are finding strength in other women."

Feminists turned out in force, crowding into the tiny Monterey County courtroom where the Garcia trial was held. Their support seemed little diminished from its earlier intensity when Mrs. Garcia was first tried and convicted in 1974 of killing Miguel Jimenez, a 300-pound man she said stood guard while another man raped her.

Mrs. Garcia, separated from her husband, served 15 months in prison before the conviction was overturned on appeal in 1975.

and she was released on bail.

The activism her case stirred recalled the nationwide defense movement for Joan Little, acquitted last year in North Carolina of killing a male jailer she said attacked her while she was being held on armed robbery charges.

In the emotional moments that followed the verdict, Mrs. Garcia said she felt she had won an uphill battle.

"It's so hard to prove when a woman gets raped," she said. "I want to thank the jury for believing me."

Louis Castillo, the man Mrs. Garcia said raped her, was never charged. But rape was the backbone of her defense, despite claims by prosecutor Arthur Braudrick that the accusation was a "red herring."

After the verdict, defense attorney Susan Jordan said, "I think the jury understands what a person in Inez's position goes through."

Jury Foreman Herman Champlin said the presence of two women on the panel helped educate male jurors on the rape question.

"I think they gave us an idea what a woman would feel like under similar circumstances," he said. "They gave us their impressions of how confused, angry and those kind of feelings they might have under certain circumstances."

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the street robber who shot and fatally wounded 72-year-old Jeanette Glade, of Long Beach, while attempting to take her purse on Burnett Street near Pasadena Avenue at 8:30 p.m. on Aug. 8, 1976. Mrs. Glade died on Sept. 31 as a result of her wound.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Raymond E. Lamphear, 49, stabbed to death by two young men in an apparent robbery attack as he was walking on Raymond Avenue at Anaheim Street near his home at 9 p.m. June 30, 1976.

— A $1,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and manslaughter conviction of the hit-run driver who struck and killed Alexander Burdeas, 53, of Norwalk, at the intersection of San Antonio Drive and Firestone Boulevard in Norwalk at 1 p.m. Sept. 27, 1975. The hit-run car was described as a 1964 light-colored Pontiac with chrome rims.

— A $500 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest of fugitive Charles Mack, 23, wanted in connection with a series of apartment house armed robberies throughout the Southland since last February, with bodily injury suffered in two of the robberies and the rape of a woman manager in another. Mack is a black man, 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. In the event he is convicted on armed robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home on S. Pacific Avenue in San Pedro at 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis, of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan. 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2290 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, and speaks French as a second language.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert George Zeiger, 18-year-old clerk who was killed by a shotgun blast during a holdup at the Red Carpet Liquor Store, 85 Alamos Ave., on Oct. 13, 1975.

Mack is a black man, 5 feet 9 inches tall, 150 pounds, with black hair and brown eyes. In the event he is convicted on armed robbery charges, the Secret Witness providing information leading to his capture will be eligible for an additional $500 reward.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayers of George W. Harrison, 50-year-old chef at Peppy's Steak House in San Pedro, found stabbed to death in his home on S. Pacific Avenue in San Pedro at 7 p.m. on Aug. 22, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 30-year-old Bernadine Lewis, of Anaheim, last seen alive at 4 p.m. Jan. 30, 1975, when she left a bar at 2299 E. Anaheim St. in Long Beach with a man about 35 years old. Her nude and battered body was found in a trash can in Venice three weeks later. The man sought for questioning is about 5 feet 10 inches, 180 pounds, and speaks French as a second language.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Robert George Zeiger, 18-year-old clerk who was killed by a shotgun blast during a holdup at the Red Carpet Liquor Store, 85 Alamitos Ave., on Oct. 13, 1975.

Vietnam War a loser in publishing circles

By THOMAS POWERS
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Gloria Emerson has a lot of memories.

One is of a young man, an Army veteran she interviewed for a book recently published by Random House. This particular veteran had been blinded. "I wish you had seen me before," he said — meaning before Vietnam, before he was wounded. "I looked like Robert Wagner."

Then he took off his dark glasses and faced Gloria Emerson and asked, "What do I look like now?"

MS. EMERSON remembers looking at his damaged face and saying, "You have a scar." She ran her finger along the scar, in effect showing it to him — across the top of one eye, down between the eyes, along the nose.

Gloria Emerson has a lot of memories like that, some from the two years she spent in Vietnam for the New York Times, and some from talking to people in this country since. To make sure she doesn't forget, and to remind a public what the war was like, she has put them into a long book with a long title: "Winners and Losers: Battles, Retreats, Gains, Losses and Ruins from a Long War."

"Notice the cover," she said during a recent interview. She was referring to the fact that Vietnam was not mentioned. "It could be any war. It could be the Civil War. But everybody knows what it's about."

WHAT IT'S about is Vietnam, and it is one of the very few books about Vietnam published in this country since the North Vietnamese entered Saigon and won the war at the end of April 1975. There have been only two books about the fall itself, "The Last Day" by John Pilger and "Giai Phong" by Tiziano Terzani. Pilger is an Englishman, Terzani an Italian. So far, no books about the end of the war have been published by Americans, a fact which strikes many observers as strange considering the cost of the American role in the war. Official figures put that cost at 55,000 dead Americans and $120 billion, with perhaps as much more money still to be spent in veterans' benefits.

Unlike the fall of Saigon, Watergate produced a flood of books, both before and after the resignation of President Nixon, and many of those books became bestsellers. Nothing of that sort has happened with books on Vietnam.

"VIETNAM was just too painful," said Charles Elliott, an editor at Alfred Knopf. "People were never tormented in that way by Watergate. When Nixon resigned, a lot of people were delighted, but no one took any satisfaction in how awful Vietnam was."

Elliott is not surprised at the small number of books about the war since it ended. He points out that great war books tend to gestate in their authors for years. Four of the greatest books about World War I, for example, appeared in 1929 — Ernest Hemingway's "A Farewell to Arms," Edmund Blunden's "Undertones of War," "Robert Graves' "Goodbye to All That" and Erich Maria Remarque's "All Quiet on the Western Front."

Vietnam, Elliott says, was not just a bitter experience but a confusing one. "It will take time to understand what happened," he said. "We're enormously embarrassed at having made such a terrible mistake. A writer must find some way to explain how we could have been so terribly wrong."

WITH TIME, he thinks, the first, easy answers will fade, and people will begin to see the war as a whole.

In a series of interviews, other New York editors expressed similar views, but several also cited the practical fact that books on Vietnam have not sold well. With the exceptions of Frances Fitzgerald's "Fire in the Lake" and David Halberstam's "The Best and the Brightest," books on Vietnam generally have been what Samuel Johnson once called "a drug on the market." Even highly praised books like Ron Kovic's "Born on the Fourth of July," Robert Stone's "Dog Soldiers," which won a National Book Award, and C.D.B. Bryan's "Friendly Fire," were commercially disappointing.

"After a series of failures," said an editor at a major publishing house in Boston, "our editorial board got into an anti-Vietnam thing. They didn't want to hear the word Vietnam, but I should add we haven't really been offered anything on Vietnam worth publishing."

TOM STEWART, an editor who recently moved from Farrar Straus and Giroux to Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, said he had read a lot of Vietnam novels in manuscript over the last year or two, most of them literary failures.

"People who went through it can't always write about it," he said. "I've seen a lot of books which were boring and badly done. World War II epics which had been moved south to the jungle."

Part of the problem, he says, is that the college graduates who might have written books often found ways to avoid military service, while the high school dropouts who did go must develop literary skill from scratch if they want to write about what they saw.

One who did was Larry Heinemann, a young Chicagoan who spent a year with the 25th Division in Cu Chi, Vietnam, in the late 1960s. According to his editor at Farrar Straus, Heinemann taught himself to write in order to capture what he had seen in Vietnam. The result is a novel called "Close Quarters" which will be published in May and which already has begun to capture some attention in the publishing industry.

"UNTIL THIS year, Vietnam books were considered essentially unsaleable," said Heinemann's editor, Pat Strachan, "but this time our salesmen are fairly enthusiastic. It's not a political book, and it's not terribly pretty either. There's a lot in it about the physical ordeal of combat, and there's an honest picture of the prostitute scene and of racism, both in the Army and toward the Vietnamese. There's very little sympathy for the enemy who are referred to as 'gooks' and 'slope-heads.' There's much, much evil in the book — cruelty, violence and anger. It's going to be offensive to some people."

Another novel which may breach the public's disinterest in books about Vietnam is "The Last Best Hope" by Peter Tauber which Harcourt Brace will promote as one of its major books next fall. Tauber's book, his second, is described as "an epic novel of the 60s" with a huge cast of characters including public figures such as Nixon, Eugene McCarthy and Richard Goodwin. Tauber never went to Vietnam, but early readers say the book's Vietnam sections are among its best.

OTHER BOOKS about Vietnam scheduled to appear in the next year or so include:

"Great Spring Victory," by Gen. Van Tien Dung, the North Vietnamese commander who captured Saigon 18 months ago. His account of the campaign, described as a dramatic human history rather than a technical military treatise, originally was published in the Hanoi "Nhan Dan" or "People's Daily." An English translation will be published on April 30, the second anniversary of the fall of Saigon, by Monthly Review Press. Profits from the book's sale will go to the American group Friendship, which is building a hospital in My Lai.

—Neil Sheehan, a former New York Times reporter who obtained the Pentagon Papers, is finishing a biography of John Paul Van, an American official killed in Vietnam. The book, which has grown into a broad history of American involvement in the war, will be published by Random House but does not yet have a title.

—CBS television correspondents Bernard and Marvin Kalb are working on Vietnam books, but no details have been announced.

—William Colby, director of the CIA from 1973 until 1976, is writing his memoirs for Simon and Schuster and is expected to deal at length with the Phoenix program which he ran in Vietnam. Described as an effort to "root out the Vietcong infrastructure," the Phoenix program is blamed in the deaths of at least 20,000 South Vietnamese and has been widely attacked as terrorism. In a recent article in the Washington Post, Colby recommended American aid to Vietnam as part of an attempt at postwar reconciliation.

—Sam Adams, a CIA analyst, discovered in the late 60s that the Vietcong were roughly twice as numerous as previous estimates but failed to persuade the Army or the CIA to officially accept his figures until the Tet offensive in 1968. He is writing a major account of intelligence battles during the war. Tentatively entitled "143," for the official number of the CIA's annual Indochina estimate, Adams' book will be published by Norton.

—Hill and Wang, a division of Farrar Straus, will publish an English translation of "We Have Eaten the Forest of the Stone Spirit Goo." Written by Georges Condominas and published in France in the mid-1950s, the book is a description of a Montagnard culture in Vietnam which has been virtually destroyed by the war. Ten years after the book's appearance, Condominas said that he discovered that U.S. Special Forces had been using an unauthorized translation of the book as a guide to military operations in the area he had studied.

The publishers of these and other books are hoping they will overcome public and critical disinterest which has sent some other books on Vietnam to an early grave. The Viking Press, for example, published two novels — "No Bugles, No Drums" by Charles Dudden, and "Parthian Shot" by Lloyd Little — which generally were ignored. Little's novel won the Ernest Hemingway Award for the best first novel of 1975 but still sold fewer than 10,000 copies in hardcover.

THE RECEPTION of Ms. Emerson's book, "Winners and Losers," has been mixed, although it has been widely reviewed. Sander Vanocur in the Washington Post and David Halberstam in the Los Angeles Times praised the book, but the New York Times, in both its daily book column and the Sunday Book Review, dismissed it as tendentious and overwrought. Since reviews in the Times generally have much to do with the success and failure of trade books, "Winners and Losers" does not seem to be headed for the bestseller lists.

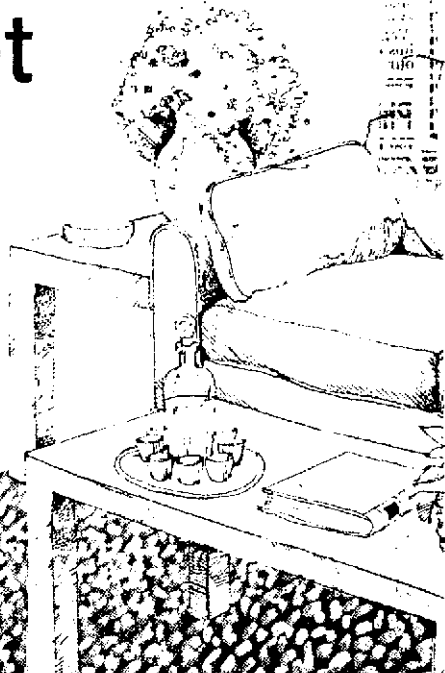

LARRY HEINEMANN taught himself to write in order to do a book about his experiences in Vietnam, the first American war that has not resulted in best-selling books.

Sooty son saved soothed, salved

Cal. resort loans sap union's pension fund

By WALLACE TURNER
New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Real estate development loans to a spa in Southern California have seriously depleted the reserves of a union pension fund, and two trustees resigned in protest when the loans were made, according to confidential sources.

The fund supports pensions of the Culinary Workers Union in Las Vegas. Al Bramlet, the 59-year-old secretary-treasurer of the union, has been missing for a week.

The questioned loans were made in 1973 and 1975 to Murietta Hot Springs, a company owned by Morris Shenker, a former St. Louis lawyer who now lives in Las Vegas, where he is the major owner of the company that owns the Dunes, a hotel and casino.

A source familiar with the fund trustees' actions since the fund began operations in 1971 said that Leo Lewis, a Hilton Hotels executive, resigned from the board rather than take part in a $2 million loan in 1973, and that Keith Ashworth, an executive in the Del Webb Corp., left the board in 1975 rather than take part in loans that year to Murietta Hot Springs.

Investigations of the tangled financial relationships, as well as of Bramlet's disappearance, are being conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Labor's Employment Retirement Income Security Administration.

MURIETTA Hot Springs gets its name from Joaquin Murietta, a 19th-century bandit who liked to take mud baths in the hot, sulfurous water that bubbles to the surface through the cracks of the Elmore fault.

The spa, founded in 1902, was operated in a small, inconspicuous fashion until 1969, when it was purchased by the late Irving J. Kahn, who put up $250,000 of his own money and borrowed $1.1 million from the Valley National Bank of Las Vegas. In 1970, Shenker purchased a half interest.

After Kahn died in 1973, Shenker took full ownership of Murietta Hot Springs, assuming certain obligations of Kahn's.

Since 1969, 350 condominium apartments, a mobile home park with space for 1,100 units and an 18-hole golf course have been added at the spa, located some 30 miles south of Riverside, and the hotel has been enlarged to 150 rooms. And, through 1975, according to reports filed with the SEC, the spa has lost $18 million.

IN LATE 1975, Shenker tried to enlarge the $2 million his company owed the pension fund. One proposal was for the fund to agree to buy $4.6 million in mortgages held by two banks.

Finally, the fund was asked to pay monthly subsidies for three years for the Hot Springs operation and for properties of the Sierra Charter Corp.,

another Shenker-controlled company. The fund agreed.

Ashworth resigned as a trustee about this time. Neither he nor Lewis could be reached to discuss their experiences with the pension fund.

Meanwhile, Shenker beat back objections from the Nevada State Gaming Control Board and was licensed to help run gambling operations at the Dunes. He had acquired 40 per cent of Continental Connector, a public company that owned the hotel, some time earlier, and state law required that he be licensed or sell his stock.

SEC files show that Continental Connector disclosed in its 1974 report that it had joint venture dealings with Murietta Hot Springs. These are subject to SEC investigation.

IN THE dealings, Connector paid $11.2 million to Hot Springs for certain properties, including the spa's golf course. Connector also agreed to provide $5 million for operational expenses.

Last May and August, under its 1975 agreement, the pension fund of the Culinary Workers Union bought the bank mortgages, raising its investment in Hot Springs to $11,690,000.

However, that investment is somewhat larger, for throughout all of last year and up to last month, the fund paid out $200,000 to $800,000 a month in operational expenses for Hot Springs and the Sierra Charter Corp. These payments total about $5 million, according to confidential sources. In addition, Sierra Charter has borrowed $9,350,000 from the pension fund.

According to sources familiar with the fund, its current book value is $43 million, of which $26 million is owed by Shenker's companies.

PART OF this was disclosed in a Labor Department audit last year, with the result that new management trustees were named by the Southern Nevada Resort Owners' Association, the employers' negotiating group.

Last September, Richard Crane of Los Angeles, a former federal prosecutor, became the chief management trustee. He was supported by Harry Stang, his law partner, and Bernard Menke, a former deputy project manager for the Atomic Energy Commission.

The new trustees asked that their personal liability policies from Lloyd's of London, be increased from $1 million to $5 million. Lloyd's declined to renew the policy.

The fund is financed by payments of 35 cents for each hour worked by the 22,000 members of Local 226 of the Culinary Workers Union. This amounts to about $1.4 million a month, or $15 million a year. There are about 1,000 members getting pensions, but the size of the payments was not available.

IN A telephone interview, Shenker said he guaranteed the loans to his companies.

"I don't know precisely how much land the companies have," he said. "I am not free to discuss the various negotiations. They involve a multitude of considerations. I personally guaranteed the loans. The pension fund will not lose one dime from these loans."

Beyond the $26 million owed by Shenker, the fund has about $17 million in reserves. A source said that $13 million was in a stock portfolio managed by a bank, and that there was a sizeable cash account.

Shenker and Murietta Hot Springs also owe the Teamsters Central States Pension fund $2,347,112.

Mush! cry of 47 sled-dog competitors in Alaska race

BIG LAKE, Alaska (AP) — The silence of Alaska's icy white interior soon will be shattered by 47 gutsy mushers and their sled dogs.

The invaders from tiny Alaska villages and bustling urban centers in the lower 48 — and one from as far away as Norway — hit the historic gold-mining trail Saturday in a race from Anchorage to Nome.

Their trail, 1,049 miles long, is a slender thread — sometimes no more than a snowmobile track — connecting 23 checkpoints. The checkpoints, pit stops in the race, are staffed by volunteers who keep the fires going, the coffee hot and plenty of food for the dogs.

Temperatures along the route were 25 below zero or colder this week, with a couple of feet of snow along most of the way.

Before the dog teams were allowed to go, they were checked by veterinarians and the animals were provided canvas booties for icy spots on the trail. Despite the care, four dogs died last year.

Racers follow the route of turn-of-the-century boomers who trekked from the ice-free port of Anchorage to Nome through the town of Iditarod.

The trail cuts through the struggling forests of south-central Alaska, where mild temperatures made it necessary for workers to build temporary bridges across some rivers that won't stay frozen.

Schools reopen at 96,000

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Efram Grail and Chenfield will be back in class Monday with other public school students in Columbus after month's vacation brought on by the energy shortage.

The two Eastmore School students said they enjoyed the long break but for an unusual reason. They said they learned more when school was than they might have in class.

All but 35 of Columbus' 175 schools were shut 4 for lack of natural gas heat classrooms.

In the interim, education was a "catch-it-if-you-can" — but there was plenty of opportunity.

Both the city's newspapers offered pages of educational features. Three commercial television stations and one radio station provided hours of classroom broadcasts, the educational radio let expanded its programming.

School leaders called "School Without School." "It was real education," said Grail, 17. "It gave a chance to work at own pace, do independent studies."

Sooty son saved soothed, salved

Cal. resort loans sap union's pension fund

By WALLACE TURNER
New York Times Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Real estate development loans to a spa in Southern California have seriously depleted the reserves of a union pension fund, and two trustees resigned in protest when the loans were made, according to confidential sources.

The fund supports pensions of the Culinary Workers Union in Las Vegas. Al Bramlet, the 59-year-old secretary-treasurer of the union, has been missing for a week.

"The questioned loans were made in 1973 and 1975 to Murietta Hot Springs, a company owned by Morris Shenker, a former St. Louis lawyer who now lives in Las Vegas, where he is the major owner of the company that owns the Dunes, a hotel and casino.

A source familiar with the fund trustees' actions since the fund began operations in 1971 said that Leo Lewis, a Hilton Hotels executive, resigned from the board rather than take part in a $2 million loan in 1973, and that Keith Ashworth, an executive in the Del Webb Corp., left the board in 1975 rather than take part in loans that year to Murietta Hot Springs.

Investigations of the tangled financial relationships, as well as of Bramlet's disappearance, are being conducted by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Department of Labor's Employment Retirement Income Security Administration.

MURIETTA Hot Springs gets its name from Joaquin Murietta, a 19th-century bandit who liked to take mud baths in the hot, sulfurous water that bubbles to the surface through the cracks of the Elsinore fault.

The spa, founded in 1902, was operated in a small, inconspicuous fashion until 1969, when it was purchased by the late Irving J. Kahn, who put up $250,000 of his own money and borrowed $1.1 million from the Valley National Bank of Las Vegas. In 1970, Shenker purchased a half interest.

After Kahn died in 1973, Shenker took full ownership of Murietta Hot Springs, assuming certain obligations of Kahn's.

Since 1969, 350 condominium apartments, a mobile home park with space for 1,100 units and an 18-hole golf course have been added at the spa, located some 30 miles south of Riverside, and the hotel has been enlarged to 150 rooms. And, through 1975, according to reports filed with the SEC, the spa has lost $18 million.

IN LATE 1975, Shenker tried to enlarge the $2 million his company owed the pension fund. One proposal was for the fund to agree to buy $4.6 million in mortgages held by two banks.

Finally, the fund was asked to pay monthly subsidies for three years for the Hot Springs operation and for properties of the Sierra Charter Corp.,

another Shenker-controlled company. The fund agreed.

Ashworth resigned as a trustee about this time. Neither he nor Lewis could be reached to discuss their experiences with the pension fund.

Meanwhile, Shenker beat back objections from the Nevada State Gaming Control Board and was licensed to help run gambling operations at the Dunes. He had acquired 40 per cent of Continental Connector, a public company that owned the hotel, some time earlier, and state law required that he be licensed or sell his stock.

SEC files show that Continental Connector disclosed in its 1974 report that it had joint venture dealings with Murietta Hot Springs. These are subject to SEC investigation.

IN THE dealings, Connector paid $11.2 million to Hot Springs for certain properties, including the spa's golf course. Connector also agreed to provide $5 million for operational expenses.

Last May and August, under its 1975 agreement, the pension fund of the Culinary Workers Union bought the bank mortgages, raising its investment in Hot Springs to $11,690,000.

However, that investment is somewhat larger, for throughout all of last year and up to last month, the fund paid out $200,000 to $800,000 a month in operational expenses for Hot Springs and the Sierra Charter Corp. These payments total about $5 million, according to confidential sources. In addition, Sierra Charter has borrowed $9,350,000 from the pension fund.

According to sources familiar with the fund, its current book value is $43 million, of which $26 million is owed by Shenker's companies.

PART OF this was disclosed in a Labor Department audit last year, with the result that new management trustees were named by the Southern Nevada Resort Owners' Association, the employers' negotiating group.

Last September, Richard Crane of Los Angeles, a former federal prosecutor, became the chief management trustee. He was supported by Harry Stang, his law partner, and Bernard Menke, a former deputy project manager for the Atomic Energy Commission.

The new trustees asked that their personal liability policies from Lloyd's of London, be increased from $1 million to $5 million. Lloyd's declined to renew the policy.

IN A telephone interview, Shenker said he guaranteed the loans to his companies.

"I don't know precisely how much land the companies have," he said. "I am not free to discuss the various negotiations. They involve a multitude of considerations. I personally guaranteed the loans. The pension fund will not lose one dime from these loans."

Beyond the $26 million owed by Shenker, the fund has about $17 million in reserves. A source said that $13 million was in a stock portfolio managed by a bank, and that there was a sizeable cash account.

Shenker and Murietta Hot Springs also owe the Teamsters Central States Pension fund $2,347,112.

'Green revolution' fades away before crop pest hordes

By MIKE TONER
Knight News Service

DENVER — Something troublesome seems to have happened on the way to the "green revolution" — that widely acclaimed advance in modern agriculture that promised to feed a hungry world with new, high-yield crops.

The crops have proved to be as popular with the world's insects and other pests as they have with the people of the undeveloped countries that they were supposed to feed.

In India a tiny midge, which usually reached epidemic proportions in the rice paddies only once every three or four years, has been abundant every year since the traditional strains of rice were replaced with new high-yield varieties.

And the outbreak of southern corn leaf blight in the United States in 1970, which wiped out nearly 10 per cent of the nation's corn harvest before it was checked, took its heaviest toll in fields that were planted with certain strains of high-yield hybrid corn.

One of the apparent reasons for the problem is that the breeding of new strains of crops has virtually eliminated built-in genetic differences — the natural variation from plant to plant that usually assures that at least some of them will be able to resist pest attacks, according to two University of California pest experts.

Newer varieties have replaced local varieties over large areas, and they become susceptible to disease of insect pests, so devastating losses can occur over the entire planted area, Dr. Ray F. Smith and Dr. Donald J. Calvert told the American Association for the Advancement of Science meeting in Denver.

As a result, pest control — always a concern of the world's farmers — is expected to become even more important in the future if the gains in yields from the new "super crops" are ever going to fulfill their promise.

Throughout the world an estimated 15 to 30 per cent of all crops are lost each year to insects. In a country like India, such staggering losses can often make the difference between a barely adequate food supply and starvation.

Rice, which is the staple food of more than 2 billion people and the world's most important food crop, is a major concern.

India, for instance, loses an average of 36 per cent of its rice crop each year to insects alone.

"If the land devoted to rice production in India were to yield as much as that which is presently obtained in Japan, then the amount of rice produced would be enough for almost twice the entire human population of Southeast Asia," Smith said.

Japan, which uses a variety of intensive crop protection measures, loses less than 2 per cent.

But such sophisticated measures — which often rely heavily on petroleum-based, energy-intensive chemicals — pose some environmental risk and are often too costly for the farmers.

The United Nations and other international organizations, however, are placing a growing emphasis on pest control as a means of increasing food production.

"If the losses to insect pests could be reduced, food supplies could be increased without bringing new land and other limited resources into play," says Calvert.

"In fact if only 20 per cent of the current losses of rice could be prevented, the increased supplies of food would provide the foundation for an adequate diet for 171 million people."

With the limited land remaining for expanded agricultural production in many parts of the world and limited water for irrigation, the California scientists warn, that may be one of the few ways left to assure that the promises of the "green revolution" are realized.

New stress given agriculture research

By WILLIAM PRATER
Associated Press

PEORIA, Ill. — With U.S. farm surpluses gone and food shortages around the world a possibility, the nation's agricultural schools are pushing for more research and the money to pay for it.

During the past years of the past decade or so, most schools did little to grow. Now they're seeking more scientists, better laboratories and bigger budgets, and they're finding the federal government increasingly receptive.

FOOD, after all, figures in world power relationships as well as American export ledgers.

"In the '50s and '60s we had this big surplus," said Russell McGregor of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges. "The question was 'why should we spend more money on ag research when we've got food coming out of our ears?'"

For the past 20 years, he said, agricultural schools did not grow at all. "In the '60s, there was an actual loss of ag scientists working in the U.S."

Now it's a different world.

There is a need for food, and colleges and universities are gearing up to meet the increased demand. They are following up on the so-called "Green Revolution" of the late 1960s, studying "foliar fertilization" and "cell-free" agriculture and developing hardier varieties of old staples such as apples.

THE AGRICULTURE school at the University of Illinois, anticipating a new era for research into food productivity, is seeking state financing for an eight-year, $115-million overhaul of its aging and crowded physical facilities.

Michigan State University is seeking a $3.2-million increase in the $10 million budget for its Agricultural Experiment Station. The priority there is on operating costs — tural schools are asking for, and getting, more money for research.

more researchers, better pay.

Similar requests are being made throughout the country.

"We're all doing it. The only difference is in the packaging," said John Mahlstede, associate director of Iowa State's Agricultural Experiment Station.

Mahlstede said experiment stations routinely have sought budget increases since World War II, but the big difference now is that everyone is listening.

THE FEDERAL government allocated $126.7 million to all experiment stations in fiscal 1977, 12 per cent above the 1976 budget. The National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges is seeking a 36 per cent increase for 1978.

Other pending legislation would appropriate up to $150 million between fiscal 1977 and 1979 under a competitive grant program for promising lines of agricultural research.

Under the 1975 Famine Prevention Bill sponsored by Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., Congress authorized a partnership between land-grant colleges and the federal Agency for International Development to find ways to solve the world's food problems.

The first report from that partnership is due in June. Meanwhile, colleges are offering their own solutions.

IN THE late 1960s, development of dwarf wheat varieties and other breakthroughs led to the "Green Revolution" that tripled wheat production in many areas of countries such as India and Mexico. Applying the same principles to soybeans, Illinois researchers are developing smaller high-protein soybean plants. They say these "semi-dwarf" plants could increase yields by some 30 per cent because they would resist "lodging," or falling over which results in bean loss, and could be grown closer together.

In all, about 25 University of Illinois agronomists are involved in soybean research, in cooperation with the USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

Throughout the Midwest and South, scientists are studying "foliar fertilization," a method that allows growing plants, not just soil, to be sprayed with fertilizer. Iowa State researchers claimed in 1974 that such methods could increase soybean yields by some 30 per cent. The process now is being tested on rice, wheat and other crops and could be available to farmers as early as next summer.

OTHER Illinois scientists are studying "cell-free" mass production of food by man-made photosynthesis. That could make reality of science fiction foods such as "sea-weed steaks" and "vegetableburgers."

Less mind-boggling but no less significant is a project at the University of Illinois Department of Horticulture. In cooperation with agricultural experiment stations in Indiana and New Jersey, scientists are developing three new apple varieties with genetic immunity to scab, a disease which can cause heavy crop losses.

One of the most outspoken advocates of the resurgence of agricultural research is Dr. Sylvan H. Wittwer, director of the experiment station at Michigan State.

In a report to Congress, Wittwer said research on crops which would provide natural fertilizer to the soil "has been neglected to the point of a national disgrace and tragedy."

sion, perhaps as part of the omnibus farm bill.

THROUGH all the technical papers and calls for additional research comes the theme that the United States should increase its role as food basket for the world.

Government figures indicate that Canada exports some 75 per cent of the food grain and soybeans it produces, while U.S. exports are about 25 per cent.

During the 1975-76 crop year, October to October, the United States exported 82 million metric tons of grain and soybeans, about a third of the total produced.

McGregor advocates more, for the well being of the world's people and the good of American relations abroad.

"The North American monopoly on grain shipments is far more concentrated than oil from OPEC (the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries)," he said.

Gas-oil shipment agreement near

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter has indicated the United States and Canada are near agreement on plans to ship Alaska natural gas — and possibly Alaska oil — across Canada to the lower 48 states, according to a Seattle newspaper.

By Sept. 30, the President intends to determine the route to be followed by a natural gas pipeline from Alaska's North Slope, the Post-Intelligencer said in today's editions.

Cutting lead time on A-plants 'unrealistic'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's goal of reducing from 10 to six years the costly lead time needed to put a nuclear power plant in operation is unrealistic, a congressional study said Saturday.

"Long lead time contributes greatly to the high costs of building nuclear power plants, which in turn have contributed to many utilities' decisions to defer or cancel construction of planned power plants," the report said.

The study was prepared by the General Accounting Office, an investigative and auditing agency for Congress, during an evaluation of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's licensing and other regulatory activities.

GAO noted that the commission has changed some of its administrative practices in hopes of reducing lead times to seven or eight years.

'Small' sum saves U.S. program to explore the planets

By EDWARD EDELSON
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — It was only a $10-million appropriation in a federal budget of over $400 billion, but for the beleaguered scientists of the American program for exploring the planets, it was the equivalent of the cavalry arriving at the last minute in one of those old westerns.

The $10 million was added to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration budget to study a possible follow-up to the Viking mission to Mars. That may not sound like much, but it amounted to a reprieve for the planetary exploration program, one of the most successful efforts in NASA's history, which was about to wink out for lack of money.

THE OUTGOING Ford administration had no allocation for planetary missions in its proposed budget. If that had not been changed, there would have been no trips to other planets after the Mariner Jupiter-Saturn mission, scheduled for August.

In other words, a planetary team whose record is unmatched and whose last mission — the Viking trip to Mars — was its most triumphant would have been disbanded.

The reactions of scientists to the $10-million proposal showed how great their fears had been. Gerald Soffen, the chief Viking scientist, said he was "thrilled." Carl Sagan, another Viking scientist, said he was "personally delighted." The fact that the money came directly from the White House was especially cheering to the scientists. It wasn't a lot of money, but it was an indication that someone cared.

Their responses to questions indicated that the scientists have been thinking about that next mission to Mars. It's clear that a lot of negotiating will be needed before anything resembling a final design can be prepared. Biologists want one thing, geologists want another, atmospheric scientists want something else; eventually they'll agree on some sort of compromise.

TIME IS part of the thinking. Spacecraft to Mars can be launched only at times when the positions of the two planets are right. The next such launch opportunity comes in 1979. That's too soon. After that, it could be 1981. If not, the scientists will have to wait until 1984.

A 1984 mission would give plenty of time for planning a really effective spacecraft. But the temptation not to wait those three years, to get something started toward Mars in 1981, is there. So the choice of date will have an important effect on the kind of spacecraft we send.

The life-detection experiments that are being run by the two Viking spacecraft that now are on Mars will have an equally important effect. Those experiments have produced tantalizingly provocative evidence that there might be living microbes on Mars. But the evidence is equivocal. Most Viking biologists lean toward believing that the experimental results are caused by the strange chemistry of the Martian surface, but a few lean toward the belief that living organisms have been detected.

Some experiments that could settle the issue will start later this month. A foot-deep hole is being dug by the Viking I spacecraft. Soil from the bottom of the hole will then be tested for the presence of life. The hole is being dug in an effort to eliminate the effects of the killing ultraviolet rays that bathe the Martian surface.

MAYBE THERE will be a definitive answer by this summer. More likely, disagreements by scientists about the meaning of the results will continue. Either way, the Viking results will influence the design of the life-detection experiments that inevitably will be on the next spacecraft to Mars.

That spacecraft probably will have wheels. One continuing theme by Viking scientists is the frustration of seeing some fascinating material only a short distance away and yet being unable to get there. If time permits, the next Mars visitor probably will be a rover.

SOME TIME in the future, an effort could be made to bring a Martian soil sample back to earth. That's a tricky business. Such a sample would have to be protected from earthly contamination, and the earth would also have to be protected from any conceivable Martian organisms. Any mission designed to bring back a piece of Mars would run for about three years and cost several billion dollars, Sagan estimated.

It's a long way from the $10 million proposed for the next NASA budget to such multi-billion-dollar missions. But the key fact is that the door to such missions is being kept open. Without that relatively tiny (by space standards) sum, the U.S. era of planetary exploration would effectively have been ended. Now, it's still alive.

Astronomers 'hear' pollutants

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers who normally look billions of miles into space have turned their radio telescope back to earth and discovered a simple way to monitor atmospheric chemicals and pollutants. To find out what chemicals are floating in the distant recesses of our galaxy, scientists tune in to the natural radio signals generated by certain molecules.

Astronomers at Harvard College Observatory and the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., found that the same principle also works closer to home.

The National Science Foundation said Saturday that the radio telescope at Haystack Observatory in Westford, Mass., so far has detected and measured water vapor, ozone and carbon monoxide in the upper levels of the atmosphere.

THE foundation said the importance of the development is that it opens the way for relatively inexpensive, ground-based monitoring of atmospheric areas far above the level of conventional weather balloons.

The first tests probed the mesosphere, an area 30 to 50 miles high normally accessible only to expensive devices such as rockets or special balloons.

Harrison E. Radford, an astronomer on the project, said in an interview that the key to the technique is the supersensitive microwave receivers recently developed, making detection possible where previous efforts had failed.

"We used the radio telescope because it had a good microwave receiver on it, but actually you don't need the rest of the telescope at all," Radford continued. Radford said molecules like water vapor send out natural radio waves at distinct frequencies. Measuring frequency variations also can tell scientists the approximate altitude of molecular concentrations. "If you know the frequency of the molecule, you can tune your receiver to pick up the molecule broadcast," Radford said.

The National Science

Foundation financed the project primarily to see if it could monitor ozone, a form of oxygen in the high atmosphere that shields the earth from high-energy solar radiation.

Ozone concentrations constantly change and vary widely around the earth. It therefore is difficult to tell if pollutants are damaging the protective layer, as some scientists believe.

37-death crash blamed on pilot

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The plane's captain was at fault in the fiery crash of an American Airlines jetliner that killed 37 persons on St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, the National Transportation Safety Board said Saturday.

"It is evident that the captain could have extracted himself twice from a dangerous situation and could have avoided this accident," the board reported.

The airliner crashed last April 27.

The board said Capt. Arthur J. Bujnowski did not follow some prescribed landing procedures. His main fault, it said, was not aborting a landing attempt after the Boeing 727 was hit by turbulence during the approach to Harry S Truman airport.

AFTER HE violated procedures by landing, Bujnowski failed to apply maximum braking that could have brought the plane to a halt. Between his initial decision to land, and before braking, Bujnowski had decided to try to take off again, but then decided against that because of a shortage of runway.

The board reported this sequence:

—The aircraft was making a routine approach to the airport after a flight from New York when it was buffeted by turbulence common to the area just as it was about to touch down about 1,000 feet past the runway threshold.

—The turbulence caused the plane to "float" a few seconds, preventing it from landing immediately. By the time the captain landed, he was 2,800 feet down the 4,658-foot runway. He thought he was too far down for a safe landing and decided to take off again.

—Bujnowski added power, but realizing that the rate of acceleration would not be enough for a safe takeoff, he applied brakes to try to stop. But he failed to take all steps to bring the aircraft to a quick stop, including lowering the nose wheel to the ground, extending the spoilers and using maximum reverse thrust.

—The 727 ran off the end of the runway, up an embankment, through a fence, across a road and into a gasoline station, where it burst into flames. Of the 88 persons aboard, 35 passengers and two cabin attendants died. One person on the ground was injured.

The board said Bujnowski had selected a 30-degree landing flap setting for his approach to the runway, rather than the 40-degree setting which company procedures dictated. The different setting caused the plane to land 250 feet farther down the runway after it was hit by the turbulence.

THE CAPTAIN also should have followed company procedures and initiated a go-around — landing and flying around the airport again — as soon as he regained control of his aircraft after the turbulence, the board said.

A "second opportunity to avoid the accident," the board held, "came when he decided to land the aircraft; he should have applied maximum performance stopping procedures . . . the captain should have been able to stop the aircraft on the runway and certainly within the confines of the 500-foot runway overrun.

"At the very least, a much lower velocity impact would have occurred," the report stated.

The board said Bujnowski testified he did not know why he did not use all the available deceleration means.

The report said that although the cause of the accident "involves the captain's actions before and after the touchdown, his lack of substantive information about the aircraft's stop and go-around performance capabilities seriously affected his ability to make a proper decision in this situation."

The board said it believes aircraft pilots often undergo touch-and-go practice landing under ideal conditions and may have little knowledge of the distance required to execute a go-around under varied circumstances.

'Small' sum saves U.S. program to explore the planets

By EDWARD EDELSON
Knight News Service

NEW YORK — It was only a $10-million appropriation in a federal budget of over $400 billion, but for the beleaguered scientists of the American program for exploring the planets, it was the equivalent of the cavalry arriving at the last minute in one of those old westerns.

The $10 million was added to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration budget to study a possible follow-up to the Viking mission to Mars. That may not sound like much, but it amounted to a reprieve for the planetary exploration program, one of the most successful efforts in NASA's history, which was about to wink out for lack of money.

Sleep-habits reveal your personality

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK — Do you sleep in the nude? Never mind. It's no longer the "in" question. The question is in what position.

Let's say you sleep on your back. That's the "royal" position. It shows you feel you're the king or queen of the universe of the sleep world. And also the day world.

On your stomach, kind of spread-eagled over the bed? Then you're a person who wants complete control over your life. You're dominating the available bed space by your position.

Or if you scrunch up in the full fetal position, you're afraid to let yourself go fully, to experience life's joys and sorrows.

That's the word from Dr. Samuel Dunkell, a New York psychiatrist who has just written a book called "Sleep Positions, the Night Language of the Body." The book may become the biggest conversation piece since "Body Language."

"In sleep we act out the dramas of our lives, using our bodies instead of our speech to express our joys and griefs, our loves and hates," Dr. Dunkell writes. "In the night world, each of us becomes the pantomimist on his own personal stage."

The night world — dreams in particular — has been the grist of psychiatrists and psychoanalysts since Freud, but how did Dr. Dunkell get into the positional side of it?

He began his research informally 12 years ago, he says, and has continued it through interviews with patients — almost all of whom know how they sleep. He says he was first intrigued by the subject when a young woman explained that she slept on her stomach, and on a bias in the bed — thereby squeezing anybody else out of it.

She was doing the same in her day world — especially in her relations with men.

"It was a hard thing for me to grasp that there was this separate universe," says Dr. Dunkell, 57. "But the way a man sleeps is the way he lives."

In his book, Dr. Dunkell cites changes in patients' sleep positions after a problem has been resolved.

He tells about couples and how they talk to each other by the way they sleep — saying things they can't while awake.

The most romantic sleep position for couples, he says, is the hug — two people face to face. Another romantic and more common sleep position is the spoon, when the couple nestles front to back like two spoons in a drawer.

Couples even shift sleep position in tandem as one tires of sleeping on one side, he says. As a marriage wears on, they may gradually move apart. That's normal, he finds.

But there's also a deliberate freeze maneuver when one partner keeps moving farther and farther away — definitely sending a message.

Dunkell also notes that a man or woman whose spouse is absent frequently will sleep better by moving into the space formerly occupied by the partner — a form of re-establishing contact.

Some mysteries of the sleep world still elude Dr. Dunkell.

His own sleep position? "Semi-fetal," he says.

Why?
"I don't know."

LAS VEGAS, N.M. (AP) — Cloudy skies hampered search efforts Saturday for a light airplane believed down in northern New Mexico with three men from Denver, Colo., aboard.

Some Important Points About Having Executive Tax Service Do Your Income Tax Returns...

1. The new 1976 tax law has hundreds of pages that could affect your income tax liability. We can help you take advantage of every credit and deduction it allows.
2. We work just as hard to save your money as you do to earn it.
3. We do the work at your convenience—in the privacy of our office, or yours, when you want it done. We'll also come to your home.
4. We will completely explain your completed income tax returns, so that you are thoroughly acquainted with how your taxes were prepared.
5. We base our charges only on the complexity of your returns, never on the amount of your income or refund. You'll like what this does to your fee.

Scrabble with Lester no friendly little game

Associated Press

BERKELEY — Scrabble? It's just a parlor game, I sneered, something people play on the dining room table on a rainy day when there's nothing better to do.

That's what I thought until I met Lester Schonbrun. Our meeting, as fate would have it, took place over a Scrabble board.

Schonbrun says he's one of the top three Scrabble players in the country — maybe in the world. I had no reason to doubt him after our game. In a few short minutes I learned the agony of defeat, losing by the indecently lopsided score of 485-141.

I KNEW I was in trouble when he brought a chess timer to the rickety table, along with a battered Scrabble set and a dictionary that looked like it had been mauled by a bear. The chess timer, two wind-up clocks that work alternately to time each player, usually is set to give opponents 15 minutes apiece. Exceed your time limit and each minute is worth 10 points for your opponent.

Schonbrun honed his skills in New York City, where several chess clubs cater to the Scrabble crowd. That's where most of the top players are, he said.

"When I started, the good players were spotting me 150 or 175 points and still beating me," he recalled. "But I realized that I was good and I kept at it, and eventually I was the one giving the odds and winning. Just before

Inmate's rope made out of toilet paper

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A rope that was found in a routine investigation in a Lexington jail cell was 140 feet long. It was made out of toilet paper.

"I thought I'd seen or heard about everything but this has got to be a first," jailer Harold Buchignani said.

Inmate Robert Stafford, 35, of London, Ky., apparently had braided the paper into a rope that would support three to five pounds and could be lowered from his jail cell window.

Stafford was placed in a maximum-security area of the detention center, but he probably will not face any charges from his invention.

"I mean, what can you charge him with?" Buchignani asked. "Improper use of toilet paper?"

LESTER SCHONBRUN
"Read the Dictionary"

we left New York, in 1970, no one wanted to play me."

SCHONBRUN, who admits he has hustled a few games with unsuspecting "fish," says the most he has won at Scrabble is $120. There is no official championship for the game, although there are some tournaments on the East Coast.

Scrabble was created in 1931 by architect Alfred Butts. It was originally sold by friends before Selchow & Righter Co. of Bay Shore, N.Y., was licensed to market it in 1953.

Scrabble is played on a board of 225 squares. Each player chooses seven lettered tiles from a pile of 100, and the object is to spell words on the board, covering as many of the red, blue or yellow extra-point squares as possible to boost your score.

Use of all seven tiles in one move — a bingo — means a 50-point bonus. The winner has the most points when all the tiles are gone.

"YOU HAVE to know a lot of words," said Schonbrun, a muscular, balding man of middle age who works part time as a taxi dispatcher. "You have to read the dictionary, you have to remember words that are used on you — and you have to know the tricks."

Some of the tricks border on the dishonest, but it's all within the rules. When there's money on the line, as there often is when top players meet, you have to go for every advantage.

"Sometimes, if I can see that my opponent is intimidated by my vocabulary, I'll slip in phony words, words that don't mean anything. If he challenges, of course, I lose a turn. But if he doesn't, I get the points."

OUR GAME started out well enough. Schonbrun set the clocks so I had 25 minutes to five for him, then played AFFECT, which netted him 36 points. I came back quickly with BANAL, a good word, I thought, but worth only 11 points, and I was in a hole which got deeper with each passing move.

Schonbrun put down HERON, and also made the words HA and EL with adjoining tiles, giving him 47 points. The best I could do was BOATS, for a paltry eight points.

Then it was JAVA and AHA for him. DEBIT for me. He played ON and I countered with TAIL, then he slapped down WELDS and I played LOOPS. Suddenly all seven of his letters leaped onto the board for REMOUNTS, while all I could do was NEAT. The score was 238 for him, 62 for me.

MAYBE I can make a comeback, I thought, really dazzle him. After all, words are my business. I even cheated when he went to the bathroom, switching one word for a better one after I shut off my clock.

But Lester Schonbrun works in mysterious ways and with mysterious words. How often does DUI pop up in polite conversation? Occasions to use GYVE in a story are rare, and ZEUGMAS is not part of my vocabulary. He blasts me with another seven-tile word.

IGNORES. Then, mercifully, it's over.

"There's an old saying in Scrabble. There are no bad letters, just bad combinations," he says, pointing at the board.

"If we were playing for a dollar a point, you'd be in big trouble."

NEW YORK — Do you sleep in the nude? Never mind. It's no longer the "in" question. The question is in what position.

Let's say you sleep on your back. That's the "royal" position. It shows you feel you're the king or queen of the universe of the sleep world. And also the day world.

On your stomach, kind of spread-eagled over the bed? Then you're a person who wants complete control over your life. You're dominating the available bed space by your position.

Or if you scrunch up in the full fetal position, you're afraid to let yourself go fully, to experience life's joys and sorrows.

That's the word from Dr. Samuel Dunkell, a New York psychiatrist who has just written a book called "Sleep Positions, the Night Language of the Body." The book may become the biggest conversation piece since "Body Language."

"In sleep we act out the dramas of our lives, using our bodies instead of our speech to express our joys and griefs, our loves and hates," Dr. Dunkell writes. "In the night world, each of us becomes the pantomimist on his own personal stage."

The night world — dreams in particular — has been the grist of psychiatrists and psychoanalysts since Freud, but how did Dr. Dunkell get into the positional side of it?

He began his research informally 12 years ago, he says, and has continued it through interviews with patients — almost all of whom know how they sleep. He says he was first intrigued by the subject when a young woman explained that she slept on her stomach, and on a bias in the bed — thereby squeezing anybody else out of it.

She was doing the same in her day world — especially in her relations with men.

"It was a hard thing for me to grasp that there was this separate universe," says Dr. Dunkell, 57. "But the way a man sleeps is the way he lives."

In his book, Dr. Dunkell cites changes in patients' sleep positions after a problem has been resolved.

He tells about couples and how they talk to each other by the way they sleep — saying things they can't while awake.

The most romantic sleep position for couples, he says, is the hug — two people face to face. Another romantic and more common sleep position is the spoon, when the couple nestles front to back like two spoons in a drawer.

Couples even shift sleep position in tandem as one tires of sleeping on one side, he says. As a marriage wears on, they may gradually move apart. That's normal, he finds.

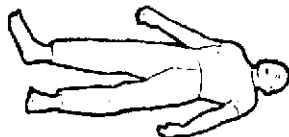

But there's also a deliberate freeze maneuver when one partner keeps moving farther and farther away — definitely sending a message.

Dunkell also notes that a man or woman whose spouse is absent frequently will sleep better by moving into the space formerly occupied by the partner — a form of re-establishing contact.

Some mysteries of the sleep world still elude Dr. Dunkell.

His own sleep position? "Semi-fetal," he says.

Why?
"I don't know."

LBSU protestors hit Shah of Iran

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Alarmed at what they called the Shah of Iran's "fascist regime," some 75 people demonstrated at Long Beach State University Saturday during a day-long conference on Third World literature.

But their well-planned protest lost some of its impact when a scheduled guest speaker, who they said was a "puppet" of the Shah's, failed to show up.

Nonetheless, the Iranian Students Association's demonstration, complemented by political banners, chanting and throw-away leaflets, overshadowed lectures by Third World experts.

The guest speaker, Reza Baraheni, an Iranian poet and educator, told coordinators of the university workshop that he would not attend the conference because he feared for his own safety and was worried that his presentation might be disrupted by the emotional demonstrators.

IRANIAN student activist Ardan Razmandeh mounted the platform and alleged that Baraheni is an agent of Savak — the Iranian security and intelligence organization. He said Baraheni, now on a speaking tour of the United States, is trying to discredit stories of imprisonment and torture of political dissenters in Iran.

"I wish he was here so we could prove he does not represent Iranians," Razmandeh added as Iranian students stood and chanted. "Long live Fedayee," a reference to the People's Fedayee Guerrillas, said to be an anti-Shah revolutionary Marxist-Leninist group in Iran. Baraheni sent word of his cancellation to LBSU comparative literature chairman Dr. Peter Carr.

According to Iranian Students Association pamphlets, the torture of political prisoners in Iran is a routine practice and Iranians who speak out are subject to harassment by Savak.

However, the U.S. State Department reported in November that its investigation failed to turn up any evidence of such activities on the part of the Iranian government.

About 200 persons attended Saturday's workshop, a cooperative effort involving several LBSU and San Diego State University departments. In the morning's opening symposium, Carr charged that "the United States is very much involved in the Third World," defined as the developing nations of the Middle East, Latin America and Africa, as well as American Indians.

"THE UNITED States is not involved in the Third World in ways all of us approve, to put it mildly," Carr said. "Today we want to explore what we are doing to those other places."

In a workshop entitled "African Literature and Ideology," Mazisi Kunene, a South African novelist and UCLA linguistics professor, said the really significant aspect of Alex Haley's "Roots" is its "reaffirmation that there is a relationship between the United States and Africa."

The best-selling novel and TV adaptation helped to crack the Hollywood concept of Africa as a "jungle," since "only 5 per cent of the continent is jungle," Kunene said.

Altogetherness is a hot L.B. tub for 6

The six people splashing around in the steaming tub, slightly larger than a bird bath, are participating in perhaps the latest recreational pastime to hit Long Beach — redwood hot tubs.

Hot tubs are not new, of course. American Indians knew the benefits of hot springs long before later settlers turned the natural outlets into spas. The Japanese have used hot tubs for centuries.

So along comes the Old Faithful Hot Tub Works, 2148 E. Fourth St., the first commercial business in Long Beach devoted to redwood tubs. Its grand opening will be Saturday.

The affable owners, Myles Karpman and Mel Amann, believe a hot tub movement is developing among energy-conscious Californians looking for closer-to-home recreational ideas that are relatively inexpensive.

The 32-year-old Amann first soaked in hot tubs at an acquaintance's home in Santa Barbara. He was an instant fan and had one

$4 billion federal measure Works funds bypass small cities

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Congress is hurrying through a $4 billion measure to extend the job-producing Public Works Employment Act, but officials in many smaller cities in the Long Beach area doubt if they will see much of the money.

"It sounds like the big cities got to them," said Morris Vance, city administrator of Lomita. "I wish they would just use the same formula as last time."

Vance's complaint stems from modifications of the distribution formula which were included in the bill passed by the House on Feb. 24.

When Congress passed the first public works bill over former President Ford's veto last year, the prime criterion by which cities became eligible for a share of the money was having an unemployment rate higher than the national average.

Now the House version has changed that to a formula giving 40 per cent credit for the unemployment rate, 40 per cent for the actual number of unemployed in the city, 10 per cent based on level of income in the city, and a bonus of 10 per cent for a local government or 5 per cent for a school district as opposed to states or specialized governmental units. Cities below the 6.5 per cent unemployment level would be totally ineligible for project funds.

"Our unemployment rate was even higher than the county average," Vance said, "and we were ranked very high but just missed getting any of the money last time. If they add in the number of unemployed, all the money is going to go to the big cities like Los Angeles."

Vance explained that even with a high unemployment rate (8.6 per cent in December, according to state figures) that works out to fewer than 2,000 persons when applied to Lomita's population of 19,336.

(Exact figures on the number of unemployed in a city would have to be certified by the state later.)

"Even if L.A.'s rate is lower than ours, when you start figuring on the basis of their population that means hundreds of thousands of people," Vance said. The unemployment rate in the city of Los Angeles is 8.6 per cent — well below the countywide average of 9.7 per cent.

Lomita still has pending before the Department of Commerce's Economic Development Administration (EDA) — the agency responsible for distribution of the public works bill grants — three applications totaling about $825,000.

The work proposed involves improvements to the water system, reconstruction of some residential streets and construction of recreational facilities on a shared basis with the school district.

Just being large doesn't guarantee funding, though, as neighboring Torrance can attest. The third largest city in Los Angeles County, Torrance's population of 134,867 is nearly seven times that of Lomita, but Torrance will probably get no funding for its $2.7 million in projects.

When Torrance applied for funds last October, it used the county's unemployment rate — permissible under the old rules. However, the new House-passed bill re-

Blocking Terminal Island site

Legislator against onshore LNG plant

By JOHN SHEEHAN
Staff Writer

A San Bernardino legislator blocking construction of a liquefied natural gas plant on Terminal Island said Saturday he is also opposed to building such a facility anywhere on land.

The best place, said Democratic Assemblyman Terry Goggin, is offshore, miles from land, to reduce the risk to people and property if the plant explodes.

Goggin, chairman of the Assembly's permanent subcommittee on energy, also said his pending legislation to block construction of an LNG plant on Terminal Island does not conflict with the Brown administration's "one-stop" energy permit agency proposal.

It does conflict though, he acknowledged, with a Brown announcement Friday that an offshore site is the most difficult and time-consuming of four proposals for locating an LNG plant in California.

Goggin made the remarks as he stepped in front of a television camera to participate in a public affairs program broadcast live Saturday from the pier in Los Angeles Harbor where the Liberian oil tanker Sansinena exploded Dec. 17.

On camera, Goggin said an LNG explosion on Terminal Island "would claim 98,000 lives," a remark immediately disputed by Keith McKinney, president of Western LNG Co., which is proposing to build the plant.

"We've conducted 48 hours of hearings," Goggin said, "and our conclusion is that (an LNG plant) is very hazardous. It's like a nuclear reactor."

"Dr. Edward Teller, who developed the H-bomb, has testified an LNG explosion would be like Hiroshima," Goggin said.

"The plants should be remotely sited," he said. "It's irresponsible to put them in population centers."

McKinney said the Terminal Island plant, or others proposed for Oxnard and Pt. Conception, could be ready by 1981 if approval is granted by the end of this year. An offshore site, he said, would not only be more expensive but couldn't be built before 1985.

"It's feasible to do anything if you're willing to spend enough of the consumers' money," he shot back at Goggin.

Away from the camera, Goggin said an offshore site "is a minimum, and then we should look at the economics of LNG."

He said that if LNG is shipped to California, West Coast gas users will pay 25 per cent more for the fuel than consumers in other parts of the nation if the price of domestic natural gas is deregulated.

Goggin said he plans to outline his proposals for deregulation of domestic natural gas and construction of an offshore LNG facility Tuesday at a Town Hall forum in Los Angeles.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

THE FIRST two years in the life of 20-year-old Mark Kelby Stahl are an open book to me. If I could fill in the blanks of the other 18 years, perhaps I'd discover how Mark Stahl's baby book and birth certificate came to be found on the playground at Lincoln Elementary School in Long Beach a few days ago.

Lincoln School is located at 1175 E. 11th St. That's a long way from Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, Ohio, where Mark Kelby Stahl was born at 6:52 a.m., Monday, Dec. 31, 1956, to Suzann Staley Stahl, 20, wife of 25-year-old Earl Stahl, Jr. The attending physician was William Henry Fries, M.D., the baby weighed 6 pounds 12 1/2 ounces and impressed on his birth certificate a right footprint measuring 2 3/4 inches from big toe to heel.

I know baby Mark Stahl even if I don't know the man he became. The reason I know as much about him as I do is that Mark's recovered baby book (containing the birth certificate) was turned over to me by Ardis Bynum, a community worker at Lincoln School. The book was found by a Lincoln pupil who took it to the school office for disposition.

Maybe Mark himself lost or abandoned the book while residing in Long Beach or visiting this city. Maybe it came into possession of a relative, who in turn lost it to a house burglar who discarded the book as worthless loot. We can only theorize. Somehow, by fair or foul means, that baby book got to Lincoln playground.

Here are some of the things I know about Mark Kelby Stahl:

When he was born his parents resided at 88 Rosena, Madison-on-the-Lake, Ohio. The child was baptized at First Presbyterian Church, Bucyrus, Ohio, later attending the Episcopal church in that community.

Ohio is given as his mother's birthplace, Indiana as his father's. The family made frequent trips to South Bend, Ind., which suggests that city might have been the place of Mark's father's birth.

Mark was a bright baby. He walked unaided at 9 months, used simple words at 12 months, and was hanging up his clothes at age 2. At 2 he also sang "I'm a Little Teapot," played Hide-and-Seek, Ring Around the Rosy and Peek-a-Boo, and thanked God at meals.

He was scared when he took his first auto ride — to Dayton at 15 months. He quickly lost that fear and clamored for more car trips. He danced and sang to the television set and the family record player. He liked spinach, squash, bananas, little children and stuffed animals.

The entries made in the baby book by Mark's mother could apply to millions of infants, but there is only one human being whose birth registration card bears the number 14876, issued by the commissioner of health, City of Dayton, and filed on Jan. 4, 1957.

The baby book probably has more sentimental value to his parents than to Mark. But the birth certificate is of practical concern to him. It tells who he is, how old he is, his nationality. The certificate is important to his work, school and marriage rights. his eligibility for a passport and property inheritance, for public office.

"People Talk" has had good results in reuniting people and property. I hope the luck holds in the case of Mark Kelby Stahl, once of Madison-on-the-Lake, Ohio, and now whereabouts unknown.

If he's out there somewhere, we'll find him. If he's not, God bless him and his parents and say we tried.

NOW HEAR THIS: Linda Bray came to the right place when she asked me to say something about the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation of Long Beach. As you know, I recently became a member of diabetes "club," and I'm determined to do all I can to help my fellow sufferers — and myself.

Children with diabetes face larger problems than adults who have the disease. That's a medical fact, and the consequences are most severe.

In controlling diabetes, knowledge is help. And that's what the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation of Long Beach seeks to provide — knowledge and information, and hope.

The foundation is new. Many parents of diabetic children haven't gotten the word of its existence. Maybe they don't know about the meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Naples Elementary School library, 5537 The Toledo.

For more information, call Linda Bray, 424-1941, after 4 p.m. week days, or Barbara Scott, the foundation president, at 438-5293, after 3 p.m.

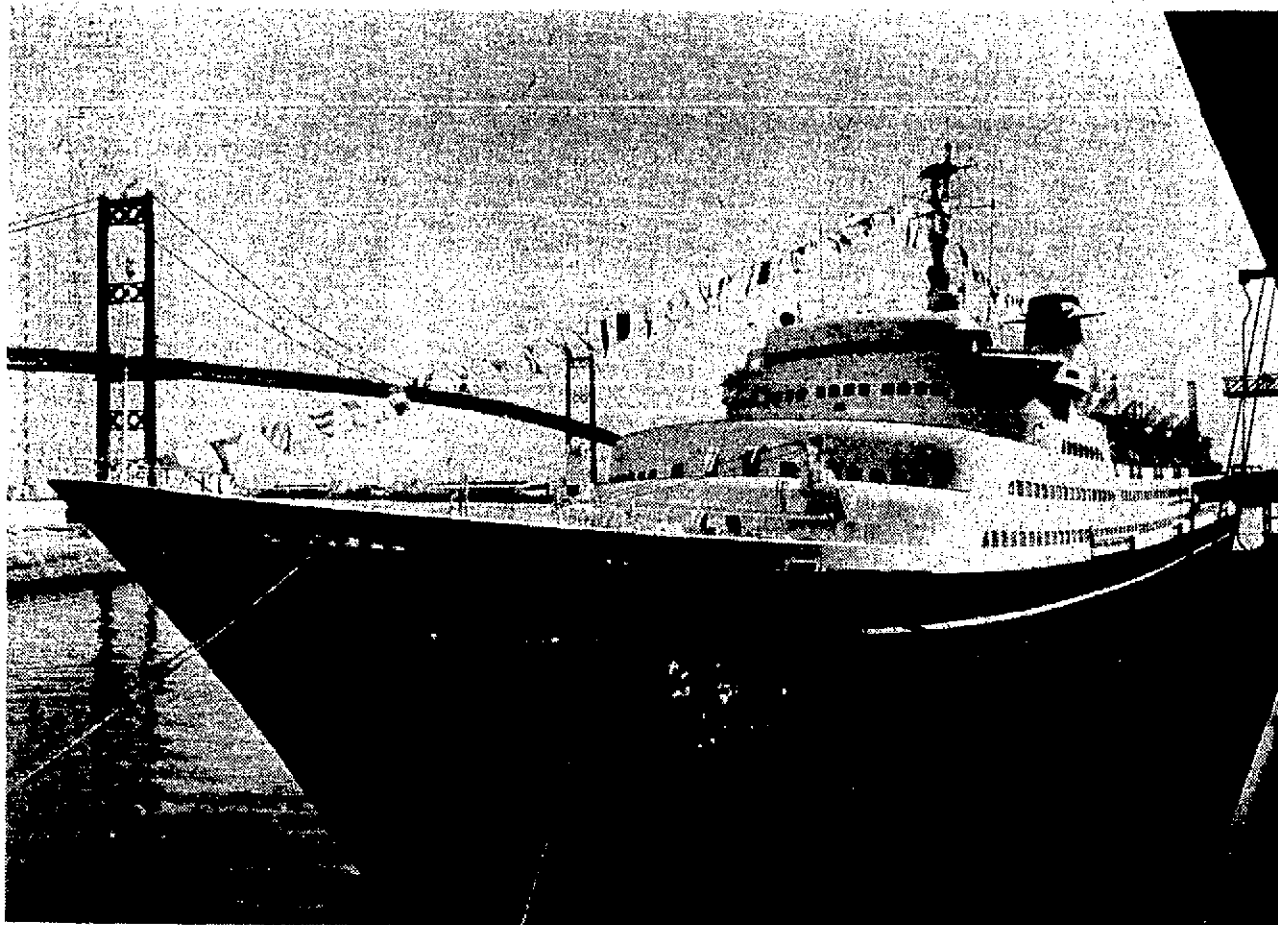

I hope to meet you at Naples Elementary School library Tuesday night. We've got a lot in common — diabetes and a love for children.

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

THE FIRST two years in the life of 20-year-old Mark Kelby Stahl are an open book to me. If I could fill in the blanks of the other 18 years, perhaps I'd discover how Mark Stahl's baby book and birth certificate came to be found on the playground at Lincoln Elementary School in Long Beach a few days ago.

Lincoln School is located at 1175 E. 11th St. That's a long way from Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, Ohio, where Mark Kelby Stahl was born at 6:52 a.m., Monday, Dec. 31, 1956, to Suzann Staley Stahl, 20, wife of 25-year-old Earl Stahl, Jr. The attending physician was William Henry Fries, M.D., the baby weighed 6 pounds 12 1/2 ounces and impressed on his birth certificate a right footprint measuring 2 1/2 inches from big toe to heel.

I know baby Mark Stahl even if I don't know the man he became. The reason I know as much about him as I do is that Mark's recovered baby book (containing the birth certificate) was turned over to me by Ardis Bynum, a community worker at Lincoln School. The book was found by a Lincoln pupil who took it to the school office for disposition.

Maybe Mark himself lost or abandoned the book while residing in Long Beach or visiting this city. Maybe it came into possession of a relative, who in turn lost it to a house burglar who discarded the book as worthless loot. We can only theorize. Somehow, by fair or foul means, that baby book got to Lincoln playground.

Here are some of the things I know about Mark Kelby Stahl:

When he was born his parents resided at 88 Rosena, Madison-on-the-Lake, Ohio. The child was baptized at First Presbyterian Church, Bucyrus, Ohio, later attending the Episcopal church in that community.

Ohio is given as his mother's birthplace, Indiana as his father's. The family made frequent trips to South Bend, Ind., which suggests that city might have been the place of Mark's father's birth.

Mark was a bright baby. He walked unaided at 9 months, used simple words at 12 months, and was hanging up his clothes at age 2. At 2 he also sang "I'm a Little Teapot," played Hide-and-Seek, Ring Around the Rosy and Peek-a-Boo, and thanked God at meals.

He was scared when he took his first auto ride — to Dayton at 15 months. He quickly lost that fear and clamored for more car trips. He danced and sang to the television set and the family record player. He liked spinach, squash, bananas, little children and stuffed animals.

The entries made in the baby book by Mark's mother could apply to millions of infants, but there is only one human being whose birth registration card bears the number 14876, issued by the commissioner of health, City of Dayton, and filed on Jan. 4, 1957.

The baby book probably has more sentimental value to his parents than to Mark. But the birth certificate is of practical concern to him. It tells who he is, how old he is, his nationality. The certificate is important to his work, school and marriage rights, his eligibility for a passport and property inheritance, for public office.

"People Talk" has had good results in reuniting people and property. I hope the luck holds in the case of Mark Kelby Stahl, once of Madison-on-the-Lake, Ohio, and now whereabouts unknown.

If he's out there somewhere, we'll find him. If he's not, God bless him and his parents and say we tried.

NOW HEAR THIS: Linda Bray came to the right place when she asked me to say something about the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation of Long Beach. As you know, I recently became a member of diabetes "club," and I'm determined to do all I can to help my fellow sufferers — and myself.

Children with diabetes face larger problems than adults who have the disease. That's a medical fact, and the consequences are most severe.

In controlling diabetes, knowledge is help. And that's what the Juvenile Diabetes Foundation of Long Beach seeks to provide — knowledge and information, and hope.

The foundation is new. Many parents of diabetic children haven't gotten the word of its existence. Maybe they don't know about the meeting to be held at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Naples Elementary School library, 5537 The Toledo.

For more information, call Linda Bray, 424-1941, after 4 p.m. week days, or Barbara Scott, the foundation president, at 438-5293, after 3 p.m.

I hope to meet you at Naples Elementary School library Tuesday night. We've got a lot in common — diabetes and a love for children.

Congressional ethics

A new ethics code — which, among other things, limits outside income of congressmen to $8,625 — has been overwhelmingly adopted by the House. It is long overdue, but the big question still will be how it is enforced.

The Senate has not yet acted on an ethics code, but is expected to do so within a week.

The key battle in the House was over the limit on outside income, and during the debate, a number of congressmen told stories about how they had pulled themselves up by the bootstraps and how limitation on outside earning would handicap persons in similar circumstances.

HOUSE SPEAKER Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., said the limitation is "a sacrifice we have to make."

Rep. John H. Dent, D-Pa., contended the House was "closing the door to the Abraham Lincolns and opening it to the Nelson Rockefellers."

We could be a lot more sympathetic to all this rhetoric if the recent 30-per-cent pay raise for congressman had not jumped their salaries up to $57,500 a year. The cost of living undoubtedly is high in Washington, but a salary of $57,500 a year isn't exactly poverty level.

A good many Americans would be happy if their annual salary was even equal to the raise the congressmen got — $12,900 a year. They don't even dream of $57,500 a year!

Besides, the salary is only a part — a comparatively small part — of benefits which congressmen receive from the taxpayers. The total runs to hundreds of thousands of dollars each year.

Congressmen get, among many other things, rent-free offices at the Capitol and in home districts, with liberal furniture allowances; retirement benefits after five years service (top pension now is $35,680 a year after 32 years); a $47,000 life-insurance policy for $434 a year; government-subsidized health insurance; free emergency medical care and free drugs if prescribed by a Capitol physician; free swimming pools, gyms, steam rooms, masseurs and physiotherapy; $2 haircuts at the Capitol barbershops (reduced beauty shop rates for female members); and reduced-rate meals without sales taxes.

They get sizable expense allowances for travel, telephones, newsletters and official expenses outside Washington. These average $48,000 annually for House members and range from $32,000 to $78,000 annually for senators, depending upon mileage between Washington and their home districts and the number of their constituents.

THE NEW CODE of ethics wasn't adopted because congressmen suddenly "got religion." The main force that pushed the legislators into adopting a more stringent code was the widespread criticism on the part of voters about the big pay hike.

In earlier debate about a new code of ethics, there was discussion of how it would be policed. The code means nothing unless it is enforced. Russia, for example, has a constitution which contains all kinds of guarantees of human rights.

The existing House "ethics committee" has been conspicuous by its inactivity. We think the policing of the new ethics code must be done by an independent auditing firm — or else the code will be as meaningful as the Russian constitution.

A new U.S.-Mexico attitude

By JOHN B. OAKS
New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The recent visit to President Carter of Mexico's President Lopez Portillo dramatically emphasized recent ominous developments in that country that could deeply affect the future of this one.

President Lopez Portillo brought implicit warning of economic and social disintegration below the border. The basic import of the Mexican president's message was, in fact, that if a hemispheric explosion is to be avoided, the United States and its industrially sophisticated, relatively rich and well-fed allies of the Northern Hemisphere need to build a new kind of relationship with the overpopulated, underdeveloped, poverty-stricken nations of the Southern.

THE MEXICAN president's message was "an educational experience" for Jimmy Carter, observed one of the latter's White House advisers. As if to clinch the point, Lopez Portillo is reported to have told his host that, if conditions in Mexico did not show visible improvement before the end of his six-year term, he might well prove to be the last of Mexico's long line of constitutional Presidents.

In that case, he indicated, Mexican democracy — such as it is — would be more likely to fall victim to the quietly entrenched "fascists" of the right than to the disorganized but vocal elements of the left.

Publicly, Lopez Portillo sounded a similar if muted warning to an indifferent Congress, of whom only 150 out of 435 members did him the courtesy of listening to him when he addressed the House: "We do not want the present situation to make us lose our ways."

Behind all the talk about Mexico's unfavorable balance of trade, its need and desire for foreign investment, its export of "undocumented" labor and of illicit drugs, its declining peso and its rising population — behind all the discussion of these immediate problems lay Lopez Portillo's deeper appeal for a fundamental readjustment of the North-South relationship.

It is clear that Mexico's president, who is no more of an alarmist than he is an extremist, believes that his country cannot solve its almost overwhelming problems by itself. What country in this world can?

But in the case of Mexico, its psychological and historical dominance by the United States gives the latter a special obligation — not to mention a special self-interest — to help avert the catastrophic explosion that is ultimately threatened by the inflation, unemployment, surplus population and gross imbalance of trade that are endemic in our closest southern neighbor as well as throughout the developing world.

Carter is now being asked by his Mexican counterpart not merely for additional financial support, investment (under controlled conditions) and special trade concessions (on vegetables and shoes, for example) to try to adjust for the inherently unbalanced relationship between the two countries; but, more particularly, for a basic change in the condescending approach that Mexicans feel has been characteristic of Americans in the past.

WHILE THE EYES of most Americans still glaze over when such words as "Mexico" or "Latin America" are spoken, Americans can no longer afford the luxury of either somnolence or ignorance vis-a-vis a neighbor that stands at the very gateway of Latin America and is still usually counted among the continent's last democracies. Though Lopez Portillo protests that Mexico doesn't care to be a "leader," any nation with newly estimated oil reserves amounting to 40 per cent of Saudi Arabia's is a nation whose influence on this continent is certain to increase.

In dealing with such a nation, it may well be necessary to scrap a lot of old ideas and develop some new ones on the kinds of economic interchange that will help bring northern and southern worlds — not alone in the Americas — into a complementary rather than an adversarial relationship.

Short life of one-stop permit

SACRAMENTO — Nominated for the bureaucratic phrase likely to have the shortest life span: one-stop permit process.

In the furor over the Dow Chemical Company's January decision not to build a $500-million petrochemical plant on the Sacramento River, Gov. Brown, Atty. Gen. Younger and other high state officials immediately called for development of a "one-stop permit process."

Part of Dow's complaint was that it had been required to apply to 12 different governmental agencies for 65 different permits. How much simpler it would be, critics said, if the process were speeded up by adoption of a one-stop procedure.

WELL, FIRST OF all, even the people using the phrase "one-stop permit process" didn't really mean a one-stop permit process. There are several layers of government involved — local, county, regional, state and federal — and certainly no one actually suggested that the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District surrender its authority to any other governmental agency. Or Solano County. Or the State of California. Or the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

So, quickly, one-stop wasn't one-stop any more.

The phrase remained alive, though, because it was thought it could be applied solely to the state. After all, the various state agencies which had some interest in the Dow project included the State Water Resources Control Board, the Department of Water Resources, the State Reclamation Board, the State Lands Commission, the Air Resources Board, the State Energy Resources and Conservation Commission, the Office of Planning and Research, and probably a dozen or so others, each of whom was on guard against other state agencies trespassing on their area of jurisdiction.

Couldn't the permit process be refined so that application to build or expand could be submitted to the state just once, and explanations about a project made just once, and answers to questions be given just once?

Easily, each agency said. As long as we're the agency retaining the authority.

Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned. William Congreve suggested 280 years ago. He never saw a threatened bureaucrat.

The governor and others who voiced naive support for the one-stop permit process proposal retreated in orderly fashion.

This week, legislation will be proposed dealing with the subject. It will be carried by Assembly Speaker Leo McCarthy and supported by Gov. Brown and will, probably, simply impose tighter deadlines on the various state agencies.

Whether or not that will speed up the process, only time can tell. The one thing which will happen, without doubt, is that each of the agencies so instructed will ask for more money to hire more people to handle the additional workload of meeting the earlier deadlines.

Possibly some consolidations of agency responsibilities can be made, but it is difficult to see where.

Threat of 'blacking' in Britain

By JAMES O. JACKSON
Knight News Service

LONDON — Hardly a day goes by without a notice such as the one below appearing, tastefully italicized, in one of Britain's major newspapers:

"This space is blank because of action by printing and engraving unions of this newspaper."

The notices, with their surrounding expanse of empty white space, have become so routine that they cause barely a ripple of comment. Editors have grown accustomed to them, and so have readers.

THE WHITE SPACE is the result of a process that is called, oddly, "blacking," and it represents a worrisome new kind of censorship that is a threat to press freedom throughout the western world.

One reason for the surprising British complacency over blacking is that the practice seems to the public to be nothing more than a tiresome squabble among competing unions. Most of the blacked material is work prepared by commercial artists who belong to no union at all or who belong to a union which is having a jurisdictional dispute with the newspaper unions.

By refusing to handle the material — usually charts, maps, and other graphical material — the newspaper unions hope to compel the artists to join a particular union.

But there is more to it than that. A great deal more.

Blacking already has gone far beyond petty union bickering, and on some occasions printing workers have blacked stories which contained views critical of the blacking system. There is also evidence that informal obstructions, such as sabotage or slowdowns, have been used in hindering publication of political views that are objectionable to union members.

One such case which occurred last month involved the London Times and David Astor, former editor and publisher of The Observer. Writing in a monthly magazine called Index on Censorship, Astor assailed Fleet Street unions and charged that many editors were "cravenly" giving in to union interference in the editorial process.

The Times assigned a reporter to write a story on the Astor article. The report was written, but when it was sent to the composing room to be set in type some of the unions refused to handle it. After a nightlong dispute, the Times management chose to print no newspaper at all rather than delete the Astor article. After further talks, the article was published the following day, but not on page one, as originally planned. And Times editors promised that union members would be able to explain their position in the letters column.

Although the Times appears to have won the battle, Astor insisted that the tough attitude of the Times editors was unusual, even unprecedented.

NO NATIONAL newspaper has undertaken a detailed investigation of the blacking issue, and the rare reports on blacking cases usually are written with evident caution to avoid trouble in the mechanical departments.

In all probability, this column could not be published in a Fleet Street newspaper. If an editor here passed it at all, the edition might come out with one of those white spaces and an italicized notice about union action. That is alarming, because standards set here on Fleet Street often become standards of journalism for other countries, including our own.

Indian 'sovereignty' worries states

By TOM ARRANDALE
Editorial Research Reports

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The U.S. government concluded its last treaties with Indian tribes in 1888. More than a century later, native Americans throughout the land are reasserting the sovereign tribal status that the making of treaties acknowledged.

Recent court decisions dealing with such far-ranging issues as land claims, treaty fishing rights and law enforcement have confirmed the power of tribes to govern themselves without interference from state or local officials.

Tribal sovereignty has roots in the 16th century beginnings of law among nations. Dominican theologian Francisco Victoria, founder of modern international law, advised the emperor of Spain in 1532 that claims to lands and sovereignty in the New World required the consent of the Indian tribes as original owners. The idea that Indian land should be acquired by treaty assumed that both parties were sovereign powers.

The Constitution granted exclusive treaty-making power to the new federal government and gave Congress sole authority to regulate commerce with Indian tribes. In the early 1830s, Supreme Court decisions in disputes between Georgia and the Cherokee Nation affirmed federal jurisdiction and declared state laws inapplicable on Indian lands — although Georgia refused to obey the ruling, and the Cherokees were pushed out of their homeland.

The rebirth of tribal nationalism in the courts disturbs many state and local officials. In one well-publicized case, the Penobscot and Passamaquoddy Indians are claiming two-thirds of Maine on the ground that a 1794 treaty selling most of their traditional lands to Massachusetts was made without federal consent.

In New Mexico, the Sandia Pueblo is building a racetrack north of Albuquerque that will operate outside of state regulation.

Throughout arid western states, Indian water rights present an uncertain but potentially critical obstacle to continued growth. The Gila River Indian Community is claiming more than 70 per cent of Colorado River waters that the Central Arizona Project is expected to divert to the Phoenix and Tucson regions.

"The last three or four years have been the years of the Indian," a worried state water official said recently. "What the courts might have done 10 years ago might be altogether different now."

PLEASE, LORD, MAKE US HOLY, ... BUT NOT RIGHT AWAY."

Possibly some consolidations of agency responsibilities can be made, but it is difficult to see where.

The quality of the state's air is not what it should be; shouldn't there be an Air Resources Board to see that it doesn't deteriorate more?

The quality of the state's water is less than it was; shouldn't there be a Water Resources Control Board with particular expertise to see that no additional damage occurs?

The same with the quantity of the state's water. An expertise related, but definitely different, from water-quality expertise is required. Shouldn't there be a Department of Water Resources, and shouldn't it have authority to approve or block a project impacting on water resources?

DEPLETION OF energy resources, access by the public to state lands and waters, impacts on the coastal environment of inland projects, they, too, are legitimate concerns. All the agencies dealing with those subjects were created because damage was being done, and each was charged with the responsibility of (a) preventing further damage and (b) repairing the damage already done.

Those responsibilities somehow have to be met in a manner which will not impoverish the state or its citizens. Keeping California beautiful is meaningless if only rich easterners can afford to live here. But making California over into an Oregon-to-Mexico housing tract and industrial park, broken up by freeways, would not improve the quality of life here.

So "one-stop permit process" is dead, thankfully. And now that it is out of the way, a more reasonable and appropriate solution to what is a very real problem can be sought.

Tony Formo

A recent article by your staff writer Walt Murray concerning Tony Formo is not only biased and inaccurate, it is a study in undeserving platitudes. I not only attended CSULB with Formo, I lived with him in the residence hall, and was active in student government with him.

Formo was, and assuredly still is, guilty of every bad trait he attributes to "Americans," and his ignoble clichés are more of a self-portrait than observations.

His vacillating positions on the Vietnam War at best are self-serving, and to have Mr. Murray print them is only to insult CSULB alumni who had true convictions. Formo moved to Long Beach from the East to attend inexpensive California schools, and successfully shouted his way through. And now he condemns the institutions that put him where he is — typical.

If Mr. Murray would like to interview a Vietnam era CSULB graduate, I know several graduates working hard to support and defend our country and specifically our Southern California community.

RAY HARTER

As a lifetime resident of Long Beach and the United States, I can only feel revulsion that my local newspaper would print such garbage. I would much rather have read an advertisement for anything!

Who cares what Tony Formo thinks or does or says? Mr. Murray says ultraconservatives would call Formo a "draft dodger." In that case, there must be a hell of a lot of ultraconservatives in Long Beach.

Mr. Formo tells us through Mr. Murray's story that we Americans are brash, obnoxious, and a violent people (he's a perfect example).

I can only reply that the general I.Q. of the Long Beach area greatly improved the day Mr. Formo slinked across the border to Canada.

Finally, I would like to point out to Mr. Murray that Tony Formo received a very good education in this country at the minimum expense and then in the country's time of need, chose to flee rather than repay us taxpayers for some of the benefits he enjoyed as an American. It should be obvious to all that this article was completely self-serving for Mr. Formo, and possibly for Mr. Murray.

The next time Mr. Murray chooses to interview some Vietnam era citizens, have him stop off at Veterans Hospital and ask some very brave men how they feel about Mr. Formo's selfish ideals.

No offshore airport

Several years ago, Assemblyman Mike Cullen co-sponsored a bill requesting federal funds for a "feasibility study" for an offshore airport in the San Pedro Bay.

This bill was strongly opposed by residents of San Pedro, Long Beach, Palos Verdes and surrounding areas. Many organizations and the Los Angeles Board of Airport Commissioners joined in voicing their opposition.

The Board of Airport Commissioners pointed out studies that show such a facility would be closed down one-third of the year due to fog and prevailing winds. They stated the cost would be three times that of an area such as Palmdale.

At that time, studies were already being made by the federal government, the Rand Corp. and other agencies. Serious objections to an offshore airport were:

1. A known earthquake fault exists in the area.

2. Development of a new land mass would create undetermined current movement and erosion along the expanse of the state's southern coast.

3. Dredging on the huge scale necessary for the landfill would create a sediment contamination condition over a wide area, jeopardizing marine life.

4. Air and noise pollution would create onshore and offshore environmental and ecological damage.

5. Inestimable state funds would have to be expended in causeways, access facilities, freeways, etc., to make the airport operative.

In spite of the fact that Assemblyman Cullen is aware of the above, he has again introduced a resolution calling for funds for another study. Why?

The San Pedro and Peninsula Homeowners Coalition strongly opposes the waste of taxpayers money for duplication of studies already made which show the impracticability of such a facility.

Sumner assailed

The idea that environmental and wildlife movements are spurred by cuteness and human-like qualities of animals is absurd. Anthropomorphism plays no part in influencing any respectable conservation organization. Furthermore, for the author, William S. Sumner ("Must we kill the housework?" Feb. 28) to indicate that dolphins are humanlike is a complete contradiction of his earlier statement that comparing animals with humans is "nonsense." Comparing humans with other organisms, or associating human characteristics with other organisms, is complete nonsense. There is no creature on earth that has the behavior characteristics of man.

Mr. Sumner does not seem to be aware of the interdependence of all living organisms. Some species, such as the snail darter, may seem trivial, but the elimination of a species has profound effects. It upsets a delicate balance that has evolved for four billion years. Accelerating number of extinctions and endangered species indicates a failure in these systems; therefore, the preservation of species is a necessary step in securing the survival of man.

The snail darter incident will not be the last time Section 7 of the Endangered Species Act will come under fire. Section 7 mandates that all federal agencies shall cooperate in carrying out programs for conservation of threatened or endangered species. It also stipulates that any action authorized, funded, or carried out by the agencies not jeopardize the continued existence of the species or result in the destruction or modification of its habitat. Thus, the snail darter case is very significant. It sets a standard for future decisions involving section 7. The Endangered Species Act is a law; therefore, no exemptions should be made.

In closing, Sumner expresses a desire for man to be allowed to live like man. It is plain fact that if man continues his abusive attitude and lifestyle, he will himself become an endangered species. We must learn to live with the principles of conservation and preservation.

Equal tax for all

One legislator wants to remove homes from the tax list and tax only the land. What a dupe.

Why do people fall for the line that property can be taxed? Because if they would admit the truth, that only people can be taxed, they'd have no argument for property tax. There's no explanation why only some should be taxed and some have to pay more than others only because of the property they own.

By making people believe that government can tax land, homes, buildings, gas, food, incomes, cigarettes and any other thing that isn't human or owned by a government, it directs attention away from the fact that only some of the people have to pay taxes, for senseless reasons and of various amounts.

If all citizens are equally ruled and protected by the same government, shouldn't all be equally taxed to support it? If not, then who should support it, and why? Who should pay more, and why?

If everyone should pay, and each pay the same, why put a name before the word "tax," such as income, property, sales, business, etc. Why not just the word "tax"?

Only when everyone must pay taxes and each must pay the same will their government be properly and safely controlled.

A life is a life

A week ago, a house across the street from us burned and no one was home. The Fire Department arrived in good time — the paramedics first. They found the family cat unconscious on the kitchen floor.

To the paramedics, this was a life. They picked it up, not by a paw or the tail but in their arms, and carried it out. They gave it oxygen and it came to very soon.

If they will be so kind to one of God's creatures, we need not fear how they treat a human. I for one was as happy as they seemed to be, and I want to thank them so much. We never know when it might happen in our home.

God bless them all for their wonderful, lifesaving job, and to the Fire Department for its fast service.

Misunderstood

In regard to the letter written by Tom Ledford which was published in the Feb. 22 "Letters to the editor" of the Independent, Press-Telegram, may I as a representative of the society make the following comments.

Tom Ledford, the student in question, has had a most disillusioning experience in trying to obtain research material for his current project. But, I wonder if he is aware that practically all historical organizations, including the California Historical Society as well as ours, are non-profit organizations staffed by volunteer help. These organizations do not receive any tax monies whatsoever as they are completely supported by their members and seldom have enough volunteer clerical help, nor do they have free material which they can distribute. Tom evidently felt that he was writing to a government agency such as the California State Library which is supported by public funds.

Our office and files are available to students and other interested persons for research purposes upon request to the society — a policy which is followed by most other societies.

Congress pay

Please enlighten me. I seem to be total darkness as to how the average family would have to live. In what ways would they change their spending habits if their annual income was raised $13,000. Of course, being on Social Security like my wife and I are makes it hard to comprehend.

To my knowledge, only one member of Congress made any attempt to block the raise. What happened to the Republican members of Congress? Were they all on government-financed junkets? Where were the Republican politicians who at campaign time always cry out at Democrat spending? Could it be that they favor 30 per cent pay increases?

Who knows, possibly they will overwhelmingly vote a 30 per cent increase for the Social Security recipient, the veterans, and others.

I haven't heard any of them say they would return the money to the Treasury. By the way, editor, I haven't read too much objection from you, or did I miss it?

Is it too late for Congress to amend a motion to cut this raise? I wonder what the one dissenter will do with his raise? Give me an answer, please. JACK CAHOON

Renters pay taxes

This is in reply to R.J. Smith's letter of Feb. 27 regarding tax bills for renters.

I happen to rent the home I live in. If I had money for a down payment, I would gladly be a property owner. (I have been in the past.) In September, 1976, my landlord raised my rent $25 a month in anticipation of a higher tax bill. In December, 1976, my rent was raised an additional $35 a month because the tax bill was higher than anticipated. So, who doesn't pay taxes, R. J. Smith?

As far as property taxes are concerned, there are only two differences between renters and property owners:

1. The tax bill is not in the renter's name.

2. Renters cannot deduct the taxes on their state and federal income tax returns as property owners do.

Congress roll call

Following are votes by Long Beach-area congressmen on recent key roll calls:

HOUSE

Public Works Jobs — By a 295-85 vote, the House approved a bill to authorize an additional $4 billion for an anti-recession public works program, a key part of President Carter's recovery package.

Supporters of the additional funds argued that the backlog of unfunded applications demonstrates the need for a larger program. They claimed the expanded program would create as many as 600,000 jobs in construction and related supply industries.

Opponents questioned whether the public works program was an effective means of aiding the economy or putting people to work. Most had objected to the program originally as an expensive and slow way to create jobs.

Senate action on a similar bill is expected this month.

Voting for the bill: Anderson (D), Hannaford (D), Patterson (D), Wilson (D).

Voting against the bill: Badham (R), Clawson (R).

Paired against the bill: Wiggins (R). Not voting: Dornan (R).

Economic Stimulus — The House supported President Carter's economic stimulus plan by voting 239-169 to increase the ceiling on federal government spending for the fiscal year ending Sept. 30, 1977, to $419.1 billion.

The $6-billion increase was necessary to allow for the President's plan, which includes the $50 tax rebate, individual and business tax cuts and extra government spending for jobs. The House also provided for a deficit of up to $70.3 billion.

Supporters of the bill argued that the economy needed the immediate stimulus proposed by Carter to lower unemployment and sustain the nation's economic recovery.

Opponents said the size of the stimulus package was too large, that it was of questionable value in improving the economy and that the deficit and spending

When police are pigs

A retarded man was talking with two police officers last Wednesday, Feb. 24, as I arrived at my doctor's office at 5175 E. Pacific Coast Hwy., about 8:55 a.m.

The citizen asked help in finding the room of his doctor, as he held out his papers to show the officers. The officer told the retarded citizen he had the wrong place, as this was a jail, and if he went inside they would lock him up and keep him. With that, they laughed with each other and left in their car.

The man seeking help from whom he had been taught all his life was his "friend" was left frightened and perplexed, with only a stranger to turn to for help. It was difficult explaining to this individual that the police officers were just "joking," as I helped him find the proper room.

Our police must earn our respect; but here again, they have earned only my disrespect. Then they wonder why we prefer to call them "pigs." Certainly a police officer would not have acted in such a manner; only a pig would think this situation humorous. M. LEE WATT

Summer 'the spoiler'

I think it is time we change our long-standing national wildlife policy: if it moves, kill it; if it grows, pull it out.

Apparently, columnist William Sumner does not view the thoughtless destruction of our land and water resources or the wanton slaughter of many species of animals to the point of extinction as excessive. Strangely, he does see some long overdue attempts to preserve our wildlife and wild lands as excessive.

I do not think a desire to protect our endangered wildlife has much to do with their "cuteness." Rather it is a recognition of our responsibilities toward these creatures as mankind's power to harm other species increases. It also concerns understanding the cycles of nature, which once disrupted, can harm humanity for generations to come.

I think Mr. Sumner's statements in his column of Feb. 28, were a simple minded reduction of a very grim problem.

Bilingual ballot

Received my bilingual ballot. Our national language is English and anyone wishing to vote and have a say in our government should be required to read, write and speak the native language! Show me one other country where a person unable to speak, etc., the native language is allowed a say in government. There isn't any!

And this morning I read where Congressman Roybal wants "more government jobs for Hispanic Americans," and "tolerant treatment for illegal aliens." Tell me, congressman, what about the Japanese Americans, Jewish Americans, etc.? Don't forget our American Indians. Black Americans already are in the majority in most government offices.

As for "tolerant treatment" for illegal aliens, congressman, do you also advocate tolerant treatment for illegal abortionists, drug dealers? How about illegal political campaign contributors? They're all the same — lawbreakers!

I, for one, am sick and tired of the excesses in the name of anti-discrimination, which are not merely a farcical nuisance but are damaging American education, medical care and employer-employee relations.

Prof. Thomas Sowell of UCLA says it all in his excellent book, "Race and Economics": "Far from being sobered or made cautious by the great powers entrusted to them, social reformers are more likely to regard such grants of power as confirmation of their broader vision and, therefore, as a mandate to force people to do what is really 'good for them.'"

Furthermore, unlike corporate executives, or even politicians, social reformers do not have to pay for their mistakes. Everybody understands that when a representative of a soup company tells us his product makes the best lunch, a healthy skepticism is in order. But when a housing "expert" unveils the latest plan to "save cities" or a member of the education lobby asks for expanded "opportunities" for youth to consume his product at taxpayers' expense, there is a tendency to regard them as wise men promoting the public interest.

Hopefully, all those who feel as I do will make the politicians and their appointees — local, state and national — pay for their mistakes by voting them out of office in the next election. But don't hold your breath; people will vote the same jerks right back in, and then wonder why 1984 came early.

By the way, ordinarily it would be irrelevant to add that Professor Sowell is black, but I would hate to have anyone think he was a white racist!

Tony Formo

A recent article by your staff writer Walt Murray concerning Tony Formo is not only biased and inaccurate, it is a study in underserving platitudes. I not only attended CSULB with Formo, I lived with him in the residence hall, and was active in student government with him.

Formo was, and assuredly still is, guilty of every bad trait he attributes to "Americans," and his ignoble clichés are more of a self-portrait than observations.

His vacillating positions on the Vietnam War at best are self-serving, and to have Mr. Murray print them is only to insult CSULB alumni who had true convictions. And this morning I read where Congressman Roybal wants "more government jobs for Hispanic Americans" and "tolerant treatment for illegal aliens." Tell me, congressman, what about the Japanese Americans, Jewish Americans, etc.? Don't forget our American Indians. Black Americans already are in the majority in most government offices.

As for "tolerant treatment" for illegal aliens, congressman, do you also advocate tolerant treatment for illegal abortionists, drug dealers? How about illegal political campaign contributors? They're all the same — lawbreakers!

I, for one, am sick and tired of the excesses in the name of anti-discrimination, which are not merely a farcical nuisance but are damaging American education, medical care and employer-employee relations.

Prof. Thomas Sowell of UCLA says it all in his excellent book, "Race and Economics": "Far from being sobered or made cautious by the great powers entrusted to them, social reformers are more likely to regard such grants of power as confirmation of their broader vision and, therefore, as a mandate to force people to do what is really good for them."

Furthermore, unlike corporate executives, or even politicians, social reformers do not have to pay for their mistakes. Everybody understands that when a representative of a soup company tells us his product makes the best lunch, a healthy skepticism is in order. But when a housing "expert" unveils the latest plan to "save cities" or a member of the education lobby asks for expanded "opportunities" for youth to consume his product at taxpayers' expense, there is a tendency to regard them as wise men promoting the public interest.

Hopefully, all those who feel as I do will make the politicians and their appointees — local, state and national — pay for their mistakes by voting them out of office in the next election. But don't hold your breath; people will vote the same jerks right back in, and then wonder why 1984 came early.

By the way, ordinarily it would be irrelevant to add that Professor Sowell is black, but I would hate to have anyone think he was a white racist!

Misses Clutter

A hearty second to reader Doeswyck's letter of Feb. 27 ("Clutter's column"). What is unfathomable to me is how anyone can expect to publish a discussion of religious opinion without generating controversy. That is entirely the purpose of editorial opinion. And that is why many of us who would eagerly look forward to reading the Saturday edition now find it rather insipid without Mr. Clutter's musings.

Three-day conference aboard Queen Mary

Port seminar set Wednesday

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Maritime Editor

A three-day technical seminar to consider problems associated with the development of deep water ports begins Wednesday aboard the Queen Mary.

The opening day morning sessions will feature presentations by representatives of the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach. Technical papers to be presented and their authors include:

—San Pedro Bay Port Facilities and Shipping Activities, Lawrence L. Whiteneck, chief harbor engineer, Los Angeles Harbor Department.

—Port of Los Angeles Harbor Master Plan, Donald A. Walsh, director of planning and research.

—Master Planning at the Port of Long Beach, Jerry Porter, deputy chief harbor engineer.

—Los Angeles Harbor Environmental Program, Calvin Hurst, environmental scientist.

—Environmental Protection at the Port of Long Beach, Lester Hockney, senior civil engineer.

—Status of Coastal Zone Legislation and Regulatory Requirements in San Pedro Bay, Bob Hoffmaster, chief harbor engineer, Port of Long Beach.

More than 300 harbor and maritime officials from 20 states and eight countries are expected to attend the conference, says William J. Herron, of Moffatt and Nichol Engineers of Long Beach.

Sponsors include the American Society of Civil Engineers, U.S.

Army Corps of Engineers, American and Pacific Coast Associations of Port Authorities and the National Harbour Board of Canada.

Brig Gen. Richard M. Connell, South Pacific engineer, Corps of Engineers, will be the principal speaker at the opening day luncheon, speaking on navigation and national priorities.

Thursday's luncheon speaker will be Dr. Donald B. Bright, director of environmental affairs, Long Beach Harbor Department. He will discuss ecological concerns of major seaports.

Keith McKinney, president of Western Liquefied Natural Gas Terminal Associates, will talk about meeting the gas energy crisis during the evening banquet Wednesday.

Cult-deprogrammer tries Man won't be prosecuted in hotwire death

Religious "deprogrammer" Ted Patrick, who found himself in a quandary because he bargained for an Orange County sentence on a Denver offense, will try to change his luck Monday in Santa Ana Superior Court.

Patrick, 43, of San Diego, who specializes in persuading young people to abandon their commitments to various cults and sects and return to their parents, will ask Judge James H. Walsworth in criminal court to rectify a "mistake" which he said has cost him additional time in the Orange County Jail.

The deprogrammer, accused in Orange County of false imprisonment of a Buena Park man who had become involved in the Hare Krishna cult, also faced a charge of violating probation on a conviction in Denver involving a similar offense.

He agreed to serve a year in jail in Orange County to wipe out both records. He had drawn 60 days from Fullerton Municipal Court Judge Logan Moore, who added 10 months of jail time because of the Colorado conviction.

But Denver Judge Zita Wienschien set March 25 as the date for Patrick to appear before her to explain his predicament.

Meanwhile, Patrick had served the 60 days ordered by Judge Moore, who refused to modify the one-year term since it was by Patrick's own stipulation. But Judge Walsworth freed Patrick on bail pending the hearing Monday in his court.

Walsworth will decide if Patrick has served enough time, or must return to Denver to face the judge there.

Lakewood mayor election postponed

Election of the Lakewood mayor and reorganization of the city council, originally scheduled for Tuesday, have been postponed until March 15 because council members will be in Washington, D.C., this week for the National League of Cities conference.

All five council members and city Administrator Howard Chambers will attend the national conference.

The March 15 reorganization and regular business meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the council chambers.

Public works aid scarce

quires that all cities use their own unemployment information.

With an unemployment rate of 6.1 per cent in December, Torrance fell below the 6.5 per cent cutoff point for the new law, and far under the national average of 7.5 per cent for February, announced Friday in Washington.

If the unemployment rate in the city of Torrance remains constant for the next few months, the city's project grant applications already submitted will be ineligible for contention for the additional funds under this new legislation. budget officer Albert Ng reported to the Torrance City Council last week.

Only projects that have already been submitted will be considered under the new law.

WHEN THE extension bill was introduced, it would have split the $4 billion, with $2 billion for pending projects and an equal amount a year later for new submittals. The House changed that, scheduling the whole amount immediately for the earlier projects.

In Carson, Public Works Director John McMichael wore a justifiable smile when asked about the money being added by Congress. Anything Carson might get is pure gravy to him, since it was one of the few cities in Los Angeles and Orange counties to get any money under the first program.

"We got it (the EDA authorization for issuance of the funds) signed this week," McMichael grinned.

Carson was granted $1.16 million for the construction of relief sewers to take the pressure off older parts of the city's system which were built before the population boom that has nearly doubled its residents in the nine years of cityhood.

Still pending is a $440,000 proposal to provide handicapped ramps — driveway-like cuts in the curbs in commercial areas — to make life easier for persons confined to wheelchairs.

"That's a priority project," McMichael said, "so we should rank pretty high even with the rule changes."

Long Beach officials will be meeting Wednesday to review the $4.4 million in applications they have on file, according to City Engineer Tom Marchese. None of Long Beach's projects were approved in the first round of public works funding.

AMONG THE items for which funding was sought were $1.5 million for improvements to major streets, $1.3 million for new fire stations, $200,000 for other public building construction, $900,000 for storm drains and $500,000 for city-wide curb, gutter and sidewalk work.

The only way in which the applications may have changed, Marchese said, is that construction on Atlantic Avenue has been completed with other funds. However, he said, other major street deficiencies could easily substitute for that project if application amendments are allowed.

The modification to include the total number of unemployed persons in a city could give Long Beach a stronger chance of project approval because of its population of nearly 350,000. The city's unemployment rate is 8.1 per cent.

EDA officials in Los Angeles and the western regional office in Seattle estimated that 4,000 applications for projects were processed for California cities on the first go-around. Of those, some 2,500 are still in the pending file, but officials had no quick estimate of the total dollars involved.

In capsule form, here are the population figures, unemployment rates and pending project applications for some other Long Beach area cities:

Bellflower, 51,132, 7.2 per cent, $850,000 to renovate a former theater into the Mary Lewis Community Center and $325,000 for a storm drain.

Lakewood, 79,984, 7.3 per cent, $792,000 for a new swimming pool and aquatic center at Mayfair Park and $317,000 to construct sidewalks in areas of the city where none exist.

PARAMOUNT, 32,412, 10.1 per cent, $554,100 for a storm drain project.

Signal Hill, 5,086, too small for the state to have figured a separate unemployment rate, $515,000 for a major eastside sewer line.

Of course there is still the possibility that the Senate — which will vote on its version of the public works bill in a week or so — may not agree to the House-passed formula for distribution. In that case a compromise would have to be worked out before the measure is sent to the White House.

Once the measure is signed by President Carter, there would still be a wait for the money.

EDA officials could begin analysis of the projects in light of the evaluation formula, but Congress still would have to pass a separate appropriation bill before any project could get final approval.

Soaking for six

Hot tubs for wintry L.B. days

installed in his patio last summer. The model tub in the store isn't heated, so, on a recent brisk and windy day, a few of his friends came over to use his outdoor patio tub. A reporter was invited along.

"It's like sitting in a tub of hot champagne," exaggerated Karen Leigh Johnson, a 33-year-old Continental Airlines stewardess, talking loudly over the sound of the hydro-massage air jets, which bubbled the 108-degree (43 Celsius) water like a Jacuzzi pool.

The tubs are therapeutic, in that they circulate blood, open pores and loosen muscles and stiff joints, said Amann, a 32-year-old goldsmith who runs the Mercury Head Workshop in Belmont Shore. Tubers are also social, he added.

"Some people are inhibited about the nudity trip," said Karpman, removing his towel and easing into the steaming tub, gasping at the 50-degree temperature change. "The redwood lends itself to a naturalistic setting. There's nothing promiscuous about us being in the tub together naked. It isn't a decadent product."

"MEL'S TUB can accommodate four to six people comfortably," added Karpman, 29, a political science graduate from Long Beach State University. "It could hold 10 people — if they don't mind being close."

Karpman smirked as a reporter disrobed to the buff and self-consciously joined the skinny-dippers. (While the photographer was there, the women wore bathing suits.) "There's a whole world of difference between looking at a tub and experiencing it, as you can testify," he said.

Hot tubbers learn that feet touchings and knee rubbings are unavoidable. It's not difficult to imagine footsies leading to less innocent playing.

"Notice how when you get out you're not cold," Amann told the reporter, who shared the tub's camaraderie for just a few moments. "I've been in at night when the temperature was 50 degrees outside, but when I got out it felt like 75."

THE ORIGINAL hot tubbers live in Santa Barbara, where craftsmen cut old wood water tanks in half. Today, several manufacturers produce the tubs, which cost from $800 to $2,000, depending on the accessories you buy.

At those prices, it's not quite the poor man's Jacuzzi, but Old Faithful's tubs have a five-year guarantee and "will last a lifetime," the owners maintain.

The scraggly-bearded Karpman, who wears one gold earring in his left ear, said redwood hot tubs are more aesthetically pleasing than other hydrotherapy devices made out of plastic and fiberglass.

"Fiberglass sucks up heat," added Amann, who has a neatly trimmed beard. "Redwood insulates like a Thermos bottle. It keeps the heat in."

Hot tubs are circular or oval and vary in size, although they usually are 5 or 6 feet across and 4 feet deep. They are said to last forever and never leak, and the only regular maintenance that's necessary is to add chlorine and change the water — about 500 to 750 gallons — every two months.

A SOLAR PANEL to heat the water is available, too. Cost of using energy — running the portable heater, mainly — is only about $5 a month, Amann said.

Terry Grove, the 24-year-old manager of the Hindquarter Steak House in the Naples area of Long Beach, expressed his enthusiasm while steeping in the bubbling water: "It's a nice, social thing."

"You can come home exhausted or drunk," noted Kate Connors, 26, a real estate saleswoman at CBS Realty in Long Beach, neck-deep in the water except for a bottle of beer perched in her hand. "Sit in it eight or 10 minutes and you really feel energized."

She sipped her beer and then added: "It's great for hangovers."

PARENTAL familiarity with the types of shows children watch, along with limiting their viewing time, are two ways in which television can become an educational experience instead of its too-frequent use as a baby sitter.

Steps to positive TV viewing

At Horace Mann Elementary School in New York City, teachers and the parents of children enrolled there have done more than just talk about the damaging effects of television violence on youngsters.

As the result of their action, there has been a dramatic change in the youngsters' television viewing habits. An additional benefit, according to former Horace Mann teacher Nancy Hedlund, has been a marked improvement in the students' behavior and performance in school.

"Teachers on the staff at Horace Mann had been concerned for some time about the negative effect excessive television viewing seemed to be having on our students," said Mrs. Hedlund, who now lives in Los Angeles. "But the problem became critical when one of our 5-year-olds put his hand through a window in imitation of a scene from a Kung Fu program he'd seen the night before."

"A short time later we decided to share our concerns with the parents. We researched the subject, drew on our classroom and educational experience and then drafted a letter which was sent, along with copies of two magazine articles on the subject, to all the parents of children at our school."

ACCORDING to Mrs. Hedlund, the letter spelled out three generally accepted criticisms of excessive television viewing:

— That television is a passive one-way activity and replaces the active way educators believe children learn.

— That even the education programs do not provide the depth of experience necessary to achieve early reading and number skills.

— That parental permission to view many of the programs on television gives tacit approval to the violent aggressive behavior frequently shown on them.

The criticisms were followed by specific steps parents could take to reduce both the amount and impact of television viewing. The letter outlined several things parents could do. Among them:

— Become familiar with the shows your children watch.

— Eliminate those shows which emphasize the resolution of problems through violence and aggression.

— Set limits on the amount of television children watch.

— Plan with your children what shows to watch.

"For young children, we suggested a maximum of one hour a day of television viewing," Mrs. Hedlund said. "We also suggested that televisions be removed from children's rooms where they are too accessible and too difficult to control."

Response to the mailing was good, Mrs. Hedlund said. Most parents appreciated the teachers' concern and suggestions. Only a few parents said they felt the staff had overstepped its bounds by commenting on their home lives.

"Almost immediately after we sent the letters we began to see marked differences in the children's behavior in the classroom and on the playground. The children's play was calmer and more directed and they were more attentive in class."

"A short time later Redbook magazine conducted its own study using our program at a New Milford, Conn. nursery school. Their results corroborated what we had found and they were enthusiastic with the results."

MRS. HEDLUND described the Horace Mann experience during the National PTA's recent hearing on television violence in Los Angeles. During her presentation, she expressed the belief that with proper planning and parent cooperation, the Horace Mann program could be applied with equal success at any school.

"In addition to the program I've outlined, those of us who worked on the Horace Mann project developed lesson plans around television viewing to be used in the classroom.

"For children in kindergarten through second grade, teachers could discuss with children what shows they watch and how they feel about them, what rules their parents have about watching television, what they have learned from television and what they would like to see on television."

"Older children - in third through sixth grade - could discuss such things as television advertising, how much television people should watch and who controls the television in their homes."

Junior high school lesson plans could address themselves to the ethics and values taught on television, television programming and sponsors and laws governing networks and stations, Mrs. Hedlund said.

At the high school level, students could explore such things as racial and sexual stereotyping on television and action that viewers can take to influence television programming.

OF COURSE, THE real Maurie Symonds is the one on the left, but then again, there he is on the right. Through talents of photographers, scientists and artists, a new art form called Light Beam Profiling slashes sculpting time in creating portrait sculptures. Lakewood resident Symonds is owner of Upstairs Gallery which originated in Long Beach and has expanded elsewhere in the Southland.

Unique process

Sculptor's labour lost

By JEAN SANDERS
Staff Writer

The familiar gold watch presented to company VIPs on retirement may be on its way out.

In its place could be a portrait sculpture bust of the subject. He wouldn't be surprised at the presentation ceremony, since he would have sat for his likeness, but then neither would he have been surprised receiving a gold watch.

There's a new process out called Light Beam Profiling System that combines modern technology with the classic art of sculpting. The result: a likeness so similar to the real person you feel like going up and saying hello.

Maurie Symonds is so enthusiastic about the new process that he has employed it in his Upstairs Gallery branches.

The new process cuts average sitting time for a personalized bust from several sittings and many hours for the subject to a single sitting of less than 15 minutes.

That, plus the fact that the finished product costs a fraction of the traditional price of having a bust sculpted in clay and then cast in bronze, or painstakingly chiseled from marble, appeals to Symonds.

Sizes vary from life-size to heroic (for really big wheels, or perhaps for super egos.) There is a miniature size, too, about half-size; it is a bas relief mounted on a plaque.

Prices range from $300 to $1,250, depending on size and finish. By contrast, a qualified sculptor would charge between $1,500 and $10,000 for comparable creations.

The actual sitting is done in a photographic booth of The Upstairs Gallery's Beverly Hills branch, although arrangements and appointments are made at all branches including Long Beach, Arco Plaza in Los Angeles and Northridge.

"It's done in a gazebo-like setting," Symonds enthuses. "It's a little like sitting in a barber chair or beauty shop. Lights swirl about taking all angles of the person's head."

TO EXPLAIN the process in more detail, a narrow beam of light is projected vertically onto the person's head and shoulders, highlighting the contours.

The light and a high-speed movie camera are rotated about the person's head, with the camera recording 360 shots of the light beam, one for each degree of a full circle. Some still photos of the person are taken also.

The developed film later is projected frame by frame onto a viewing screen embedded in a special sculpting table.

Using a stylus, a sculptor traces on the screen each contour line that was photographed. The stylus is connected to a drill that cuts profile lines in a stone-like material called Chromastone. After 360 such tracings, the sculptor has a rough-finished bust that presents the subject's basic features.

Then, working with the still photos taken previously, the sculptor puts finishing touches to the bust.

"The artist can alter or retouch if the customer wishes," Symonds says. "He can remove a wrinkle here and there or touch up a nose. You know how some people are, like celebrities. They don't always want to believe the camera."

A variety of patinas may be added to the finished stone piece, or it can be cast in bronze, precious metals or other materials.

Typically, four weeks are allowed between the sitting and final delivery, although special arrangements can be made for more rapid delivery. Fashion designer Mr. Blackwell got his in ten days.

THE NEW PROCESS is owned by Chromalloy American Corp. of St. Louis which launched it at its own F. J. Pechman Sculpture Galleries in St. Louis and Las Vegas. Aside from Gump's in San Francisco, The Upstairs Gallery is the only other place in the U. S. offering the unique art form.

"We think this fast process is a natural for sports figures and show business people. Hall of Fame types," Symonds says. "Can you imagine a nationally known sports figure sitting eight to ten times while a sculptor builds up an original in clay? He hasn't time."

"But also, it's within the means of the mass market. Parents having busts made of their children, children wanting the sculptures of their parents, Cherished friends. Brides and grooms. Close relatives."

"It's an exciting process, creating portrait busts as life-like as the finest work done by the old, slow traditional art process. And it's as close to reality as a portrait photograph."

PARENTAL familiarity with the types of shows children watch, along with limiting their viewing time, are two ways in which television can become an educational experience instead of its too-frequent use as a baby sitter.

Steps to positive TV viewing

At Horace Mann Elementary School in New York City, teachers and the parents of children enrolled there have done more than just talk about the damaging effects of television violence on youngsters.

As the result of their action, there has been a dramatic change in the youngsters' television viewing habits. An additional benefit, according to former Horace Mann teacher Nancy Hedlund, has been a marked improvement in the students' behavior and performance in school.

"Teachers on the staff at Horace Mann had been concerned for some time about the negative effect excessive television viewing seemed to be having on our students," said Mrs. Hedlund, who now lives in Los Angeles. "But the problem became critical when one of our 5-year-olds put his hand through a window in imitation of a scene from a Kung Fu program he'd seen the night before."

"A short time later we decided to share our concerns with the parents. We researched the subject, drew on our classroom and educational experience and then drafted a letter which was sent, along with copies of two magazine articles on the subject, to all the parents of children at our school."

ACCORDING to Mrs. Hedlund, the letter spelled out three generally accepted criticisms of excessive television viewing:

— That television is a passive one-way activity and replaces the active way educators believe children learn.

— That even the education programs do not provide the depth of experience necessary to achieve early reading and number skills.

— That parental permission to view many of the programs on television gives tacit approval to the violent aggressive behavior frequently shown on them.

The criticisms were followed by specific steps parents could take to reduce both the amount and impact of television viewing. The letter outlined several things parents could do. Among them:

— Become familiar with the shows your children watch.

— Eliminate those shows which emphasize the resolution of problems through violence and aggression.

— Set limits on the amount of television children watch.

— Plan with your children what shows to watch.

"For young children, we suggested a maximum of one hour a day of television viewing," Mrs. Hedlund said. "We also suggested that televisions be removed from children's rooms where they are too accessible and too difficult to control."

Response to the mailing was good, Mrs. Hedlund said. Most parents appreciated the teachers' concern and suggestions. Only a few parents said they felt the staff had overstepped its bounds by commenting on their home lives.

"Almost immediately after we sent the letters we began to see marked differences in the children's behavior in the classroom and on the playground. The children's play was calmer and more directed and they were more attentive in class.

"A short time later Redbook magazine conducted its own study using our program at a New Milford, Conn. nursery school. Their results corroborated what we had found and they were enthusiastic with the results."

MRS. HEDLUND described the Horace Mann experience during the National PTA's recent hearing on television violence in Los Angeles. During her presentation, she expressed the belief that with proper planning and parent cooperation, the Horace Mann program could be applied with equal success at any school.

"In addition to the program I've outlined, those of us who worked on the Horace Mann project developed lesson plans around television viewing to be used in the classroom.

"For children in kindergarten through second grade, teachers could discuss with children what shows they watch and how they feel about them, what rules their parents have about watching television, what they have learned from television and what they would like to see on television."

"Older children - in third through sixth grade - could discuss such things as television advertising, how much television people should watch and who controls the television in their homes."

Junior high school lesson plans could address themselves to the ethics and values taught on television, television programming and sponsors and laws governing networks and stations, Mrs. Hedlund said.

At the high school level, students could explore such things as racial and sexual stereotyping on television and action that viewers can take to influence television programming.

OF COURSE, THE real Maurie Symonds is the one on the left, but then again, there he is on the right. Through talents of photographers, scientists and artists, a new art form called Light Beam Profiling slashes sculpting time in creating portrait sculptures. Lakewood resident Symonds is owner of Upstairs Gallery which originated in Long Beach and has expanded elsewhere in the Southland.

Unique process

Sculptor's labour lost

The familiar gold watch presented to company VIPs on retirement may be on its way out.

In its place could be a portrait sculpture bust of the subject. He wouldn't be surprised at the presentation ceremony, since he would have sat for his likeness, but then neither would he have been surprised receiving a gold watch.

There's a new process out called Light Beam Profiling System that combines modern technology with the classic art of sculpting. The result: a likeness so similar to the real person you feel like going up and saying hello.

Maurie Symonds is so enthusiastic about the new process that he has employed it in his Upstairs Gallery branches.

The new process cuts average sitting time for a personalized bust from several sittings and many hours for the subject to a single sitting of less than 15 minutes.

That, plus the fact that the finished product costs a fraction of the traditional price of having a bust sculpted in clay and then cast in bronze, or painstakingly chiseled from marble, appeals to Symonds.

Sizes vary from life-size to heroic (for really big wheels, or perhaps for super egos.) There is a miniature size, too, about half-size; it is a bas relief mounted on a plaque.

MIMIC Rich Little — master of impersonations found former President Ford the most difficult to copy and is working on President Carter's voice.

THE LATE novelist William Faulkner — describes perfect job for a writer.

Q: Thrilling to Karl Wallenda walking from the tower of the Fountainebleau to the Eden Roc hotel (in Miami Beach) on live TV. I recalled your interviewing the 72-year-old daredevil some years ago. Wasn't he ever nervous doing his act? — George Bounty, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A: "Yes," Karl conceded, "several times in my 72 years. Like the time I walked the wire with my wife on my shoulders — when she was seven months pregnant!"

"Another time, after I fell 40 feet in a matinee performance I was nervous before I did the evening show that same night."

"I was also nervous that night of April 5, 1928, when I opened with Barnum and Bailey in Madison Square Garden. At the end of our presentation the audience applauded and whistled. And I ran out of the arena, sure I'd be cancelled the next day. But I wasn't. I was told that was the way an audience in America showed how much they liked the act. In Europe, whistling was like booing is over here."

"Come to think of it," he told us, "my most nervous time was months after I (only 16 at the time) had an affair with a woman appearing in the same variety show I was in in Germany. I was suddenly informed the woman was the most hunted female spy of World War I, Mata Hari. I knew her as Margaretha Gertrud Zelle. She was later executed, I heard."

Although Wallenda's wife accompanied him to the Fountainebleau for his spacewalk, she was too nervous to watch. Karl himself was so jittery, because of the breeze and showers, he even considered taping the segment. However, pro that he is, he did it live. Later, over a double martini, he said: "I will never stop walking. God will have to make me stop."

Wallenda didn't learn until later that his headstand midway along the 14-minute walk was never seen by TV viewers. It was deleted to make way for actress Jane Russell pitching a bra commercial. However, Wallenda's favorite song (and obviously a philosophy he embraces) is "Que Sera Sera" — "whatever will be, will be."

Q: Is it true that Al Jolson's crypt in Hollywood's famous Forest Lawn Cemetery has his old records playing constantly? — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ritchie (two old Jolson fans), Brooklyn.

A: Yes. It also has a bronze statue of Jolson and a flowing fountain. But the last resting place of the legendary performer is not Forest Lawn. It's Hillside Memorial Park off the San Diego freeway.

Clive Baldwin, the "reincarnation" of Jolson who was born with his voice, visited the site recently and confirms this information. Adding one point: at night a spotlight lights up the area which can be seen from the freeway. What startled Baldwin was that the hills beyond Jolson's grave are known as the Baldwin Hills.

The cost of the crypt and permanent landscaping, statuette etc., ran close to half a million dollars. With another million or more left to his survivors and to underprivileged families.

Baldwin also revealed from his deep research on Jolson that, after singing for our troops overseas, Jolie had a lung removed in 1943.

Al's accompanist at the time, Harry Akst, told Clive that the loss of the lung didn't have any deleterious effect on his voice. He sang as well as before and was delighted to discover he couldn't reach before the surgery.

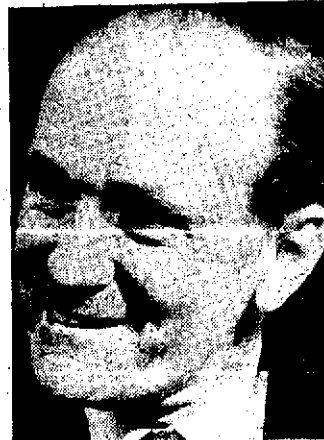

While performing in Orlando, Fla., Clive Baldwin was suddenly surprised when a patron introduced himself as Dr. Al Jolson, an ophthalmologist. His father was Al's stepbrother.

Q: What famous author once said the best job ever offered him was to become the landlord in a house of prostitution? — Mr. T. P. McC., Minneapolis.

A: William Faulkner. "It is the perfect milieu for an artist to work in," he explained. "It gives him economic freedom. He has a roof over his head and nothing to do except keep a few simple accounts and go once a month to pay off the local police. The place is quiet during the morning hours, which is the best time of the day for writing."

Q: Has Rich Little been able to perfect a take-off on Jimmy Carter yet? — L. R., Omaha, Neb.

A: "I've been working on it," replies Rich in a voice instantly recognizable as Carter's — confirmed by a toothy grin. "At first I thought the President spoke in a low monotone," he observed. "But studying the debates I realized he paused a lot, emphasizing his words."

"My most difficult impression was Gerald Ford. The key to doing Ford was to speak through firmly clenched jaws."

He was the least imitated of all the Presidents. He was so nondescript that most comedians imitated him just by tripping. But after that — what do you do for an encore?"

Q: What was the old movie in which a schizophrenic composer committed a murder whenever he heard a wrong note? — Connie Solyanis, Pittsburgh.

A: You're referring to heavyweight actor Laird Cregar's "Hangover Square." It was his last film. He died shortly after (in 1944) from a heart weakened by reducing too drastically for surgery. Linda Darnell was his co-star.

'Caesar and Cleopatra' headliners rate bravos

Curious subject for current eatrial refusal: Is Elizabeth Ashley picking up where the late Vivien Leigh left off?

I raise the question simply because Miss Ashley took on one of Miss Leigh's triumphs — the indefatigable Sabina in Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth" a few seasons ago — and now she's having a crack at Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra," in which Miss Leigh excelled 26 years ago. Can "A Streetcar Named Desire" be waiting in the wings?

Aside from physical beauty, Miss Ashley has some other things in common with Vivien Leigh that make her current Broadway impersonation of the Queen of the Nile worthy of praise. She isn't afraid of risks, or the startling results they produce, and she works like a Trojan.

Using the feline movements of her Egyptian cat gods, Miss Ashley's face bursts like a flower fresh with dew while her wrists and ankles work furiously to snap free the ancient chains that bind her.

She is at once old as the Sphinx in those paws she reclines sleepily and young as a jet-set princess of today. She is part hieroglyphic, part tomboy, and the effect is piercing. In her gentility, there is attack and upheaval simmering beneath the surface.

Shaw has provided Cleopatra with a narrow ledge upon which to perch; Miss Ashley fills it with confined passion. She is pert, precocious and pithy, sly as an owl, frightened as a kitten, enormously vulnerable, yet lethal as a mongoose.

Kenneth Tynan once wrote that Shaw's child-queen reminded him of the feeling the father in "Pride and Prejudice" experienced when he dissuaded his daughter from further pianoforte recital by murmuring that she had "delighted us long enough."

Shaw's Cleopatra grows weary, but Miss Ashley grows wild. She fills out the text and enriches the stage. It is thrilling to watch her grow and expand in the role, changing from tumultuous, overindulged child to wise queen at the expense of happy innocence.

When Caesar departs at the end, promising to send Mark Antony for her lover, one longs to be around for the fireworks promised by such a passionate union, knowing full well Miss Ashley will be more than ready for the emotional explosion that awaits her.

THERE IS NO question that the presence of stars greatly enhances this new production of "Caesar and Cleopatra." The risks taken by Miss Ashley and Rex Harrison, as a crusty, bemused and benevolent Caesar, are the only risks worth taking. A great deal of the production staged by Ellis Rabb just nods sleepily around them.

The curtain rises on a chilly stage dominated by the sun god Ra, while the orange sun rises up and beyond the dark scrim as Rabb's mellifluous voice takes us back to 48 B.C. in Roman-occupied Egypt. The speech is delivered offstage, forcing the audience to focus attention on an inanimate object for what seems an interminable amount of time.

When the scene is set and the play begins, the production is further troubled by all sorts of conflicting accents popping up all over the place from Brooklyn, Harlem, Baton Rouge and Berkeley Square.

Novella Nelson summons the dark rhythms of her somber African ancestors in her cryptic and often menacing portrayal of Cleopatra's scheming, homicidal servant Flataceta, a role that often simmers but rarely boils in the hands of lesser actresses. Paul Hecht is a solid, no-nonsense soldier who brings to the role of Rufio an almost dedicated non-partisan vengeance.

Patrick Hines, so good at the blubbery Texas saloon operator Red Grooms in the recently-departed "Texas Trilogy," puffs himself up to the proportions of Francis L. Sullivan in the evil role of Pothinus, but his rural redolence clashes with his toga.

Some of the supporting roles are handled with less than the skill one customarily expects from Broadway.

IF I HAVE LEFT Rex Harrison for last, it's because his work as Caesar is so luminous, so shrewd and so challenging it is next door to impossible to describe. Good-humored, a man of conscience as well as worldly appreciations, he relishes the dates he nibbles between battles as fully as he savors the bosoms of the Egyptian tarts he's conquered.

It's a delicately manicured performance of aging sensuality, with Mr. Harrison going for the brain of the role instead of the groin. He has a fine bawling good time onstage and has never seemed looser or in more perfect control of his timing.

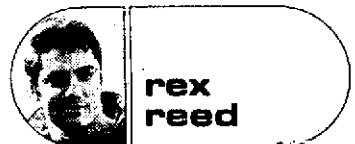

Shaw raises questions without answers, presents issues without pursuing them — it's a curious, creaky play that remains precious because of its humanity and soaring levels of theatricality, but this production reminds us that it must

"Caesar and Cleopatra" is in good hands. I left their company cheering.

DAVID MAMET is a young playwright from Chicago whose vital, arresting work is currently proving, once again, that overpraise might just be the most damaging kind of praise, especially when you are just beginning and so much is expected from you.

"American Buffalo," a violent, grim and sally written three-character play about three petty crooks in a Chicago junk shop, would be a nice mood piece for a small theatrical evening in Greenwich Village.

It has been elaborately overblown in a Broadway production that overwhelms the play and demands more of its audience than most audiences are willing to pay just to encourage new talent. Still, it's intense and valid, and Mr. Mamet is undoubtedly talented.

In less obtrusive, more claustrophobic circumstances, "American Buffalo" would be shattering. It's too small for Broadway, and such is the fate that often awaits talented writers going places.

This is a dumpy second-hand junk shop, back of the Chicago stockyards. Santa Loquasto's set is a magnificent labyrinth of used appliances, electrical wiring, rubber hoses, broken toys, discarded Pepsi cans, wheels, pots, ladders and scrap iron.

"How would you describe this?" I asked the woman sitting next to me. "A mess?" she replied, baffled. Well, yes. But too sumptuous a mess for the tiny play that unravels in its Kafkaesque maze.

A CUSTOMER has paid $90 for a rare coin — a vintage buffalo nickel. The con-man who owns the place (garrulously played by Kenneth McMillan) plans to rip off a coin collector for real profit. It is never clear whether the victim is the same man who purchased the original buffalo coin or somebody else, but a number of things about this play are unclear.

At any rate, the old man wants to send a young junkie (John Savage) on the job. A frustrated, half-mad hood (Robert Duvall) thinks he's too inexperienced.

Absolutely nothing ever happens, but if you've ever been robbed, burgled or mugged, and wondered what thieves were like, this is a play about their underworld, how they think, curse, compete and live on fried pies and delicatessen coffee. They're the punks who rip off elegant high-rise flats on Lakeshore Drive; the setting is Chicago, but it could happen in any metropolitan jungle.

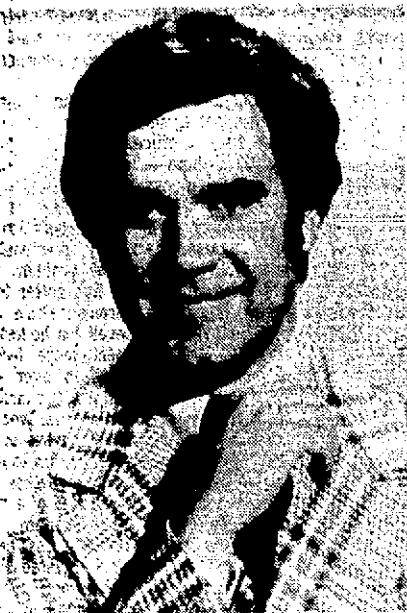

Success goes to their heads, and it's often funny watching numbskulls reason out their own illogical logic. The writing has a tedious rhythm ("what's he doin' here?" "I came here." "What're we talkin' about?" "What's he doin' here?" "I came here." "He came in.") that often assumes the pentameter of blank verse.

Mamet has a great ear for gutter dialogue, and some of the writing is very fine — punctuated all the more vividly by the inventive performances of Robert Duvall, Kenneth McMillan and John Savage. Ulu Grosbard, the director, establishes and maintains a furious intensity throughout, and "American Buffalo" blazes with energy.

As a mirror to the immature, violent, angry, empty, wasted lives of subterranean, it grips and holds the interest. But the writing is oddly unresolved; the evening uses the audience with false promise, then lets us down dramatically.

The best description, if I may borrow from a colleague who nailed it perceptively, is that "the play is to actors what a jam session is to jazz musicians" (How-well as worldly appreciations, he relishes the dates he nibbles between battles as fully as he savors the bosoms of the Egyptian tarts he's conquered.

It's a delicately manicured performance of aging sensuality, with Mr. Harrison going for the brain of the role instead of the groin. He has a fine brawling good time onstage and has never seemed looser or in more perfect control of his timing.

Shaw raises questions without answers, presents issues without pursuing them — it's a curious, creaky play that remains precious because of its humanity and soaring levels of theatricality, but this production reminds us that it must

"Caesar and Cleopatra" is in good hands. I left their company cheering.

DAVID MAMET is a young playwright from Chicago whose vital, arresting work is currently proving, once again, that overpraise might just be the most damaging kind of praise, especially when you are just beginning and so much is expected from you.

"American Buffalo," a violent, grim and satirically written three-character play about three petty crooks in a Chicago junk shop, would be a nice mood piece for a small theatrical evening in Greenwich Village.

It has been elaborately overblown in a Broadway production that overwhelms the play and demands more of its audience than most audiences are willing to pay just to encourage new talent. Still, it's intense and valid, and Mr. Mamet is undoubtedly talented.

In less obtrusive, more claustrophobic circumstances, "American Buffalo" would be shattering. It's too small for Broadway, and such is the fate that often awaits talented writers going places.

This is a dumpy second-hand junk shop, back of the Chicago stockyards. Santa Loquasto's set is a magnificent labyrinth of used appliances, electrical wiring, rubber hoses, broken toys, discarded Pepsi cans, wheels, pots, ladders and scrap iron.

"How would you describe this?" I asked the woman sitting next to me. "A mess?" she replied, baffled. Well, yes. But too sumptuous a mess for the tiny play that unravels in its Kafkaesque maze.

A CUSTOMER has paid $90 for a rare coin — a vintage buffalo nickel. The con-man who owns the place (garrulously played by Kenneth McMillan) plans to rip off a coin collector for real profit. It is never clear whether the victim is the same man who purchased the original buffalo coin or somebody else, but a number of things about this play are unclear.

At any rate, the old man wants to send a young junkie (John Savage) on the job. A frustrated, half-mad hood (Robert Duval) thinks he's too inexperienced.

Absolutely nothing ever happens, but if you've ever been robbed, burgled or mugged, and wondered what thieves were like, this is a play about their underworld, how they think, curse, compete and live on fried pies and delicatessen coffee. They're the punks who rip off elegant high-rise flats on Lakeshore Drive; the setting is Chicago, but it could happen in any metropolitan jungle.

Success goes to their heads, and it's often funny watching numbskulls reason out their own illogical logic. The writing has a tedious rhythm ("what's he doin' here?" "I came here." "What're we talkin' about?" "What's he doin' here?" "I came here." "He came in.") that often assumes the pentameter of blank verse.

Mamet has a great ear for gutter dialogue, and some of the writing is very fine — punctuated all the more vividly by the inventive performances of Robert Duval, Kenneth McMillan and John Savage. Ulu Grosbard, the director, establishes and maintains a furious intensity throughout, and "American Buffalo" blazes with energy.

As a mirror to the immature, violent, angry, empty, wasted lives of subterraneans, it grips and holds the interest. But the writing is oddly unresolved; the evening sends the audience with false promise, then lets us down dramatically.

The best description, if I may borrow from a colleague who nailed it perceptively, is that: "the play is to actors what a jam session is to jazz musicians" (Howard Kissel) which is perfectly O.K. But at these prices, I'd like to hear the melody.

One hears a lot of melodies in "Piaf: A Remembrance," but the important thing is Juliette Koka, a Finnish-born New Jersey housewife who emerges from the anonymous suburbs like the Phoenix from the ashes to blaze a hole through the heart.

There is some semblance of a play here, but it is so bare-boned and generally amateurish as to invite real disbelief. Three men on platforms are lit behind a scrim claiming to have known the real Edith Piaf.

It's like a Goodson-Todman set from "To Tell the Truth" and the play goes steadily downhill from there.

But suddenly, like a lightning flash banding "Shazam!" across the sky, on comes Koka, an impressionist version of a Renoir milkmaid, singing "Padam," and the tortured sparrow of Pigalle comes to life.

Piaf's hair was "bad perm and set"; Koka's is too contemporary. She is too healthy and too imposing for the part, but when she sings, she is electrifying. Arthritic, her life a tragedy of personal tragedy and illness, victim of anemia, bleeding ulcers, hepatitis and morphine addiction, Piaf was a pathetic creature.

Koka fires her spirit and shows the survival power and defiance that kept her going until she was too exhausted to go any further.

In her performance, the essence and fire of Piaf refuses to be extinguished. She survives a mediocre outline of a play the way Piaf survived pain. They should ditch the show and just let Juliette Koka do a one-woman Piaf evening.

Long after this feeble show is buried, Koka has an illustrious future awaiting her in the cabarets. The majesty of her stance, the desperation of her hands clutching at the air as if to hold on even to smoke, the haunting vibrato of her voice — all things considered, it's a stunning, miraculous U.S. debut. From the swamps of New Jersey, a star is born.

Him and her and him

In office only five months, Lyndon Johnson was roaring down the tracks like a highballing freight, with a greater drive than anyone since Teddy Roosevelt and more corn pone, probably, than anyone since Andy Jackson.

He was popping his bills out of Congress like candy bars from a vending machine. The economy was soaring and he was riding high in the public opinion polls and, if you didn't believe it, Lyndon Johnson would pull out little slips of paper to prove it. But on April 27, 1964.

He risks the animal lover vote.

There, out on the back lawn, are his beagle pups, Him and Her, and the President calls them over for the benefit of some visiting bankers. He feeds them sugar-coated vitamin pills (the dogs, not the bankers, who had already had theirs). He rolls them over and then startles his guests by tugging Him up by the ears.

Him yelps.

"Why did you do that?" asks a puzzled reporter.

"To make him bark. It's good for him. And if you've ever followed dogs, you like to hear them yelp," and he does it again, this time with Her.

The head of the Chicago Humane Society was not amused: "A dog has a front end and a back end and appreciates support from both ends."

The doghouse proved less than fatal and Lyndon Johnson went on to win election by the largest popular margin in history. It was a whirlwind campaign in which he derided Barry Goldwater as a man who would escalate that small war in Vietnam, where there were now 25,000 American "advisers." Johnson said repeatedly: "We don't want our American boys to do the fighting for Asian boys."

But the war he had inherited escalated under Lyndon Johnson and by the time he left office, American boys — 500,000 of them — were doing the fighting for Asian boys.

By the time he left office, he had gotten more civil rights legislation out of Congress than any president in history, but the racial problem was greater than ever. He had gotten more social legislation through than any president since Roosevelt but he lost the liberals. He had spent more federal money on education than ever was spent in history but he lost the intellectuals and the students. He had won the biggest majority in history but in the end it did not seem safe for him to go to his party's next convention. He had gotten much done this whirlwind of a man, but he couldn't get out of Vietnam.

In the White House press room, Charles Gorry of the Associated Press was late in getting the word that the President could be photographed with the bankers. He raced out, adjusting his camera on the run. Within 15 feet of the President, he set his lens at half the distance, skidded to a stop and snapped as Her's forepaws left the ground.

Fore and backhand vie in overseas tourney

A COUPLE OF Sundays ago we told you about the prestigious Bob Hope golf classic in Palm Springs.

Hope you enjoyed that column because here is another real classy story. The invitations read "You are invited to attend another semi-marvelous ordeal: The Fourth Annual Overseas Golf and Tennis World Championship Invitational Tournament Sponsored by The Inimitable El Cheapo."

According to the "press release," El Cheapo is sometimes known as Al Solomon who ran out of places to build in this area so he moved to Catalina Island to overbuild it.

This year, a new trophy was inaugurated called the "Al Solomon Semi-perpetual Real Person Cup."

Doug Benwell was the lucky winner of the prize — the head of a wild boar, suitably treated by a taxidermist of course. I am not too sure why Doug received this gem. Perhaps it had something to do with the fact that host, Al, winner Doug, and Stan Carter and J. B. Dixon were celebrating mutual birthdays on the weekend.

The golf tournament held at the challenging nine hole course on Catalina was chaired by Bob Greenberg.

Host Al coincidentally won honors for closest to the pin. J.B. Dixon won for fewest putts, ditto women winners were Mary Lou Dixon and Mary Birks. Grand prize winner was Ed Twining, still hot from playing at the Bob Hope tournament.

Tennis tournament chairspouses were Herb and Kathy Cook.

By sheer coincidence, winners of the carolyn mcdowell

tournament were Herb Cook and his partner, Millie Covington.

The stunning hardware was presented by Frank Grand at a sumptuous feast in El Galleon restaurant.

Also rans were Doug Birks, Stan and Barbara Allen, Hilma Greenberg, Bob and Joyce Carter, Patti Twining, Bob and Marynell Solomon, Judge Ralph and Terry Biggerstaff, Don Covington, Dan and Jerry Hazzard, Joy Grand, Joe and Kay Humfeld, Joan Hastings and Jack Papo.

THEY DIDN'T play golf or tennis.

But Dr. Walt and Diane Janssen went overseas. To ride a camel.

Actually they didn't really ride one of the beasts, they climbed aboard long enough for a picture taking session and quickly dismounted.

All this activity took place on a two-week tour of Egypt followed by four days of dedicated shopping in London, where they headquartered at the famed Brown's Hotel.

Diane says that Londoners are still living in a state of siege. Everyone is searched going into restaurants and department stores.

MORE TRAVEL notes.

Marian Hill and her husband, Donald, are taking to the gypsy life in an Air-stream motor home.

Marian has just retired as supervisor of School Food Services in the Long Beach district. During 27 years with the department she has "fed" several generations of students.

I remember my favorite cafeteria food was chopped steak and gravy on mashed potatoes. When my children were growing up, their favorite food was the same thing (obviously a fresh batch).

Marian was feted by co-workers at a retirement dinner at the Golden Sails.

BOB NELSON took on a new business (Berg-Nelson) and a new bride (Dee) way back in 1952 so a double silver celebration was in order.

The anniversary dinner party was held in the home of Jim and Holly Wise-carver with the Nelsons' son, Craig, assisting.

Among friends and fellow workers toasting the couple were Tony and Sara Ross, Al and Emily Goe, Ray and Estelle Gregoire, Marge Holst and husband, Dennis, Dick and Vi Vaughn, Ed and Blanche Dornacher and John and Lee Wisecarver.

HERE IS A good group. They have to be good to live up to a long name such as "Los Angeles Area Council of Hospital Volunteers."

Board members gathered at the home of President Wilma Long for a luncheon honoring retiring President Ione Ransom. They also presented her with a bon voyage gift for her upcoming trip to the Orient. I could fib and say they gave her some chopsticks. But the truth is—I forgot to ask what the gift was.

Gift givers were Lois Turner, president-elect; Hilda Baker, Memorial Hospital; Julie Wallis and Virginia Heron, Pacific Hospital; Peggie Widetick, Community Hospital; Franci Pickens, St. Mary Medical Center; Valera Crawford.

Dominguez Valley Hospital and Donna Peterson, Santa Monica Hospital.

LET'S HEAR IT for the CBs.

Ron Sanford received one for his recent birthday and it came in handy the very first time he used it.

Ron and wife, Della, were headed for their new cabin at Lake Arrowhead to meet friends Ian and Ethel Ann Roome for a belated Christmas dinner.

The Sanfords were tuned to the weather and emergency channel which advised them to put on chains, the tire kind of course. They did as the radio advised and ran into ice a few yards up the mountain.

The belated Christmas dinner came about because the Sanfords and the Roomes planned to be together on Dec. 25th and had to cancel said plans.

So who says you can't have turkey and trimmings AND snow in February?

Especially since Ian has been taking gourmet cooking lessons and the gals watched him do all of the work.

'What's the new hair style prediction for spring? Hope it's something to let a girl look like a girl!'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

If you want to know what's ahead (literally) for spring hair styles, it's the "sweet" bang. You heard right — sweet that rhymes with sweet. It's the perfect answer for a girl who likes a feminine look to a coiffure but doesn't want bangs too casual and fly-away.

The style is perfect with the ruffles and laces predicted for spring and summer fashions. A flashback to an earlier era, the coif modeled by actress Linda Peck incorporates the best of two worlds.

Hair is shorter and combed in soft waves. Or, if tresses are long, it is rolled into a series of gentle loops to give the appearance of a shorter bob.

When bangs are combed out, the forward curl is gently back-brushed for a slight lift; then, it is divided with one end tip curled to one side, the other toward the opposite side. However, it does not cover the entire forehead. There is plenty of "air space." The bang that was rolled away from the face is lightly teased, then combed back with only the ends dipping forward near the temples to form a framework of soft flip curls.

If you find the style flattering, you might follow Linda's lead and snip sideburns to a four-inch length. These, too, follow the same split parting, so one tip is fashioned toward the ear, the other draped onto the cheek.

It's amazing how the "sweet" bangs are flattering to almost every shape face. They offer a lighter, softer look, yet with a surprisingly dramatic touch due to the unusual parting.

Q. "I'm always scouring the markets searching for old pincushion dolls." Fran, Rapid City, S.D.

A. The half figures of china or bisque made with unglazed bases and holes for sewing needs, known as pincushion dolls, popped into prominence around the turn of the century. These lovely ladies appeared in many varieties ranging from the Garden Party Girls to the fun loving Flappers. Children, men and animal subjects were produced, but in very limited quantities. Marked examples are in short supply, although many dolls bear the country of origin "Germany." It may take more than a little pin money to purchase a pincushion doll with its arms extending from the body or holding an object such as a mirror or fan. HERE IS A good group. They have to be good to live up to a long name such as "Los Angeles Area Council of Hospital Volunteers."

Board members gathered at the home of President Wilma Long for a luncheon honoring retiring President Ione Ransom. They also presented her with a bon voyage gift for her upcoming trip to the Orient. I could fib and say they gave her some chopsticks. But the truth is —I forgot to ask what the gift was.

Gift givers were Lois Turner, president-elect; Hilda Baker, Memorial Hospital; Julie Wallis and Virginia Heron, Pacific Hospital; Peggie Widetick, Community Hospital; Franci Pickens, St. Marv Medical Center; Valera Crawford.

Dominguez Valley Hospital and Donna Peterson, Santa Monica Hospital.

LET'S HEAR IT for the CBs.

Ron Sanford received one for his recent birthday and it came in handy the very first time he used it.

Ron and wife, Della, were headed for their new cabin at Lake Arrowhead to meet friends Ian and Ethel Ann Roome for a belated Christmas dinner.

The Sanfords were tuned to the weather and emergency channel which advised them to put on chains, the tire kind of course. They did as the radio advised and ran into ice a few yards up the mountain.

The belated Christmas dinner came about because the Sanfords and the Roomes planned to be together on Dec. 25th and had to cancel said plans.

So who says you can't have turkey and trimmings AND snow in February?

Especially since Ian has been taking gourmet cooking lessons and the gals watched him do all of the work.

Women are asking

'What's the new hair style prediction for spring? Hope it's something to let a girl look like a girl!'

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

If you want to know what's ahead (literally) for spring hair styles, it's the "twee" bang. You heard right — twee that rhymes with sweet. It's the perfect answer for a girl who likes a feminine look to a coiffure, but doesn't want bangs too casual and fly-away.

The style is perfect with the curls and laces predicted for spring and summer fashions. A flashback to an earlier era, the coif modeled by actress Linda Peck incorporates the best of two worlds.

Hair is shorter and combed in soft waves. Or, if tresses are long, it is rolled into a series of gentle loops to give the appearance of a shorter bob.

The bangs supply the fashion news. They are set in a different manner. Hair is parted in the middle. Right side is wrapped forward on a medium-sized roller, while left is twirled back from hair line.

When bangs are combed out, the forward curl is gently back-brushed for a slight lift; then, it is divided with one end tip curled to one side, the other toward the opposite side. However, it does not cover the entire forehead. There is plenty of "air space." The bang that was rolled away from the face is lightly teased, then combed back with only the ends dipping forward near the temples to form a framework of soft flip curls.

If you find the style flattering, you might follow Linda's lead and snip sideburns to a four-inch length. These, too, follow the same split parting, so one tip is fashioned toward the ear, the other draped onto the cheek.

It's amazing how the "twee" bangs are flattering to almost every shape face. They offer a lighter, softer look, yet with a surprisingly dramatic touch due to the unusual parting.

Flea Market Finds

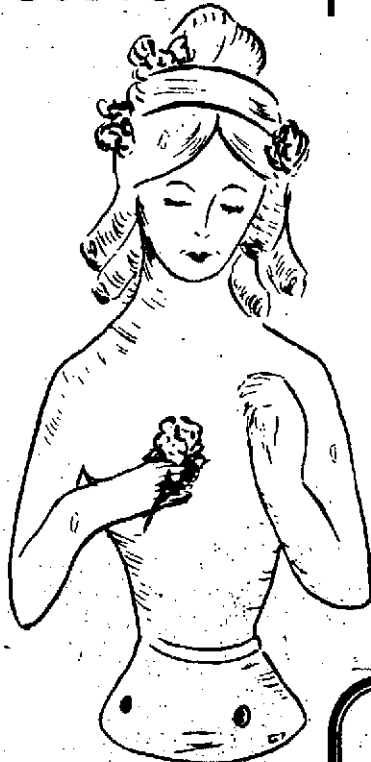

Keep collectors on pins, needles

Q: "I'm always scouring the markets searching for old pincushion dolls." Fran, Rapid City, S.D.

A: The half figures of china or bisque made with unglazed bases and holes for sewing needs, known as pincushion dolls, popped into prominence around the turn of the century. These lovely ladies appeared in many varieties ranging from the Garden Party Girls to the fun loving Flappers. Children, men and animal subjects were produced, but in very limited quantities. Marked examples are in short supply, although many dolls bear the country of origin "Germany." It may take more than a little pin money to purchase a pincushion doll with its arms extending from the body or holding an object such as a mirror or fan. Value guide: China, molded hairdo, 1920s, $28.

Q: "Is R. S. Germany china desirable?" —Eleanor, Indiana, Pa.

A: Faced with ever escalating prices on R. S. Prussia wares, many ceramic seekers are starting to hoard the somewhat more plentiful and less expensive R. S. Germany pieces. Wholesalers of the late 1800s proclaimed it as a high grade line of distinction, beautifully and tastefully decorated. No one would dispute their claim. Value guide: bowl, poppies, 9 inches diameter, $40; cookie jar, pink carnations, $48; syrup pitcher, roses, $37.

Q: "I noticed numerous items advertising breweries at the local market." —Mrs. D. L. Sisbury, N.C.

A: Breweriana is the term applied to numerous articles distributed by breweries to promote their products. Collectors have developed an unquenchable thirst for this material which includes ashtrays, glasses, cans, trays, mugs, signs and posters. Value guide: beer glass, "E. L. Porter Brewing Co.," $11; Broadside, "Anheuser Busch," color, 1890, $150; mug, "Blatz Beer," pottery, $12; thermometer, "Stegmaier Beer," $20; trav, "Valley Forge Beer" $32.

Antique forum series to begin Wednesday

A series of free antique forums sponsored by Long Beach Unified School District School for Adults begins Wednesday in Gant Elementary School auditorium, 1854 N. Britton Drive.

Eleanor Brook of Rossmore will conduct the series, which continues on successive Wednesdays. All are scheduled from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The first session deals with "Antiques as an Investment: Rip-off or Reality?"

Succeeding lessons will cover "Victorian Silver" on March 16; "19th and 20th Century Pottery" on March 23, and "The 20s, 30s and 40s: Art Deco to Occupied Japan" on March 30.

Mrs. Brook teaches a class in antiques and collectibles at Cypress College, the Long Beach Recreation Department and for the Golden Lantern seminars. She is a member of the Orange County Antique Society and the South Bay Antiquarian Society.

New drug found effective against psoriasis

ben zinser

Skin-surface application of a drug called 6-aminonicotinamide appears to be an effective treatment for psoriasis, a scaly skin disease.

So says Dr. Herschel S. Zuckheim of the UC San Francisco School of Medicine in a report to the American Academy of Dermatology. Dr. Zuckheim is a former Long Beach doctor.

Multi-purpose device

A doctor has been granted a patent for an automatic electronic device that is said to be able to measure and record a patient's blood pressure, temperature, pulse and breathing rate — all in one minute.

The developer, Dr. Alvin J. Marx of New York City, says the device collects information through electronic sensors and records it automatically on printed tape. He believes it will make possible enormous savings in health care costs.

Modern Medicine has a report on the instrument.

New back support

A support for the relief of chronic back pain is described in a new medical report.

The support consists of an insert that can be molded and shaped directly on the patient. After the molding takes place, the insert becomes rigid and provides firm support.

The product was developed by Rolyan Medical Products, Menomonee Falls, Wis., and is described in a report in Family Practice News, a medical newspaper.

The new drug, not yet approved for general use, did a better job than cortisone-like drugs. For instance, in a study of 34 psoriatic patients, the new drug did better than the well-known triamcinolone in 30 patients.

Only one patient had a better response to triamcinolone, Dr. Zuckheim says.

Both agents were applied two or three times daily for four weeks.

Affected areas treated with 6-aminonicotinamide cleared completely in 28 patients.

Details of the study appear in Skin & Allergy News, a newspaper for physicians.

Choking death

A dangerous method of eating can lead to fatal food-choking, a type that apparently won't respond to new first-aid procedures.

A La Jolla doctor, reporting in the New England Journal of Medicine, cites the case of a 54-year-old woman doctor who strangled while eating peanut butter.

She was eating it by the spoonful directly from the jar.

Her husband and adult children were present and attempted to revive her with the Heimlich maneuver (list in the abdomen), but the so-called Heimlich Hug failed to dislodge the obstructing material. She was rushed by ambulance to a hospital. There were no responses, but she was kept on a respirator for six days.

The anesthesiologist had difficulty removing the peanut butter.

The victim was pronounced legally dead six days later.

Food choking is now sixth in the causes of accidental death, says Dr. Donald H. Atlas.

Autopsy showed no coronary artery or heart disease whatsoever. Strangulation from aspirated (sucked into the lung) peanut butter was the cause of death.

In-Sights An individual decision

Dear Dr. Menninger,

After reading your recent column and the letter of Mrs. Helen Graebner regarding the positive aspects of marriage, I was moved. It is wonderful to know that marriages of such completeness still exist.

I find myself, however, unable to agree with her on the negative aspects of two persons choosing to live together. Her ideals are wonderful and certainly worth striving for, but each individual must seek this happiness in a different way.

Living together has its advantage. I myself have been living with a sensitive and loving man for almost a year, without benefit of marriage. I am not doing so because it is "fashionable" or to shield myself from being hurt.

dr. walt menninger

Surely in any relationship in which two people live together there is a commitment and, along with it, the possibility of being hurt. Simply because that commitment is not of record at City Hall does not make it any less real.

The true definition of marriage should be the sharing, caring, hoping and dreaming of two people together. Whether or not we eventually marry, I will never feel "cheated of a wonderful and loving relationship."

Perhaps the reason so many people today choose to live together is because many are, like Mrs.

Graebner and myself, "hopelessly old-fashioned." Almost everyone wants a happy home and family life, yet the divorce rate is continually on the increase — simply because too many are impatient and tend to rush into marriages that don't bring the desired results.

Our society is improving, not declining, when it allows us to find out, without legal bonds, just how compatible we really are. Two mature people can live together happily for a number of years and not necessarily make ideal partners for a lifetime.

Perhaps if more people took the time to thoroughly learn about each other before the ceremony, there would be less multiple marriages and less people growing into a "lonely old age." — Sincerely, S. D.

Tension, thrills emanate from novel's simple plot

This novel, like all of Charles Webb's, gives the surface impression that anyone could have written it. Of course no one but Webb could have. No one else achieves so much with so few movements from place to place, dialogue as banal as that of real life, a bare minimum of description (no pun intended here, although one scene takes place in the Blue Stallion Men's Baths).

His talent never receives its due, because he makes writing seem so easy. He certainly never received proper credit for "The Graduate," a movie as dependent upon its literary source as any I can recall. There is no one whose works I approach with more assurance that I am about to have a good time.

A woman seeks to recover her husband, who has left her for a man. To her amazement she finds herself cast in the role of villain. Her children are removed from her by court order.

That's about all the plot there is, yet the story acquires a tension equal to the most popular of thrillers, and the reader is apt to find himself experiencing that terrifying dislocation of sanity associated with the works of Kafka, in particular the sense that what one has always assumed to be wrong is now accepted by everyone but oneself as right.

Is the story an assault on the smugness of the straight world or is it a warning against creeping gait? Although Webb always scrupulously avoids authorial intrusions, it is easier in his earlier works to sense where his sympathies lie. I suspect, however, that different readers will line up on different sides of "Elsinor." And that they won't be quite sure who exactly are the "different" ones.

books

Jesse Comes Back. By Clifton Snider. Russ Haas Press. Long Beach $1.

Clifton Snider's slim little volume of poems is doubly reassuring: first of all, that our new poets are still finding roots in the local milieu, and, second, that they are still engaged by the Christian myth. Drawing for his background on the Long Beach scene, on Signal Hill, and Belmont Shore, Snider's poem cycle is suffused with an awareness, if ironic, of Christianity with its demands and implications.

The persona of Jesse (the name itself alludes severally, I am sure, to Joshua, Jesus, even to Jesse James) is an obsessing thorn in the poet's side. Like the Wise Fool of Eastern religions, or the unpredictable and elusive Master of Carlos Castaneda, Jesse presents many and ambivalent faces. He is, by turns, attractive, full of promises, and then sadistically disloyal to his disciple. In the ambivalence of his characterization, I was reminded of Chesterton's "The Man Who Was Thursday." In one poem, for example, Jesse asks, "in a grandfather voice," "if I'd be so kind as to spare a buck." When the poet gives him the buck, Jesse's only thank you is to throw him "back into the pit." In answer to the poet's bewildered, "Why?" the reply is cruelly enigmatic: "Because I've got you now."

The poems form a cycle based on the life of Christ. Clearly designated Christian symbols inform the poems, as for example, "I fell upon the thorns of life," or the allusion to Christ's curse on the barren fig tree, when Jesse stomps on a flowerless geranium — "I can't stand," he said, "to see anything give up." Sacramental symbols of vermin-encrusted bread and "celestial brandy" are the basis of "Come Quickly." Here again, there is a lightness of touch, a kind of "flip" irony in approach: "Come quickly," said Jesse, "for I've a plan whereby we'll both be winners. Eat this bread."

The irony and ambivalence of approach are sometimes tinged with perversity, as when Jesse seduces the narrator's sister (an oblique incarnation motif?) and sexually molests little girls in parks. But the shock of the perverseness is astringent and serves to underscore the complexity of the poet's religious vision — and, particularly, a vision that is both blurred and heightened in the context of the present day.

It is good that Snider has found a voice, and he speaks authoritatively. His quatrains are both ballad-like and reminiscent of the hymn stanza. I would, neverthe-

The Unabridged Mark Twain. Opening Remarks by Kurt Vonnegut Jr. Running Press, 38 South 19th Street, Philadelphia, Pa., 19103. $8.95 paperbound.

Breathes there a first-class living American writer with soul so dead that he doesn't like Mark Twain? If so, it isn't Kurt Vonnegut Jr., whose introduction to "The Unabridged Mark Twain" is so sparkling as to make you bury your nose forthwith in the 1,300 pages that ensue. Here, absolutely unabridged, are the novels of Mark Twain — The Innocents Abroad, The Adventures of Tom Sawyer, The Prince and the Pauper, The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, and lest we forget — A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court. Here too are the short stories — The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County, The Million-Pound Bank Note, The Man That Corrupted Hadleyburg, among them; and some of the choicest Mark Twain essays in wit and humor. So send for it post-haste, to Running Press; it's worth far more than the $8.95 list price and the 25 cents for postage.

The Office Gardener. By Jacqueline Heriteau. Hawthorn, $9.95 cloth. $5.95 paperbound.

A flower can make you forget a boss's frown; a little potted plant on the desk can make you forget the same boss's big pot. "Plants," says Jacqueline Heriteau, "can compensate for crowded elevators, grumpy bosses, mistakes someone thinks you have made, and ones you really did make."

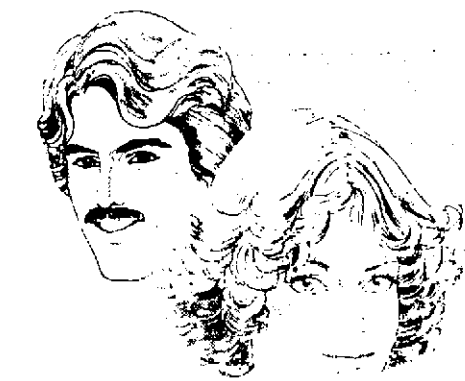

So this well-known gardening expert proceeds to tell you how to make the office, or at least your corner of it, brighter, dealing with anything from a lone geranium on your desk to a miniature greenhouse. She tells you how to make them thrive, how to make them look their best, how to best care for them. Her projects include room divider floor gardens, bookcase gardens, three-shelf wall gardens, terrariums. Fifty line drawings enhance her book.

Tension, thrills emanate from novel's simple plot

This novel, like all of Charles Webb's, gives the surface impression that anyone could have written it. Of course no one but Webb could have. No one else achieves so much in so little: a few movements from place to place, dialogue as banal as that of real life, a bare minimum of description (no pun intended here, although one scene takes place in the Blue Stallion Men's Baths).

His talent never receives its due, because he makes writing seem so easy. He certainly never received proper credit for "The Graduate," a movie as dependent upon its literary source as any I can recall. There is no one whose works I approach with more assurance that I am about to have a good time.

A woman seeks to recover her husband, who has left her for a man. To her amazement she finds herself cast in the role of villain. Her children are removed from her by court order.

That's about all the plot there is, yet the story acquires a tension equal to the most popular of thrillers, and the reader is apt to find himself experiencing that terrifying dislocation of sanity associated with the works of Kafka, in particular the sense that what one has always assumed to be wrong is now accepted by everyone but oneself as right.

Is the story an assault on the smugness of the straight world or is it a warning against creeping gait? Although Webb always scrupulously avoids authorial intrusions, it is easier in his earlier works to sense where his sympathies lie. I suspect, however, that different readers will line up on different side of "Elsinor." And that they won't be quite sure who exactly are the "different" ones.

books

Jesse Comes Back. By Clifton Snider. Russ Haas Press. Long Beach $1.

Clifton Snider's slim little volume of poems is doubly reassuring: first of all, that our new poets are still finding roots in the local milieu, and, second, that they are still engaged by the Christian myth. Drawing for his background on the Long Beach scene, on Signal Hill, and Belmont Shore, Snider's poem cycle is suffused with an awareness, if ironic, of Christianity with its demands and implications.

The persona of Jesse (the name itself alludes severally, I am sure, to Joshua, Jesus, even to Jesse James) is an obsessing thorn in the poet's side. Like the Wise Fool of Eastern religions, or the unpredictable and elusive Master of Carlos Castaneda, Jesse presents many and ambivalent faces. He is, by turns, attractive, full of promises, and then sadistically disloyal to his disciple. In the ambivalence of his characterization, I was reminded of Chesterton's "The Man Who Was Thursday." In one poem, for example, Jesse asks, "in a grandfather voice," "if I'd be so kind as to spare a buck." When the poet gives him the buck, Jesse's only thank you is to throw him "back into the pit." In answer to the poet's bewildered, "Why?" the reply is cruelly enigmatic: "Because I've got you now."

The poems form a cycle based on the life of Christ. Clearly designated Christian symbols inform the poems, as for example, "I fell upon the thorns of life," or the allusion to Christ's curse on the barren fig tree, when Jesse stomps on a flowerless geranium — "I can't stand," he said, "to see anything give up." Sacramental symbols of vermin-encrusted bread and "celestial brandy" are the basis of "Come Quickly." Here again, there is a lightness of touch, a kind of "flip" irony in approach: "Come quickly," said Jesse, "for I've a plan whereby we'll both be winners. Eat this bread."

The irony and ambivalence of approach are sometimes tinged with perversity, as when Jesse seduces the narrator's sister (an oblique incarnation motif?) and sexually molests little girls in parks. But the shock of the perverseness is astringent and serves to underscore the complexity of the poet's religious vision — and, particularly, a vision that is both blurred and heightened in the context of the present day.

Clairol asks, “Wouldn't you look better if you improved the color of your hair?”

I know I'd look better if I changed the color of my hair. But I'm afraid I won't pick the right shade.

It's easy. On Clairol® haircoloring products you will find a color chart that tells you exactly what shade your natural hair color will go to. Of course, the shade you choose should complement your skin tones. Since you're just starting out, try one of our many shampoo-in haircolors. They're the simplest to use.

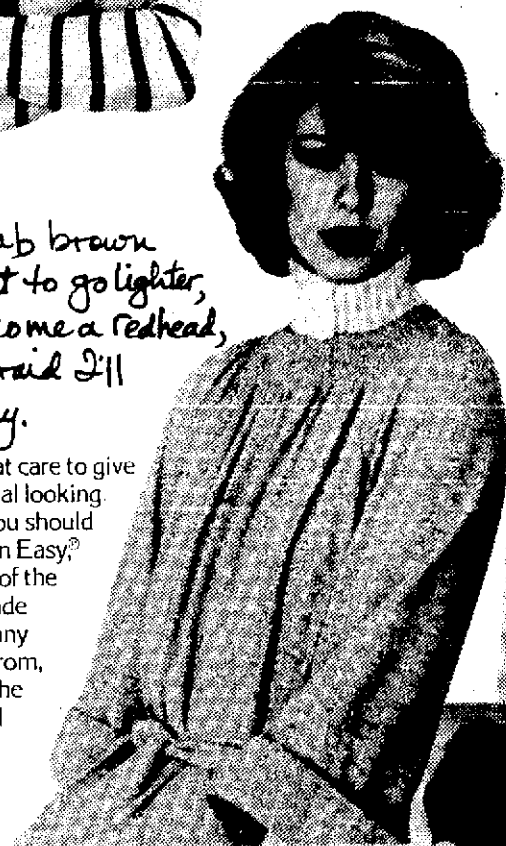

I like my natural color, and I'd like to cover up my gray. But I am concerned about using peroxide!

What you need is Loving Care Color-Lotion. It has no peroxide. It covers your gray without changing your natural hair color. It has conditioners, and is actually good for your hair.

I have drab brown hair. I want to go lighter, or even become a redhead, but I'm afraid I'll look phony.

We take great care to give you the most natural looking shades possible. You should definitely try Nice 'n Easy,® because it has one of the most complete shade ranges. With so many shades to choose from, it's a cinch to find the one that's a natural for you.

I'd love to add highlights, but I feel my hair is too delicate and dry for haircoloring.

All haircoloring products from Clairol have conditioners. Since you just want to add gentle highlights, you should try our Happiness.® It's a simple foam-in product with no peroxide. Just try a shade and if you aren't totally in love with it, you can wash it out within 4 to 5 shampoos. Then just try another shade. Happiness adds highlights and enhances the color as well as the condition of your hair.

I would like to try haircolor, but I'm worried about how it will affect the condition of my hair.

All of our haircolorings have built-in conditioners. It's an extra plus you get when you color your hair with Clairol products. Your hair feels soft, thicker and looks shiny. And is so easy to manage.

Art students merit attention

AMONG Lakewood High School student David Galchutt's winning entries in LBAA competition was this striking acrylic titled "Ethiopian."

For their excellence in art, four students in the Long Beach Unified School District have each received a $150 scholarship from the Long Beach Art Association.

Winning entries and others receiving special mention are on display through March at the association's gallery in the Long Beach Recreation Department, 155 Queens Way Landing.

Selected by James Nastasia, professor of art at Cerritos College, to receive the scholarships were Elizabeth Henry and Karin Wall of Millikan High School, and David Galchutt and Scott Prior of Lakewood High. Selection was based on over-all excellence in each of five pieces submitted by each student.

Receiving honorable mention for their over-all work were Theresa Ferreira and Kami Current, both of Millikan.

Ribbon awards, based on individual pieces, went to Prior for silver; wood and ivory jewelry: Kathy Johnson, Wilson High, for ink drawing, and Tim Wood, Jordan High, watercolor.

Winning honorable mention among the 125 entries were Sharon Wright and Cao Hun Tri, Poly; Maxine Rabinowitz and Sheriann Burnham, Wilson, and Arthur Lum, Lakewood.

The exhibit, described by an association spokesperson as "outstanding — the students show promise for further development — well presented," may be seen week days from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. There is no admission charge.

AN AWARDS ceremony and reception for artists participating in the third annual Lenten art festival of First United Methodist Church will take place today at 4 p.m. in the church, 507 Pacific Ave.

Judged by Hans Burkhardt, prominent west coast artist, as best in the festival for its "spiritual quality and depth of culture" was a painted tapestry, "And He Shall Reign Forever," by Stefania Howard. The Polish-born artist escaped after the Nazi blitzkrieg and was with the Free Polish Army in Norway before coming to the U. S. after World War II.

Winning awards in oils are Salvador Casso, "Lord of the Dance," and Dorothy Stratton, "And He Fed Them."

In the watercolor and graphics category, winning artists are J. Gary Kornmayer, "How Lonely Sits the City," and Alice Foss Thorne, "Ichthus Ascending."

In mixed media and collage, winners are Dennis Davis, "American Easter Spiritual," and J. R. Brown, "Heirs with Christ."

The congregational favorite ribbon was voted to Helen Hooper for "Christians: Still Asleep."

Burkhardt gave honorable mention to Jack E. Bond, Kathleen Neal, Velma Lisberg, Mid Ruth, Anna Hayes and E. Stratton.

Theme of the festival is "Seven Days that Changed the World." In addition to the art works in the sanctuary and foyer, 19 paintings by Burkhardt are on exhibit in the narthex.

His crucifixion series, including those influenced by his sojourn in Mexico, his response to the Vietnam war and the assassinations of President Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. help illustrate the festival theme.

The paintings will be exhibited each Sunday afternoon through Easter April 10, from 2 to 5 p.m. and on other days by appointment.

Art festival programs will take place each Sunday at 4 p.m. this month culminating on March 27 with the presentation of Dubois' "The Seven Last Words of Christ" by the sanctuary choir.

"AFRICA DYING," a performance revealing the traditional use of the Ibo funeral mask, will take place Saturday at 8 p.m. on the grounds of the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Persons attending are advised to bring blankets or folding chairs.

The performance will feature dancers from Long Beach State University, tribal music and a narrative by Bill Lynch. The program accents the current exhibition at the museum on African tribal sculpture.

ART BY YOUTH is accented not only by the Long Beach Art Association this month, but also by the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave. Opening today is an exhibit of 68 entries submitted by local junior and senior high school students.

The show was organized by Sherry Swan of the Long Beach Unified School District Art Department, and art committee of the Jewish Community Center. Cash awards for winning entries will be made March 27 at 2 p.m. at the center.

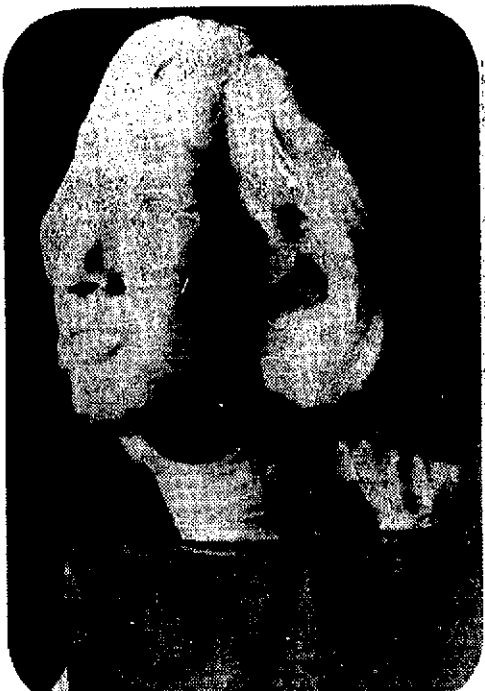

Visiting hours at the center's lobby gallery are Sunday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Monday through Thursday, 7 to 10 p.m.

A RETROSPECTIVE exhibit of sea and landscapes by Mary Allsop Cummings, who paints under the name of Maria, may be viewed during March at the Cobblestone Gallery, 3908 E. Fourth St.

LANDSCAPES, florals and still life are among television's Bill Alexander's work currently on exhibit at The Art Gallery, 10900 Los Alamitos Blvd., Los Alamitos.

JURYING FOR the '77 Art-a-Fair, to take place from mid-July through August, is scheduled March 26 at Laguna Beach High School, 625 Park St. Entries should be submitted between 8 and 11 a.m. that day.

Quality traditional art and limited fine crafts are emphasized.

CERAMIC head, done by Scott Prior of Lakewood High, won approval of judge in the student scholarship contest. Entries by district students are on view through March at Long Beach Art Association gallery.

"LORD OF the Dance," an oil by Salvador Casso of Long Beach, won first in its category in Lenten art festival at First United Methodist Church.

'Survival': penetrating production

Five young blacks from Soweto, a riot-torn ghetto area close to Johannesburg, South Africa, will present an unusual and incisive production called "Survival" Friday at 8 p.m. at the Inner City Cultural Center, 1920 Lemon Ave.

Their production features music, song, dance, mime, satire, self-parody, bold humor and lacerating drama based on actual experiences and reflections while spending time locked up in South African prisons for petty offenses.

The troupe calls itself the South African Black '77 Theater Project, and might never have embarked on a national tour without the efforts of James P. Berthoff, professor of drama at Orange Coast College, Costa Mesa.

Visiting last summer in Johannesburg, Berthoff happened to see the production. Bringing the troupe to the United States meant unbelievable red tape, hurdles and negotiations for the indomitable Berthoff.

"If I had known how touchy and complicated all this was, I probably would never have started the project," he recalls. "I only had a vague idea at that time of the incredibly subtle machinations of the whole operation of getting these Africans out of South Africa and onto American college campuses and other theaters to perform their works."

SPONSORED BY Orange Coast College students, the actors arrived last month to begin a tour of western universities and theaters. Following appearances in California, Oregon and Washington, they will tour the mid-west and east coast.

Future performances are scheduled for London, Berlin, Paris and Tel Aviv.

Admission to the Long Beach presentation of "Survival" is $3 general; $2.50 for senior citizens and students, and 50 cents for persons living within two miles of Inner City Cultural Center.

The troupe also has scheduled a series of performances at Ebony Showcase, 4718 W. Washington Blvd., Los Angeles, playing Tuesday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. Additional dates are March 15, 16 and March 22-27.

Matinees at the theater are scheduled March 15, 16, 22, 23 and 24 at 1:30 p.m. General admission to evening performances is $5; $3 for students and senior citizens. All matinees will be $2.

ACTORS IN searing "Survival" production are Seth Sibanda, left, Dan Maredi, Themba Ntinga and David Kekana, rear, of South African '77 Theater Project. Peter

Sephuma understudies. The group has a one-night engagement in Long Beach Friday.

Words spoken, words sung

"Mirror, Mirror..." a drama of the tenuous relationship between love and addiction by Diane McWilliams Frolov of Long Beach, is playing through March at the Cast Theater, 804 N. El Centro, Hollywood.

Three of the young playwright's plays, including "Mirror, Mirror..." have been produced at UCLA. William Schreiner directs the Hollywood production.

Play schedule is Thursdays and Fridays at 8:30 p.m.; Saturday, 7 and 9:45 p.m. and Sunday, 7:30 p.m.

"FOUR SAINTS in Three Acts," an opera with words by Gertrude Stein and music by Virgil Thomson, opens Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the studio theater of Long Beach State University, 6101 E. Seventh St.

In principal roles are Garry Corgiat, Juli Burkhardt, Peggy Martin, Diane Orlando, Peter Shypert, Roger Koerner and Janice Stahl.

Directing the production is Michael Lyman. Hans Lampl is musical director.

Additional 8:30 p.m. performances are scheduled Friday and Saturday, and March 16-19. The opera will be staged at 7:30 p.m. next Sunday.

General admission is $3; faculty/staff, $2.50; students, $2, Sunday through Thursday. Prices increase by 50 cents for Friday and Saturday presentations.

Concert set at museum

A brass quartet featuring musicians from the California Festival Players will present a free chamber concert Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at the J. Paul Getty Museum, 17985 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu.

The event is first in a series of six concerts by the Festival Players at the museum. Advance parking reservations are required for guaranteed admission. They may be obtained by calling the museum.

Art students merit attention

AMONG Lakewood High School student David Galchutt's winning entries in LBAA competition was this striking acrylic titled "Ethiopian."

For their excellence in art, four students in the Long Beach Unified School District have each received a $150 scholarship from the Long Beach Art Association.

Winning entries and others receiving special mention are on display through March at the association's gallery in the Long Beach Recreation Department, 155 Queens Way Landing.

Selected by James Nastasia, professor of art at Cerritos College, to receive the scholarships were Elizabeth Henry and Karin Wall of Millikan High School, and David Galchutt and Scott Prior of Lakewood High. Selection was based on over-all excellence in each of five pieces submitted by each student.

Receiving honorable mention for their over-all work were Theresa Ferreira and Kami Current, both of Millikan.

Ribbon awards, based on individual pieces, went to Prior for silver, wood and ivory jewelry; Kathy Johnson, Wilson High, for ink drawing, and Tim Wood, Jordan High, watercolor.

Winning honorable mention among the 125 entries were Sharon Wright and Cao Hun Tri, Poly; Maxine Rabinowitz and Sheriann Burnham, Wilson, and Arthur Lum, Lakewood.

The exhibit, described by an association spokesperson as "outstanding — the students show promise for further development — well presented," may be seen week days from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. There is no admission charge.

AN AWARDS ceremony and reception for artists participating in the third annual Lenten art festival of First United Methodist Church will take place today at 4 p.m. in the church, 507 Pacific Ave.

Judged by Hans Burkhardt, prominent west coast artist, as best in the festival for its "spiritual quality and depth of culture" was a painted tapestry, "And He Shall Reign Forever," by Stefania Howard. The Polish-born artist escaped after the Nazi blitzkrieg and was with the Free Polish Army in Norway before coming to the U. S. after World War II.

Winning awards in oils are Salvador Casso, "Lord of the Dance," and Dorothy Stratton, "And He Fed Them."

In the watercolor and graphics category, winning artists are J. Gary Kornmayer, "How Lonely Sits the City," and Alice Foss Thorne, "Ichthus Ascending."

In mixed media and collage, winners are Dennis Davis, "American Easter Spiritual," and J. R. Brown, "Heirs with Christ."

The congregational favorite ribbon was voted to Helen Hooper for "Christians: Still Asleep?"

Burkhardt gave honorable mention to Jack E. Bond, Kathleen Neal, Velma Lisberg, Mid Ruth, Anna Hayes and E. Stratton.

Theme of the festival is "Seven Days that Changed the World." In addition to the art works in the sanctuary and foyer, 18 paintings by Burkhardt are on exhibit in the narthex.

His crucifixion series, including those influenced by his sojourn in Mexico, his response to the Vietnam war and the assassinations of President Kennedy and Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. help illustrate the festival theme.

The paintings will be exhibited each Sunday afternoon through Easter April 10, from 2 to 5 p.m. and on other days by appointment.

Art festival programs will take place each Sunday at 4 p.m. this month culminating on March 27 with the presentation of Dubois' "The Seven Last Words of Christ" by the sanctuary choir.

"AFRICA DYING," a performance revealing the traditional use of the Ibo funeral mask, will take place Saturday at 8 p.m. on the grounds of the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd. Persons attending are advised to bring blankets or folding chairs.

The performance will feature dancers from Long Beach State University, tribal music and a narrative by Bill Lynch. The program accents the current exhibition at the museum on African tribal sculpture.

ART BY YOUTH is accented not only by the Long Beach Art Association this month, but also by the Jewish Community Center, 2601 Grand Ave. Opening today is an exhibit of 68 entries submitted by local junior and senior high school students.

The show was organized by Sherry Swan of the Long Beach Unified School District Art Department, and art committee of the Jewish Community Center. Cash awards for winning entries will be made March 27 at 2 p.m. at the center.

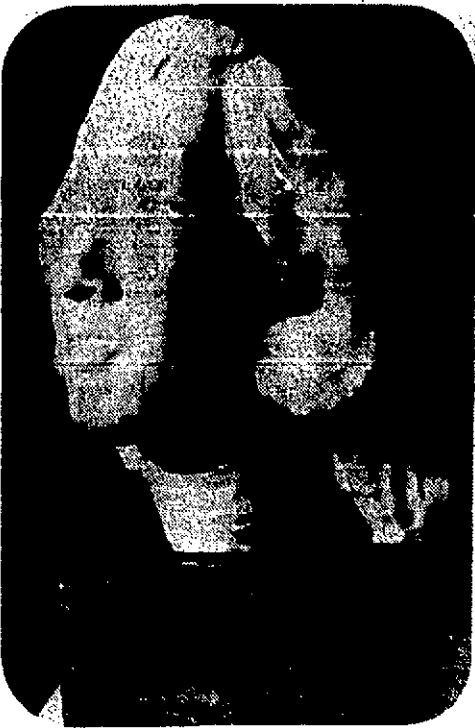

Visiting hours at the center's lobby gallery are Sunday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Monday through Thursday, 7 to 10 p.m.

A RETROSPECTIVE exhibit of sea and landscapes by Mary Allsop Cummings, who paints under the name of Maria, may be viewed during March at the Cobblestone Gallery, 3908 E. Fourth St.

LANDSCAPES, florals and still life are among television's Bill Alexander's work currently on exhibit at The Art Gallery, 10900 Los Alamitos Blvd., Los Alamitos.

JURYING FOR the '77 Art-a-Fair, to take place from mid-July through August, is scheduled March 26 at Laguna Beach High School, 625 Park St. Entries should be submitted between 8 and 11 a.m. that day.

Quality traditional art and limited fine crafts are emphasized.

CERAMIC head, done by Scott Prior of Lakewood High, won approval of judge in the student scholarship contest. Entries by district students are on view through March at Long Beach Art Association gallery.

"LORD OF the Dance," an oil by Salvador Casso of Long Beach, won first in its category in Lenten art festival at First United Methodist Church.

'Survival': penetrating production

Five young blacks from Soweto, a riot-torn ghetto area close to Johannesburg, South Africa, will present an unusual and incisive production called "Survival" Friday at 8 p.m. at the Inner City Cultural Center, 1920 Lemon Ave.

Their production features music, song, dance, mime, satire, self-parody, bold humor and lacerating drama based on actual experiences and reflections while spending time locked up in South African prisons for petty offenses.

ACTORS IN searing "Survival" production are Seth Sibanda, left, Dan Maredi, Themba Ntinga and David Kekana, rear, of South African '77 Theater Project. Peter

Sephuma understudies. The group has a one-night engagement in Long Beach Friday.

Staff photos by TOM SHAW

The troupe calls itself the South African Black '77 Theater Project, and might never have embarked on a national tour without the efforts of James P. Berthoff, professor of drama at Orange Coast College, Costa Mesa.

Visiting last summer in Johannesburg, Berthoff happened to see the production. Bringing the troupe to the United States meant unbelievable red tape, hurdles and negotiations for the indomitable Berthoff.

"If I had known how touchy and complicated all this was, I probably would never have started the project," he recalls. "I only had a vague idea at that time of the incredibly subtle machinations of the whole operation of getting these Africans out of South Africa and onto American college campuses and other theaters to perform their works."

SPONSORED BY Orange Coast College students, the actors arrived last month to begin a tour of western universities and theaters. Following appearances in California, Oregon and Washington, they will tour the mid-west and east coast.

Future performances are scheduled for London, Berlin, Paris and Tel Aviv.

Admission to the Long Beach presentation of "Survival" is $3 general; $2.50 for senior citizens and students, and 50 cents for persons living within two miles of Inner City Cultural Center.

The troupe also has scheduled a series of performances at Ebony Showcase, 4718 W. Washington Blvd., Los Angeles, playing Tuesday and Wednesday at 7 p.m. Additional dates are March 15, 16 and March 22-27.

Matinees at the theater are scheduled March 15, 16, 22, 23 and 24 at 1:30 p.m. General admission to evening performances is $5; $3 for students and senior citizens. All matinees will be $2.

Words spoken, words sung

"Mirror, Mirror..." a drama of the tenuous relationship between love and addiction by Diane (McWilliams) Protov of Long Beach, is playing through March at the Cast Theater, 804 N. El Centro, Hollywood.

Three of the young playwright's plays, including "Mirror, Mirror..." have been produced at UCLA. William Schreiner directs the Hollywood production.

Play schedule is Thursdays and Fridays at 8:30 p.m.; Saturday, 7 and 9:45 p.m. and Sunday, 7:30 p.m.

"FOUR SAINTS in Three Acts," an opera with words by Gertrude Stein and music by Virgil Thomson, opens Thursday at 8:30 p.m. in the studio theater of Long Beach State University, 6101 E. Seventh St.

In principal roles are Garry Corgiat, Juli Burkhardt, Peggy Martin, Diane Orlando, Peter Shypert, Roger Koerner and Janice Stahl.

Directing the production is Michael Lyman. Hans Lampl is musical director.

Additional 8:30 p.m. performances are scheduled Friday and Saturday, and March 16-19. The opera will be staged at 7:30 p.m. next Sunday.

General admission is $3; faculty/staff, $2.50; students, $2. Sunday through Thursday. Prices increase by 50 cents for Friday and Saturday presentations.

Concert set at museum

A brass quartet featuring musicians from the California Festival Players will present a free chamber concert Wednesday at 1:30 p.m. at the J. Paul Getty Museum, 17985 Pacific Coast Highway, Malibu.

The event is first in a series of six concerts by the Festival Players at the museum. Advance parking reservations are required for guaranteed admission. They may be obtained by calling the museum.

Area halls reverberate with music

A rousing concert featuring 200 of the best young musicians in the area will be presented Saturday at 8 p.m. in Wilson High School auditorium, 10th Street and Ximeno Avenue.

For the 40th year Fred Ohlendorf will be on the podium to direct the annual joint concert by the All-District Junior High and Senior High School Orchestras. Orchestral works will include compositions by Bach, Beethoven, Strauss, Barber and Tchaikovsky.

Featured soloist will be flutist Janet Buxman of Lakewood High School performing "The Flute of Pan" by Mouquet.

The public is invited to the concert at no admission charge.

KNOWN FOR his exciting improvisations on hymns, Dr. Paul Manz of Minneapolis is once again in the Southland for two appearances. He will perform today at 7:30 p.m. in First Lutheran Church, 905 Atlantic Ave.

On Monday the Long Beach, Los Angeles and Pasadena chapters of the American Guild of Organists will present Dr. Manz in a recital and hymn festival in First Friends Church, Philadelphia and Washington Streets, Whittier. There will be a $2 admission to the 8:15 p.m. concert.

Much in demand as organist-director of hymn festivals, Dr. Manz is organist-choirmaster of Mount Olive Lutheran Church in Minneapolis and professor of music at Concordia College in St. Paul. He has published nine volumes of organ improvisations and his choral works are widely used by church and college choirs.

AT 4 P.M. TODAY, the sanctuary quartet of First Congregational Church, Third Street and Cedar Avenue, will present a program including Schumann's "Spanisches Liederspiel" Opus 74, ensembles of Handel, Haydn and Monteverdi and a variety of solos.

Assisted by James Bossert, pianist, the quartet is composed of Barbara Crockett, soprano; Rebecca Tepfer, mezzo-soprano; Michael More, tenor, and G. Bruce Loganbill, baritone.

The program is open to the public. An offering will be taken.

TWO OF THE FEW Catholic choirs still performing the Latin Ordinaries as well as Renaissance motets and Gregorian chant will present "Sacred Music through the Ages" next Sunday at 4 p.m. in Covenant Presbyterian Church, 607 E. Third St.

Performing under the direction of Paul Salamunovich will be the choirs of St. Charles Borromeo Catholic Church of Hollywood and St. Basil Catholic Church of Los Angeles. They have performed as an antiphonal choir with the Los Angeles Master Chorale and have appeared on Christmas Eve specials on television.

Salamunovich is associate professor of music at Loyola Marymount University, Los Angeles, and associate conductor of the Los Angeles Master Chorale.

An authority on Gregorian chant and plainsong, he was honored by Pope Paul VI in 1969 as a papal knight for his contributions to liturgical music.

The concert, devoted mainly to Renaissance music, is free to the public. An offering will be taken.

CONCERT BAND, under direction of Marvin Branson, and Symphonic Band II, directed by Gordon Norman, will give a concert Thursday at 8 p.m. in the multi-purpose room of the university union, Long Beach State University.

General admission is $2; student admission, $1. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Dear Abby

Ten ways to make husband happy

DEAR ABBY: About 10 years ago you gave the editor of our church bulletin permission to reprint two of your columns. One was your "Ten Commandments For Wives," and the other was your "Ten Commandments For Husbands."

Will you please run them again? — MRS. N. D. G.

DEAR MRS. G.: With pleasure.

TEN COMMANDMENTS FOR WIVES

1. Defile not the body neither with excessive foods, tobacco nor alcohol, that thy days may be long in the house which thy husband provideth for thee.

2. Putteth thy husband before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter and thy son, for he is thy lifelong companion.

3. Thou shalt not nag.

4. Permit no one to tell thee that thou art having a hard time of it; neither thy mother, thy sister nor thy neighbor, for the Judge will not hold her guiltless who letteth another disparage her husband.

5. Thou shalt not withhold affection from thy husband, for every man loveth to be loved.

6. Forget not the virtue of cleanliness and modest attire.

7. Forgive with grace, for who among us do not need forgiveness?

8. Remember, that the frank approval of thy abigail van buren

husband is worth more to thee than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers.

9. Keep thy home in good order, for out of it cometh the joys of thy old age.

10. Honor thy Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

Next Sunday I'll print the "Ten Commandments For Husbands."

At Wit's End

Dust has colorful history

I got this pathetic letter last week from a woman whose family was threatening to send her to a Home for the Criminally Clean.

She had all the symptoms of a Domestic-Obsessive. In her words, "I used to vacuum the furnace ducts once a week and wash them down with soap and water monthly. I scrubbed the driveway with a still brush when it started to look shabby. God forgive me, I even got a ladder and scrubbed down the entire outside of a white frame house because it looked dirty."

The high spot of her week was watching the sanitation truck suck up the garbage.

Through years of reading my column, she has been rehabilitated and is once again able to take her place in a normal society. The other day as she walked through her dining room and saw draperies that had been hanging there for six months with the pins still in them, she thought of me and wanted to write and tell me what I had done for her.

If that story doesn't make you want to sell your sweeper, nothing will. Actually, I haven't done anything. All I've tried to do all these years is to point out that dust was put here to measure time. If there are any newlyweds out there who do not know the history of dust, let me enlighten you.

Dust was discovered in California by John Wayne in 1846... four years before California became a state. Little was known about dust. People just covered their mouths with a handkerchief and hoped it moved east. It did. The winds of Arizona caught it and blew it across the Plains. The rains in Washington turned it into mud and travelers tracked it into Montana and Wyoming.

IN CHICAGO, it enjoyed drinking man's status as men yelled, "Here's mud in your eye." The South reveled in its poetry, singing, "It's a treat to heat your feet on the Mississippi mud."

Dust would have hit Maine and eventually petered out had it not been for an antiseptic housewife in Portland who saw a speck of it one day on her window sill, grabbed a cloth and wiped it up. She then shook her cloth outside her window and sent the dust back to the West. It's been going back and forth across the nation ever since.

The future of dust (or its demise) lies with the American housewife. It's up to her to call a truce on this shifting of dust from one state to another. We've come a long way since that little disgusting housewife in Maine polished her window sill. At least, we've gotten the American motto to read, "In God We Trust." It used to be Dust.

Contemporary Living

Bride's gift to the groom

Many girls today are puzzled as to what they should do to reciprocate when they receive their engagement rings. One girl even wrote me asking if she should give the boy an engagement ring! (If you have any doubt, the answer is no. We haven't yet come to double ring engagements.)

However, she can give him a present at the time of their engagement if she really wants to, keeping in mind that just before the wedding ceremony they will exchange gifts of sentimental value and as much monetary value as they can afford.

Remember, too, in choosing an engagement present, that your ring will be returned to the young man if for any reason the engagement is broken, so your gift to him should be dispensable.

Wedding gifts from bride to groom are something else. A double ring ceremony (the bride buys her groom's wedding band) does not preclude this personal, additional gift from the bride. Here, she should go for the very best quality she can possibly afford for whatever it is she has decided to buy him.

If he has his eye on a particular watch, that's easy shopping for you, but be sure to get the best quality strap or band to go with it and know his taste in watch bands before selecting it.

OTHER THINGS suitable for a bride to give her groom are:

A good suitcase.

If he's a backgammon buff or chess enthusiast, a good set will last him a lifetime. These can be very expensive, so shop around until you can recognize value.

Any piece of jewelry (silver or gold, not "costume") that you know he would enjoy wearing.

Select something that fits in with your lifestyle and your financial picture that will be of lasting quality and worth. Most traditional brides still like to think of that gift as "lasting as long as the marriage," but with the present grim statistics on marital dissolution, it might be better to aim for something that will last a great deal longer than the average marriage.

DEAR ABBY: We've always taught our children to address adults as "Mr." and "Mrs." But we have some neighbors who are older than we are, and they keep asking our children to call them "Rita" and "Frank."

Training children is hard enough nowadays without neighbors like these to complicate matters. We've always been on friendly terms with them and don't want any trouble now. So how do we handle it? — ANNOYED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Tell your neighbors (privately, of course) that you have instructed your children to address adults as "Mr." and "Mrs.," and when adults ask to be addressed by their first names, they confuse the children and encourage them to disregard their parents' wishes.

If you tell them in a nice way they will probably cooperate. And if they don't, it won't hurt your children to learn that not everyone conforms to a social code, and Rita and Frank are two such nonconformists.

Don't Take Our Word...
Broadcasters are constantly looking* for qualified Account Executives — the people responsible for a station's one and only source of revenue: advertising. Demand for this expertise has always exceeded supply. That's because there's never been a place to acquire first-hand know-how: about the media and advertising business in general, and broadcast advertising in particular. The famous KJIS Broadcasting Workshop has filled that vacuum. Now there's an evening workshop in broadcast advertising where you can qualify for the available jobs.
The Workshop would be pleased to mail you an information packet describing in much more detail what broadcast Account Executives do, how the workshop trains you to do it, and where it leads — moneywise and otherwise.

She then shook her cloth outside her window and sent the dust back to the West. It's been going back and forth across the nation ever since.

The future of dust (or its demise) lies with the American housewife. It's up to her to call a truce on this shuffling of dust from one state to another. We've come a long way since that little disgusting housewife in Maine polished her window sill. At least, we've gotten the American motto to read, "In God We Trust." It used to be Dust.

Bride's gift to the groom

Many girls today are puzzled as to what they should do to reciprocate when they receive their engagement rings. One girl even wrote me asking if she should give the boy an engagement ring! (If you have any doubt, the answer is no. We haven't yet come to double ring engagements.)

However, she can give him a present at the time of their engagement if she really wants to, keeping in mind that just before the wedding ceremony they will exchange gifts of sentimental value and as much monetary value as they can afford.

A good suitcase. If he's a backgammon buff or chess enthusiast, a good set will last him a lifetime. These can be very expensive, so shop around until you can recognize value.

Any piece of jewelry (silver or gold, not "costume") that you know he would enjoy wearing.

Select something that fits in with your lifestyle and your financial picture that will be of lasting quality and worth. Most traditional brides still like to think of that gift as "lasting as long as the marriage," but with the present grim statistics on marital dissolution, it might be better to aim for something that will last a great deal longer than the average marriage.

OTHER THINGS suitable for a bride to give her groom are:

mind that just before the wedding ceremony they will exchange gifts of sentimental value and as much monetary value as they can afford.

Remember, too, in choosing an engagement present, that your ring will be returned to the young man if for any reason the engagement is broken, so your gift to him should be dispensable.

Wedding gifts from bride to groom are something else. A double ring ceremony (the bride buys her groom's wedding band) does not preclude this personal, additional gift from the bride. Here, she should go for the very best quality she can possibly

Learn to Super Sew.

After 8 easy, inexpensive lessons you will have made at least:

DEAR ABBY: We've always taught our children to address adults as "Mr." and "Mrs." But we have some neighbors who are older than we are, and they keep asking our children to call them "Rita" and "Frank."

Training children is hard enough nowadays without neighbors like these to complicate matters. We've always been on friendly terms with them and don't want any trouble now. So how do we handle it? — ANNOYED PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: Tell your neighbors (privately, of course) that you have instructed your children to address adults as "Mr." and "Mrs." and when adults ask to be addressed by their first names, they confuse the children and encourage them to disregard their parents' wishes.

If you tell them in a nice way they will probably cooperate. And if they don't, it won't hurt your children to learn that not everyone conforms to a social code, and Rita and Frank are two such nonconformists.

Don't Take Our Word...
Broadcasters are constantly looking* for qualified Account Executives—the people responsible for a station's one and only source of revenue: advertising. Demand for this expertise has always exceeded supply. That's because there's never been a place to acquire first-hand know-how about the media and advertising business in general, and broadcast advertising in particular. The famous KiiS Broadcasting Workshop has filled that vacuum. Now there's an evening workshop in broadcast advertising where you can qualify for the available jobs.
The Workshop would be pleased to mail you an information packet describing in much more detail what broadcast Account Executives do, how the workshop trains you to do it, and where it leads—moneywise and otherwise.

This week's dual offering helps you get your dining and storage needs together. The contemporary folding table designed to harmonize with any decor extends only 17 inches from the wall when folded up. However, it pulls out a mighty eight feet and seats ten. The version pictured here was made with birch plywood, but any of the darker hardwood veneer plywoods may be used. Full size traceable parts, step-by-step photos and instructions, plus a complete materials list makes this table a snap to build.

This handsome buffet will work for you in a score of ways. Measuring only 20-inches wide by 61-inches long, this unit provides more than 25 cubic feet of storage space.

Its main purpose is to store linens, silver and dinnerware, but it may also be used as a liquor cabinet, or even for housing stereo components. The doors may be accented with metal hardware shown here (to match your decor).

To obtain the Contemporary Folding Table Pattern #334, send $3.50 (includes first class postage and handling). To obtain #412 Buffet, send $2 by check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P. O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

Advice to the Taxlorn

U.S. citizens working abroad required to file returns

DEAR MR. SMITH: Our church sent a missionary to South Africa in 1968, and he remained there with his family. His compensation started at $400 per month, and is now $700. Was he required to file Form 1040 and pay tax on this income? Will there be any penalties? — A. L. P.

Generally, U.S. citizens working abroad must file Form 1040 and report all their income, although their compensation may be excludable. The tax-free salary must be added to other income to determine whether a return is required. From 1976 on, Form 1040 should be filed even if not required, because the government may expand its policy of providing tax refunds to those who pay no tax. However, the usual penalties for not filing do not apply when no tax is due. Obtain and study IRS publications 54, 517 and 569, and Form 2555 for further details.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1970 I joined a limited partnership for the purpose of purchasing and operating an apartment building. By 1974 the accounting loss exceeded my investment. The result of course, was a negative capital. By terms of the partnership agreement, the limited partners were equally liable for the mortgage with the general partner.

May ordinary losses reported exceed the amount of capital invested? May the excess of loss, negative capital, be used to offset the subsequent capital gain, if any, as a result of liquidating the partnership by selling the real estate owned? — R. L.

jacob smith

Basically, the rules on real estate limited partnerships remain the same as they were prior to the 1976 Tax Reform Act. Therefore, you may continue to deduct your share of operating losses to the extent that your negative capital account does not exceed your share of the mortgage encumbrance.

If an excess loss is disallowed, it becomes deductible in future years, to the extent that your share of the encumbrance exceeds your negative capital account or if you have a positive capital account. These changes can result from the partnership's sale of property, or from operating at a net profit, rather than at a net loss.

DEAR MR. SMITH: Two motorcycles were stolen from me Feb. 13, 1976. One was recovered. I reported the theft to the Sheriff's Department. Can the motorcycle not recovered be deducted as a loss on my income tax return?

A legal fee of $300 was paid to change the name of my 21-year-old son to the name of his step-father. Is this deductible? — J. M. B.

If the stolen motorcycle was not being used for business, you could claim the loss as an itemized deduction. The deduction is limited to cost, or value when stolen, whichever is less, reduced by $100. Legal expenses for a change of name would appear to be a purely personal and non-deductible expense.

DEAR MR. SMITH: My mother purchased land in New Mexico and I inherited the property when she died in 1966. A mining company leased all the parcels in a certain section to mine for uranium and did begin work. I received royalty payments from them in 1976. Is the entire amount received income or are there allowances, such as depreciation? — G. H.

For federal income tax purposes, report the royalties you received on Schedule E, part II, Form 1040. Also, enter the deduction for depletion, which, for uranium, is 22 per cent of your royalties. If you find that you must report this income to your state of residency, and also to New Mexico, as a non-resident, you may find that a tax credit is allowed. Check the instructions of both states.

The Aces

by
IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn: I was dealt all four aces on two consecutive deals in my weekly rubber bridge game. Recently I read in your column that the odds on one deal were 378-1 against. What are the odds for two consecutive deals? — Long Shot, Long Beach, Calif.

Answer: Before the first four ace hand is dealt, the odds are 13340-1. After the first hand is dealt, the odds of the second one remain at 378-1.

Dear Mr. Corn: I believe that the laws stipulate that the form of a bid is a number (one through seven) followed by a denomination (E.G. four spades). How about occasional extra words like, "I bid four spades" or "I'll raise to two hearts"? — Channel Chatter, Detroit

Answer: All bids should be made in the proper form as you state. Those who habitually add a word should always do so. They may be in violation, but we all have a bad habit or two. What is particularly out of order is inconsistency. The ACBL Bulletin quotes an appropriate story.

"An opening bid and an overcall was followed by 'I double.' This was explained as a penalty double. The overcaller noticed that the convention card noted the pair was using negative doubles. When this was pointed out, opener replied, 'Double by itself is negative. I double is for penalties.'"

Needless to say, the pair received an on the spot discourse regarding permissible communication followed by the appropriate penalty.

Dear Mr. Corn: In a duplicate game my defending opponent result I would have made the rest for an overtrick. His revoke caused a one trick set and the director was summoned. He ruled that I be allowed my contract but I lost my overtrick. Was this correct? — Two Time Loser, Santa Rosa, Calif.

Answer: No. The director should attempt to restore equity and the non-offending side should never lose a trick because of an opponent's revoke.

Dear Mr. Corn: We bid these hands as follows and missed an easy game. Who gets the booby?

West	East
♠ K J 8 7 2	♠ A 6 5
♥ K 4	♥ Q J 9 2
♦ A K 7 5	♦ 6 3
♣ 6	♣ J 10 9 7 2

High Heart, West All-in, West

Answer: East gets the blame for never supporting spades. I rate a two spade raise 100 per cent and a one no trump response 10 per cent.

Dear Mr. Corn: My partner went set at six clubs after this bidding:

Partner	Opponent	Me	Opponent
1♠	1♥	1♠	Pass
4NT	Pass	5♣	Pass
6♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Partner held this hand and I held the spade king, the worthless heart ace and the diamond jack. Was partner out of line?

♠ 7	♠ 7
♥ A K Q 7	♥ A K Q 7
♦ A K Q J 10 9 8 4 3	♦ A K Q J 10 9 8 4 3

Answer: I would say that partner was very unlucky not only in what he found in your hand, but because the defense did not lead a heart. With a heart lead, the spade loser goes and the slam becomes easy. Better luck next time.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I am past 73 years of age. About two years ago I sold my home to make way for a proposed highway. My capital gain was $20,000, based on a sales price of $50,000. I then lived on the premises as a tenant of the highway department. The plan for a new highway was cancelled, and I repurchased the home for $50,000. In making my 1976 income tax return, I reported a long-term capital gain, taking advantage of the special rule for people over 65. Should I sell the property and make a profit, can I take advantage of once-in-a-lifetime rule, since the first sale to the state was an involuntary conversion? — S. S.

Have you actually filed your 1976 Form 1040 as your letter implies? When you made the sale two years ago, was it reported then? You must determine the specific year in which you first realized gain on the sale. From the close of that year, the law allows an additional two years to replace the residence that you were forced to sell because condemnation was threatened.

If you qualify, you may elect to recognize no gain at all on your sale to the highway department. Another provision would make your sale non-taxable if the purchase was made within 18 months of the date of sale. In any event, you still have the right to use the once-in-a-lifetime rule on a future sale, if within the prescribed time, you file an amended return on Form 1040X, and cancel the previous use.

JOHN DAWSON
New champagne brunch on Sundays

IT'S THE PERFECT SETTING for a delicious, leisurely Sunday champagne brunch. It's the view restaurant in the sky atop the Long Beach Holiday Inn, Lakewood Boulevard at Willow Street, adjacent to the San Diego Freeway.

Innkeeper John Dawson and food-beverage manager Ward Trobaugh recently added the brunch — served Sundays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. — to the Mayan Room's activities, which include luncheons, dinners, banquets, cocktails and entertainment every night. Decorated in the warm orange and pink hues favored by the Mayan Indians, the dining room and adjacent cocktail lounge have large windows, offering unobstructed sky views of the streets, trees and houses of east Long Beach, Municipal Airport, Signal Hill and adjacent areas.

The inn's brunch is sitdown-style with service by well-trained, gracious waitresses. The prices include a glass of champagne with a peach. One of the most popular choices is the "country special," $2.75, including a sausage patty, two eggs, biscuits with country gravy, hashbrown or country-fried potatoes or grits. People enjoy the contrast of dining in a sophisticated-looking city restaurant on old-fashioned items that bring back memories of farm cooking.

Also on the brunch menu are eggs Benedict, $3.75; ham, bacon or sausage with eggs, $3.25; western or cheese omelets, $3.25; smoked pork chop, $3.75, and an open-face prime rib au jus sandwich, $4.50. All come with toast and potatoes or grits as well as the champagne. Another brunch favorite is a waffle with strawberries and whipped cream.

Eighty-five per cent of the restaurant's guests are local residents and the rest are travelers. "We depend on repeat business," says Dawson who is so successful as a hotel manager that last year he was named "Innkeeper of the Year" in competition with 1,800 other Holiday Inn innkeepers throughout the world.

The inn's No. 1 chef is Verna Walsh, who's been on the staff over five years. Ward has been the food-beverage chief for more than six years.

Chef Verna's nightly dinners include attractions named for the restaurant's Mayan theme, such as beef brochette picado, $5.95; broiled beef slices Azteca with exotic pungent sauce, $6.25; and seafood brochette nescobar, $5.95. Other selections range from breast of chicken Kiev and smoked pork chops to stuffed flounder, broiled halibut grand prix, beef liver, and choice steaks, including the surf-turf combination of steak with a crab leg.

THE DREADED SPECTRE OF INFLATION somehow continues to overlook the French Riviera restaurant, South Street just west of Paramount Boulevard.

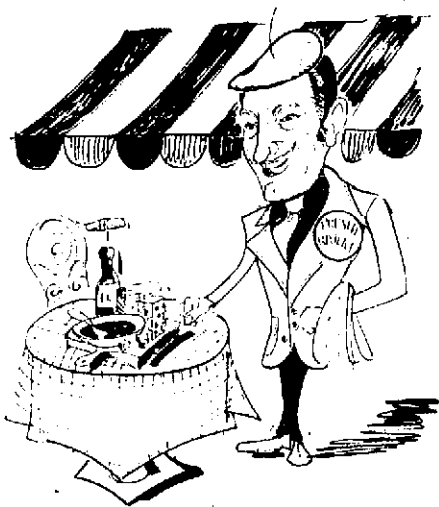

Amazingly, you can still dine at the French Riviera for low prices that are a throwback to the early 1960s. One of the fine entrees is pan-fried whitefish, merely $2.75. It's not served on a cutdown dinner, either. It's a generous affair which starts with a tureen of steaming, wonderful soup, plenty for second and third helpings. Next comes salad with choice of dressing and a hot loaf of French bread, served on a board with a sharp knife. The entree comes with rice pilaf and a fresh vegetable, usually delectable, deep-fried sliced zucchini.

The French Riviera's friendly, considerate new owners are Bob Cunningham and his wife Lupe. Their dinners start Sundays at 1 p.m. Other low-priced quality entrees served with all those courses include beef Stroganoff, $3.25; veal Monterey with avocado, $3.25; the tenderest filet of sole Marguery with baby shrimp in a creamy wine sauce, $3.25; a small but good filet mignon, $3.45, and prime rib au jus, $3.75.

Many people who like their biggest meal in the middle of the day have discovered that the French Riviera's luncheons are as big as dinners. They save a lot of money because those big luncheons are $1.95. A different special is served each day. Mondays through Fridays, 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Each comes with soup AND salad, potato, vegetable, roll, butter and coffee. Here's this week's schedule: Monday, stuffed bell peppers; Tuesday, chicken continental; Wednesday, beef Stroganoff; Thursday, veal Monterey; Friday, pan-fried sole.

Next week, the $1.95 luncheons will be: Monday, stuffed cabbage; Tuesday, chicken cacciatore; Wednesday, beef stew Orleans; Thursday, beef ribs Francaise; Friday, whitefish. The French Riviera also has many other luncheon ideas, ranging from hot entrees to sandwiches. The French dip sandwich with soup and salad is $1.75.

The Cunninghams are experienced restaurant operators who are continuing the unusual policies established by the French Riviera's founder and former owner, Mehmet Gursay. Their philosophy is: "The best food at the lowest possible price." Even the quality cocktails and tap wines at the French Riviera cost less than other restaurants. Big Margaritas are $1; vodka gimlets are 85 cents. A half-carafé of Franzia tap wine is only $1.25, the lowest price in town; dandy wine, too. During the happy hour, 4 to 6 p.m. week days, cocktail prices start at 75 cents.

Sail the seas to faraway locales

By HERB SHANNON
I.P.T. Travel Editor

Cruising fans will be delighted with the expanded choices of sea voyages or air-sea cruises available from the Southland this year. In addition to the familiar shipping lines serving the West Coast for the past several years, global cruisers are again making Los Angeles a major port of call on itineraries to Europe and the Orient.

New destinations are also on tap, including a maiden Royal Viking cruise-fly program to Ireland, with a six-day land tour of Dublin, the Ring of Kerry and the Shannon country, County Clare, South America, Alaska, the Caribbean, the South Pacific, Australia, New Zealand, the Orient, Britain, Scandinavia and the Mediterranean rim countries offer old favorites and new adventures in shore excursions.

Possibly the most elegant way to travel to New York this year will be aboard the Queen Elizabeth 2, departing Los Angeles on March 23 on a 14-day cruise to Mexico, the Panama Canal, the Caribbean and the Big Apple.

The Cunard Line flagship will be completing a global voyage which began in New York Jan. 15, and will continue to France and England in a rare opportunity for passengers joining the ship in Los Angeles to experience a traditional transatlantic crossing.

SAILING for Acapulco today after her maiden call to Los Angeles, the Soviet cruise ship MS Mikhail Lermontov launches a South Pacific balalaika cruise to Tahiti, New Zealand and Australia. For her West Coast debut, the 20,000-ton luxury liner, featuring the only rigid no-tipping rule in the Pacific, is booked to its 600-passenger capacity.

Princess Cruises, which revived the dormant Pacific cruise market a decade ago with party cruises to the Mexican Riviera, also offers 32 cruises to Alaska and Canada this year aboard the Island Princess, Pacific Princess and San Princess. Included are two series of "Value Cruises" in the spring and autumn which feature substantial savings over summer sailings.

Prudential Lines has added five "Bonus Cruises" to its South American schedule, bringing the total to 13 for 1977. The bonus in each of these specially designated cruises is the free shore excursions in every Latin American port of call.

There are 13 ports along the cruise route to Mexico, the Panama Canal and around the South American continent. Prudential's Santaliners also serve San Francisco and Vancouver from Los Angeles.

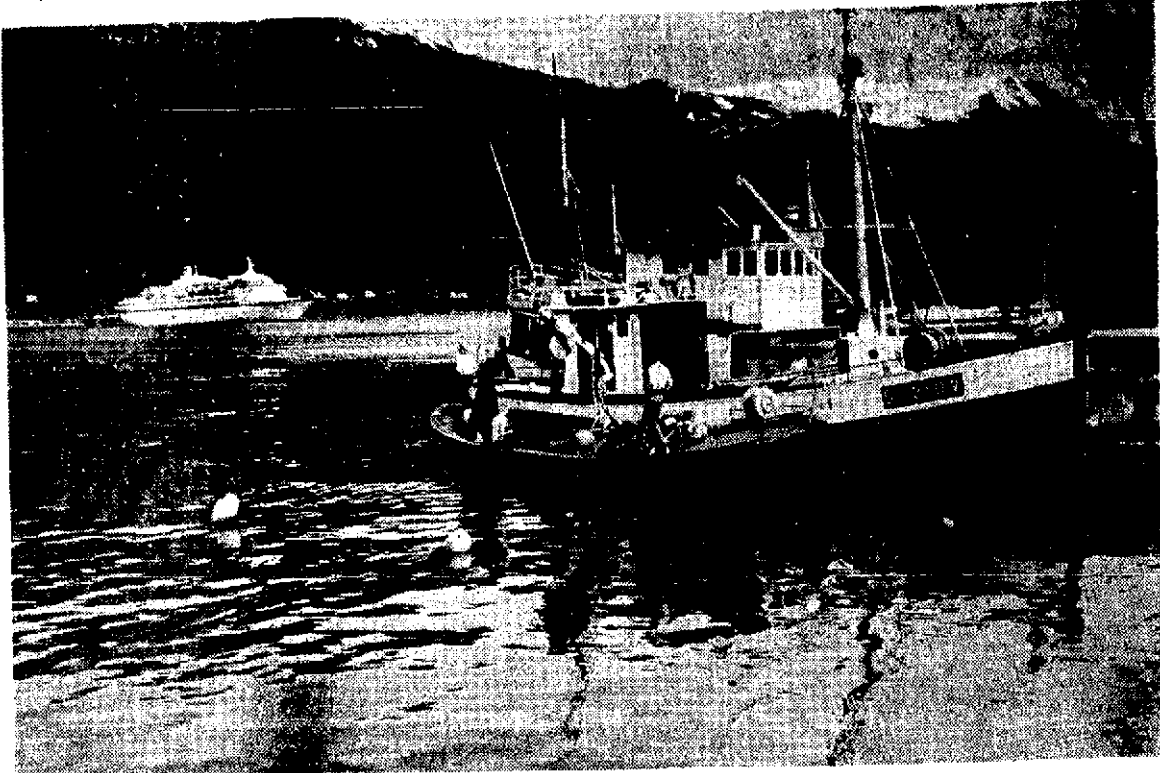

SITMAR Cruises, which pioneered budget-stretching air-sea combinations in 1973, continues the concept this year with a larger number of fly-free cruises.

Passengers from Los Angeles can save up to $270 in air fare for cruises aboard the TSS Fairwind out of Port Everglades, Fla., to the Caribbean and South America. From the West Coast, TSS Fairsea cruises from Los Angeles to Mexican ports autumn, winter and spring, and from San Francisco to Canada and Alaska during the summer. Air-sea combination tickets save Southlanders $51 air fare on the San Francisco sailings.

Royal Viking Line's sea-air British Isles-Norwegian Fjord cruise, which includes the land tour in the Irish Republic, offers two itineraries. On May 5 the Royal Viking Sky leaves Fort Lauderdale and arrives at Southampton May 18, followed by the cruise.

The alternate air-sea route begins May 16 with a British Airways flight to London to join the cruise and Irish tour, returning to New York from Shannon Airport via Aer Lingus. Irish International Airlines. These are the first cruise-fly programs for Ireland.

OTHER Air-Sea cruises available directly from Los Angeles: Norwegian Caribbean Lines popular

ROYAL VIKING SKY SAILS TO NORWAY'S FJORDS AND IRELAND THIS YEAR

"Cloud 9" weeklong cruises out of Florida take advantage of Western Airlines new Los Angeles-Miami daily non-stop DC10 service. The NCL flagships Skyward, Starward and Southward make port in San Juan, St. Thomas, Haiti, Jamaica, Cozumel and other colorful Caribbean ports.

Costa Lines' Carla C. a familiar ship in Los Angeles when operated on lease to inaugurate Princess Cruises some years ago, offers eight-day Caribbean cruises out of San Juan, Puerto Rico, in conjunction with Delta Air Lines direct from Los Angeles.

Delta is also cooperating in the inaugural cruise season of the Cunard Company, sailing weekly from San Juan to the popular Caribbean islands and Caracas, Venezuela.

Royal Caribbean Cruise Lines offers seven-day as well as 14-day voyages aboard the Nordic Prince and Sun Viking out of Miami, with air transportation from Los Angeles by United Air Lines charters. Four ports of call including Barbados or Curacao are included in each seven-day cruise.

Paquet French Cruises aboard the MS Renaissance from Vancouver through the Inside Passage to Alaska are served from Los Angeles by CP Air in combination round trip fares. There will be 15 departures from Los Angeles International Airport from May 27 to Sept. 16.

Trans-Pacific route

Two special trans-Pacific cruises have been scheduled for the MS Prinsendam this year from Singapore to Vancouver April 25 and returning in September.

The vessel will be routed via Hong Kong, Japan's Inland Sea and Kobe and Yokohama, with several calls at ports in Alaska's Inside Passage.

The cruise itinerary will be reversed in the fall with the Prinsendam leaving Vancouver Sept. 27 and arriving in Singapore Oct. 24.

Anyone for a train ride? Still one of the great ways to see the U.S. or Canada is by boarding an AMTRAK or Canadian Pacific train and watching the glorious countryside roll by.

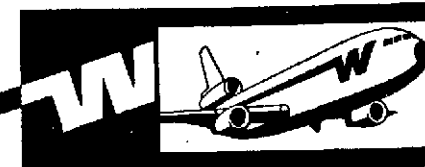

A recent train trip into our great Southwestern area proved to me that the trains are here to stay. It's one way to meet new friends, relax, catch up on your back reading or enjoy the scenery.

Club cars are fun and filled with hospitable people and sleeping accommodations if desired, provide one with a good night's rest. There's more to Japan than bustling Tokyo

Walking beside me on the deck of the Royal Viking Sky one early morning was an extraordinary Japanese gentleman. He was so thin that he appeared to have no waist at all.

When he breathed in, he was all but transparent. He achieved this miracle by breathing very slowly, about once to each three gasps of mine.

We were cruising in Pacific waters with a port call in Japan. I had struck up a conversation with him, hoping to learn something about ancient customs that might still prevail in modern Japan. We were soon to dock in Yokohama.

To my astonishment, after he had completed his series of deep breathing exercises, he lit a cigarette.

This wasn't usual, he quickly assured me. It was a Zen tradition. He only smoked when the pleasure of instead. Later, after having endured Tokyo, I could appreciate his wisdom.

KAMAKURA lies about 20 minutes by train southwest of Yokohama. Stations are well marked and it is easy to find it yourself. If you have time to explore, get off at Kita-Kamakura station and walk the few miles to Kamakura.

Nestled along lanes that meander through forest-covered hills are numerous old Zen temples, some dating back to the 15th century. Buddhist temples are less sanctimonious than Christian churches. You may enter them, light a joss stick, or even carry on a conversation above a whisper, just so long as you are respectful.

Buddhism is not a formal religion, in the Christian sense. It is more a way of life than a form of thought and does not insist upon any kind of religious conformity. "Be ye lamps unto yourselves," is often quoted.

Kamakura is charming. From 1192 to 1333 it was the feudal capital of Japan's most powerful shoguns. The bronze image of Daibutsu, the Great Buddha, that dominates this seaside village is 700 years old.

It is second in size in Japan, but ranks first in artistic merit. The majestic image resting in a lotus position on its dais is a moving visual experience.

CONTRARY to what many Americans suppose, the image of Buddha is not an idol of worship. Rather, it is symbolic of an ideal inner order that leads to spiritual growth, as taught by Buddha.

When you see Japanese children hopping up the 30 steps from his fat belly to his topknot inside the bronze image, they are not being disrespectful. They are simply demonstrating their assumption of the Buddha's humanistic love and compassion.

Japan has been compared to Chicago, with calligraphy. To experience the culture that goes on behind the facade, you have to explore the byways. Then, hang loose.

Don't try to discern things in American terminology. They simply don't fit our concepts. As my Japanese shipmate said, "When you hold your breath, you lose it. By letting it go, you find it."

choral pepper

the pure sea air was so great that it was necessary to show one's complete mastery over it by adding a bit of contamination.

I remarked that the crew in the engine room had taken care of that on the previous day by blowing out the ship's stack.

THAT WASN'T quite the same, he laughed. In Japan, the relative value of things is considered philosophically. In the traditional tea ceremony, for instance, a little cloth is handled as though it were made of lead.

This is to show an individual's complete control over nature. Light things are handled heavily; heavy things are handled lightly. Conversely, when the ship's crew blew her stack, they weren't being philosophical. They were being practical.

Since the beginning of time, Japanese culture has exhibited this rare form of creative practicality. Because the disposal of rice straw was a problem and yet rice was the most important agricultural produce of Japan, they turned it into an art.

They created multi-layered straw raincoats that make the farmers who wear them look like porcupines, but are so exquisitely constructed that American collectors now are hanging them on walls like textured tapestries.

IN COUNTRY stores you also will see snow boots made of straw. These can be converted into interesting plant holders.

Even tatamis, the floor mats that carpet houses in Japan, are made of rice straw covered with rush matting.

Prices in Japan are notoriously high for luxury items, but in little shops nestled along country lanes outside of Yokohama you will find elemental articles,

Get your Caribbean cruise off to a flying start.

Take off on a Royal Caribbean Air/Sea Cruise. Aboard Sun Viking or Nordic Prince—the two most popular two week cruise ships in the Caribbean.

You'll see eight of the Caribbean's most asked-to-see islands. Places like St. Thomas, Curacao and San Juan. Plus Caracas on the continent of South America.

You'll enjoy bathing by the seaside in a refreshing salt water pool. Almost an acre of deck under the gentle Caribbean sun. A dining room that's a Restaurant Francais one night, an English Pub the next.

Entertainment that changes everytime we entertain. (You'll never see the same act twice. Unless you give it an encore.)

If you thirst for more, we have the top bar in the Caribbean, the Viking Crown Lounge—10 stories above the sea.

And a Royal Caribbean Air/Sea Cruise is one vacation where you can really unwind. Because you'll know what it's going to wind-up costing before you go.

Where else, for example, does the cost of your vacation include the cost of all your food and entertainment?

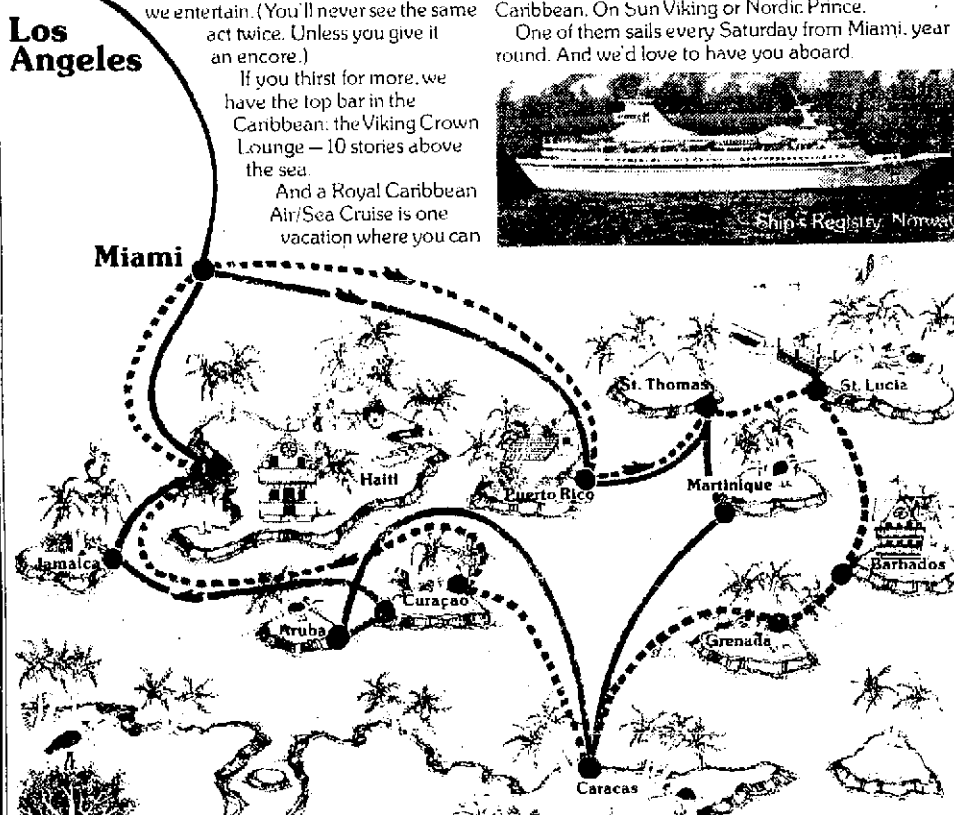

Fact is, our price includes a 14-day cruise, round-trip air fare to Miami, airline security charges, ground transportation in Miami, and all transportation and port taxes.

That's a lot of vacation for the money. So, see your travel agent. And tell 'em you want to take off for the Caribbean. On Sun Viking or Nordic Prince.

One of them sails every Saturday from Miami, year round. And we'd love to have you aboard.

Gal-Iv'anting

There's more to Japan than bustling Tokyo

Walking beside me on the deck of the Royal Viking Sky one early morning was an extraordinary Japanese gentleman. He was so thin that he appeared to have no waist at all.

When he breathed in, he was all but transparent. He achieved this miracle by breathing very slowly, about once to each three gasps of mine.

We were cruising in Pacific waters with a port call in Japan. I had struck up a conversation with him, hoping to learn something about ancient customs that might still prevail in modern Japan. We were soon to dock in Yokohama.

To my astonishment, after he had completed his series of deep breathing exercises, he lighted a cigarette.

This wasn't usual, he quickly assured me. It was a Zen tradition. He only smoked when the pleasure of instead. Later, after having endured Tokyo, I could appreciate his wisdom.

KAMAKURA lies about 20 minutes by train southwest of Yokohama. Stations are well marked and it is easy to find it yourself. If you have time to explore, get off at Kita-Kamakura station and walk the few miles to Kamakura.

Nestled along lanes that meander through forest-covered hills are numerous old Zen temples, some dating back to the 15th century. Buddhist temples are less sanctimonious than Christian churches. You may enter them, light a joss stick, or even carry on a conversation above a whisper, just so long as you are respectful.

Buddhism is not a formal religion, in the Christian sense. It is more a way of life than a form of thought and does not insist upon any kind of religious conformity. "Be ye lamps unto yourselves," is often quoted.

Kamakura is charming. From 1192 to 1333 it was the feudal capital of Japan's most powerful shoguns. The bronze image of Daibutsu, the Great Buddha, that dominates this seaside village is 700 years old.

It is second in size in Japan, but ranks first in artistic merit. The majestic image resting in a lotus position on its dais is a moving visual experience.

CONTRARY to what many Americans suppose,

the image of Buddha is not an idol of worship. Rather, it is symbolic of an ideal inner order that leads to spiritual growth, as taught by Buddha.

When you see Japanese children hopping up the 30 steps from his fat belly to his topknot inside the bronze image, they are not being disrespectful. They are simply demonstrating their assumption of the Buddha's humanistic love and compassion.

Japan has been compared to Chicago, with calligraphy. To experience the culture that goes on behind the facade, you have to explore the byways. Then, hang loose.

Don't try to discern things in American terminology. They simply don't fit our concepts. As my Japanese shipmate said, "When you hold your breath, you lose it. By letting it go, you find it."

the pure sea air was so great that it was necessary to show one's complete mastery over it by adding a bit of contamination.

I remarked that the crew in the engine room had taken care of that on the previous day by blowing out the ship's stack.

THAT WASN'T quite the same, he laughed. In Japan, the relative value of things is considered philosophically. In the traditional tea ceremony, for instance, a little cloth is handled as though it were made of lead.

Shipboard tipping is fairly standard

For sailors, the sea holds many mysteries. Cruise passengers, however, tend to get hung up over the Momentous Two: Whom do you tip and how much?

Fear no more. "In response to numerous inquiries," as they put it, the majority of the cruise lines whose ships work the American market now issue advisories instructing passengers on what's "customary" and when.

If the cruise director doesn't pass the word in the equivalent of a fireside chat, passengers can almost always count on finding it spelled out in the ship's newspaper, a "Notes for Passengers" brochure or a tent card that materializes on the dining table a night or two before the end of any voyage of under two weeks' duration.

On long sailings you'll hear early, since it's usually suggested that the money be distributed on a weekly basis.

IF YOU'RE coping with the world's tightest budget, however, take a tip before you give one: Don't wait for the news.

Ask your travel agent to ask the ship line about tipping practices while you're still at the shopping stage. What you learn may surprise you.

Tipping (as everyone hastens to tell you) is not obligatory. It's just that on most ships it's so "customary" that wage levels are set on the basis of how much additional money the work is likely to bring in by way of gratuities.

Different outfits have different levels of expectations, however, and their "advice" to passengers is therefore different as well. What they suggest is a "platform" amount which they anticipate passengers will adjust to reflect pleasure or displeasure.

On Costa Line ships it's suggested to passengers that they give a minimum of $1 per person per day to the steward (usually the leader of a team of stewards, some seen and some unseen) who serves them in the dining room and the same to the steward (or, again, the representative of the team) who looks after their cabin.

PASSENGERS on the Queen Elizabeth II are expected to give at least twice that. On other Cunard liners, Royal Viking ships, Sitmar and many others, the suggestion is for $1.50 per person per day for each of the same two stewards, plus 75 cents a day for the busboy.

A few lines, though, suggest you set aside for tips a percentage of your passage price. At the end of a Sun Line trip, for instance, you're expected to tip 7 per cent and to do so by giving it to the chief steward for distribution to the entire crew.

Other percentage suggestions (which many of the lines stating daily sums don't mention but generally expect occupants of higher priced accommodations to use) include 5 per cent and 10 per cent of the total price.

THE BARTENDER or bar stewards, for instance, usually get 10 to 15 per cent of the bar bill, as you are served.

The wine waiter, on the other hand, normally gets 15 per cent when he presents his total bill at the end of your trip. If you haven't used him, you needn't tip him.

You needn't tip the dining room section captain and the maitre d'hotel, either, unless they give special service. If one of them sets fire to your crepes suzette or personally brings in the birthday cake, let conscience be your guide.

But if you give anything, give something that folds rather than jingles. If you special-order various dishes through one of them or ask for lots of items not on the menu, think in terms of a fiver a week, minimum.

Although it's reportedly frowned upon by the lines, a number of passengers tip $5 to $10 per person "up front" — the first night out — in expectation of using the captain's or the maitre d's services or being singled out for warmer greetings. If none of that's your thing, you can indefinitely pass them with both hands in your pocket.

HAIRDRESSERS and barbers expect something approximating 15 per cent; sauna and gym attendants, masseurs, deck stewards and the like get whatever you calculate based on how much individual service was involved.

Things like a week's worth of extra towels deliv-

travel

TIPPING is not one of the games people play on board ship — it is common practice on most lines. Percentages vary, and of course, if service is bad, then the tip may be omitted.

ered poolside means perhaps $5 for a family of four. People who cross the "service" line and in effect are "instructors" (that is, the bridge teacher, the ship's photographer and so on) are not on the tip list. Nor are any of the ship's officers or cruise staff, even if they do heroic things like dance with women who have leaden feet.

No one but perhaps The Shadow knows how closely most passengers hew to the tipping amounts suggested, although there are general hopes that they will be exceeded by the occupants of higher priced cabins. Certainly if you get back-of-the-hand nonservice or service with a sneer, you should respond in kind, tipping small or not at all.

SO WHY don't ship lines just add an extra amount to the ticket price and say all tips are included? The answer to that basically interesting question is that some do.

Holland America, for instance. And following a big announcement to that effect, the stewards all revolted.

Then new stewards were hired. Then the "no tipping" policy went out and a "no tipping required" policy came in. The change is perhaps subtle, but it's there.

Tips are still included in the price, and passengers are so informed. Most of them fidget, stew and finally settle on passing out an extra sum but something much smaller than other ships' norms.

Make that norms of ships other than Russian. The Russian norm is reportedly a Polaroid picture of the steward with his or (usually) her passengers. Some sort of trinket or perfume is preferable to money, and indeed the crew is under instruction to refuse cash.

Genuine hard-sell solicitation (as opposed to a final fling of attentiveness) is a no-no on any ship. However, if it occurs and is reported, the first instance generally draws a warning, the second a dismissal.

This voyage became a rescue at sea

By JAY CLARKE
Knight News Wire

Publicity is something which airlines, cruise lines, travel agents, tour operators and others in the travel business both crave and detest. They bask in the "good kind" of publicity which extols the pleasures of their product and induces travelers to travel.

They cringe whenever anything about travel mishaps or shortcomings is published — a perfectly natural reaction, since their business may suffer as a result.

It is ridiculous to say that the press prints only the unpleasant news. At the same time, it is obvious that the public is more interested in reading about the unusual rather than the usual.

When an airliner reaches its destination without incident, as hundreds do every day, that's hardly of interest to a newspaper reader. But when a cruise ship stalls at sea, which rarely ever happens, it becomes news.

IT'S ABOUT the latter that I want to report, and what I have to say is entirely pleasant.

When the Monarch Star developed engine trouble and her passengers had to be transferred at sea to her sister ship, the Monarch Sun, a difficult situation could have developed which might have turned off a lot of passengers. But, instead the cruise line acted quickly and well.

First of all, when the problem arose, the passengers were informed about it promptly. An open bar was established.

This helped ease the hardship of being stranded at sea without power (the captain's dinner that night, normally a gala affair, consisted of ham and cheese sandwiches).

The next day, after the mid-ocean transfer took place, passengers of both liners were gathered in the Monarch Sun's main lounge (with drinks on the house) to be told about the options the cruise line had decided to offer them.

MONARCH SUN passengers who had signed on a one-week cruise could have a second week free.

Those from either ship who elected to cancel their cruise could fly home from Port-au-Prince the next day at the cruise line's expense with a full refund for their cruise. Monarch Sun passengers could continue on to Caracas, where at the end of the week, they would be flown back to Miami.

In addition, they would receive $50 gift certificates. Monarch Star passengers booked for two weeks could continue on the Sun for the balance of their cruise, receiving a $100 gift certificate.

Notice that passengers from both the stricken vessel and the rescue ship were given options.

ALL THIS cost a lot of money — the cruise line estimates it will amount to "hundreds of thousands of dollars." Expensive, yes, but in terms of public relations and of building confidence in the cruise line and the industry, it is money well spent.

Instead of having a boatload of irate passengers who would later badmouth the cruise line and industry in general, the promptness and generosity with which the company acted turned the situation into an adventure for most of the passengers.

It's good to see a cruise line discharge its responsibility to its passengers as it should.

Shipboard tipping is fairly standard

For sailors, the sea holds many mysteries. Cruise passengers, however, tend to get hung up over the Momentous Two: Whom do you tip and how much?

Fear no more. "In response to numerous inquiries," as they put it, the majority of the cruise lines whose ships work the American market now issue advisories instructing passengers on what's "customary" and when.

If the cruise director doesn't pass the word in the equivalent of a fireside chat, passengers can almost always count on finding it spelled out in the ship's newspaper, a "Notes for Passengers" brochure or a tent card that materializes on the dining table a night or two before the end of any voyage of under two weeks' duration.

On long sailings you'll hear early, since it's usually suggested that the money be distributed on a weekly basis.

IF YOU'RE coping with the world's tightest budget, however, take a tip before you give one: Don't wait for the news.

Ask your travel agent to ask the ship line about tipping practices while you're still at the shopping stage. What you learn may surprise you.

Tipping (as everyone hastens to tell you) is not obligatory. It's just that on most ships it's so "customary" that wage levels are set on the basis of how much additional money the work is likely to bring in by way of gratuities.

Different outfits have different levels of expectations, however, and their "advice" to passengers is therefore different as well. What they suggest is a "platform" amount which they anticipate passengers will adjust to reflect pleasure or displeasure.

On Costa Line ships it's suggested to passengers that they give a minimum of $1 per person per day to the steward (usually the leader of a team of stewards, some seen and some unseen) who serves them in the dining room and the same to the steward (or, again, the representative of the team) who looks after their cabin.

PASSENGERS on the Queen Elizabeth II are expected to give at least twice that. On other Cunard liners, Royal Viking ships, Sitmar and many others, the suggestion is for $1.50 per person per day for each of the same two stewards, plus 75 cents a day for the busboy.

travel

TIPPING is not one of the games people play on board ship—it is common practice on most lines. Percentages vary, and of course, if service is bad, then the tip may be omitted.

A few lines, though, suggest you set aside for tips a percentage of your passage price. At the end of a Sun Line trip, for instance, you're expected to tip 7 per cent and to do so by giving it to the chief steward for distribution to the entire crew.

Other percentage suggestions (which many of the lines stating daily sums don't mention but generally expect occupants of higher priced accommodations to use) include 5 per cent and 10 per cent of the total price.

THE BARTENDER or bar stewards, for instance, usually get 10 to 15 per cent of the bar bill, as you are served.

The wine waiter, on the other hand, normally gets 15 per cent when he presents his total bill at the end of your trip. If you haven't used him, you needn't tip him.

You needn't tip the dining room section captain and the maitre d'hotel, either, unless they give special service. If one of them sets fire to your crepes suzette or personally brings in the birthday cake, let conscience be your guide.

But if you give anything, give something that folds rather than jingles. If you special-order various dishes through one of them or ask for lots of items not on the menu, think in terms of a fiver a week, minimum.

Although it's reportedly frowned upon by the lines, a number of passengers tip $5 to $10 per person "up front"—the first night out—in expectation of using the captain's or the maitre d's services or being singled out for warmer greetings. If none of that's your thing, you can indefinitely pass them with both hands in your pocket.

HAIRDRESSERS and barbers expect something approximating 15 per cent; sauna and gym attendants, masseurs, deck stewards and the like get whatever you calculate based on how much individual service was involved.

Things like a week's worth of extra towels delivered poolside means perhaps $5 for a family of four. People who cross the "service" line and in effect are "instructors" (that is, the bridge teacher, the ship's photographer and so on) are not on the tip list. Nor are any of the ship's officers or cruise staff, even if they do heroic things like dance with women who have leaden feet.

No one but perhaps The Shadow knows how closely most passengers hew to the tipping amounts suggested, although there are general hopes that they will be exceeded by the occupants of higher priced cabins. Certainly if you get back-of-the-hand nonservice or service with a sneer, you should respond in kind, tipping small or not at all.

SO WHY don't ship lines just add an extra amount to the ticket price and say all tips are included? The answer to that basically interesting question is that some do.

Holland America, for instance. And following a big announcement to that effect, the stewards all revolted.

Then new stewards were hired. Then the "no tipping" policy went out and a "no tipping required" policy came in. The change is perhaps subtle, but it's there.

Tips are still included in the price, and passengers are so informed. Most of them fidget, stew and finally settle on passing out an extra sum but something much smaller than other ships' norms.

Make that norms of ships other than Russian. The Russian norm is reportedly a Polaroid picture of the steward with his or (usually) her passengers. Some sort of trinket or perfume is preferable to money, and indeed the crew is under instruction to refuse cash.

Genuine hard-sell solicitation (as opposed to a final fling of attentiveness) is a no-no on any ship. However, if it occurs and is reported, the first instance generally draws a warning, the second a dismissal.

This voyage became a rescue at sea

By JAY CLARKE
Knight News Wire

Publicity is something which airlines, cruise lines, travel agents, tour operators and others in the travel business both crave and detest. They bask in the "good kind" of publicity which extols the pleasures of their product and induces travelers to travel.

They cringe whenever anything about travel mishaps or shortcomings is published—a perfectly natural reaction, since their business may suffer as a result.

It is ridiculous to say that the press prints only the unpleasant news. At the same time, it is obvious that the public is more interested in reading about the unusual rather than the usual.

When an airliner reaches its destination without incident, as hundreds do every day, that's hardly of interest to a newspaper reader. But when a cruise ship stalls at sea, which rarely ever happens, it becomes news.

IT'S ABOUT the latter that I want to report, and what I have to say is entirely pleasant.

When the Monarch Star developed engine trouble and her passengers had to be transferred at sea to her sister ship, the Monarch Sun, a difficult situation could have developed which might have turned off a lot of passengers. But, instead the cruise line acted quickly and well.

First of all, when the problem arose, the passengers were informed about it promptly. An open bar was established.

This helped ease the hardship of being stranded at sea without power (the captain's dinner that night, normally a gala affair, consisted of ham and cheese sandwiches).

The next day, after the mid-ocean transfer took place, passengers of both liners were gathered in the Monarch Sun's main lounge (with drinks on the house) to be told about the options the cruise line had decided to offer them.

MONARCH SUN passengers who had signed on a one-week cruise could have a second week free.

Those from either ship who elected to cancel their cruise could fly home from Port-au-Prince the next day at the cruise line's expense with a full refund for their cruise. Monarch Sun passengers could continue on to Caracas, where at the end of the week, they would be flown back to Miami.

In addition, they would receive $50 gift certificates. Monarch Star passengers booked for two weeks could continue on the Sun for the balance of their cruise, receiving a $100 gift certificate.

Notice that passengers from both the stricken vessel and the rescue ship were given options.

ALL THIS cost a lot of money—the cruise line estimates it will amount to "hundreds of thousands of dollars." Expensive, yes, but in terms of public relations and of building confidence in the cruise line and the industry, it is money well spent.

Instead of having a boatload of irate passengers who would later badmouth the cruise line and industry in general, the promptness and generosity with which the company acted turned the situation into an adventure for most of the passengers.

It's good to see a cruise line discharge its responsibility to its passengers as it should.

Cruise passengers can find bargains

travel

The Mexican Riviera

We've been shopping the Mexican coast with a pocketful of devalued pesos. What used to cost you $8 U.S. should cost only $5. Only sure thing I came up with: You can now bring home Mexican jewelry duty-free. (Taxco silver is something nearly every tourist buys.) Now you can load up. Still have your $100 duty-free allowance for other things.

(So U.S. Customs told me in San Francisco.)

A jeweler in Acapulco said, "That should be of advantage to the American shopper. But you must know the devalued peso is not going to change the world price of gold and silver."

"By buying in pesos, you aren't going to buy $8 worth of gold or silver for $5. The better value will probably be in workmanship — it should cost less for labor. There should be a lower price on Mexican stones: Opals for instance."

PROBABLY lower — reaching for the $8 worth for $5. "All that stuff people buy in Mexican markets. Or tourist stores. Woven baskets. Leather work. Wood carvings. Mexican artists will probably sell at the same price in pesos. But your dollar will now get 20 pesos instead of the old 12.50."

A couple of years ago, Mexico made quite an announcement that certain tourist ports would be duty-free. The merchant could import goods without paying taxes or duty. Sell them at these lower prices as long as the tourist was taking them OUT of Mexico.

If this ever happened I never found it. In fact I've never found a shopkeeper who ever HEARD of it. The duty-free shops of the Caribbean are crammed with cut-cost Japanese cameras and radios and French perfumes. Not so in Mexico.

If you want these things on the Mexican coast, you find them in the ship's shop. Ships buy duty-free and tax free. The shop can pass along the savings. Of course they mark it up for a profit. And the amount of markup is up to them.

WE'VE BEEN cruising on "Pacific Princess." Fresh out of drydock. All redone inside since the Norwegians ran her.

British crew — she flies the crew and they're good. (I'm at the Captain's table. That COULD make a difference.) Princess Cruises is so confident in better buys with the peso that they're running shopping cruises. "Pacific Princess" and "Sun Princess." (It used to be "The Spirit of London.")

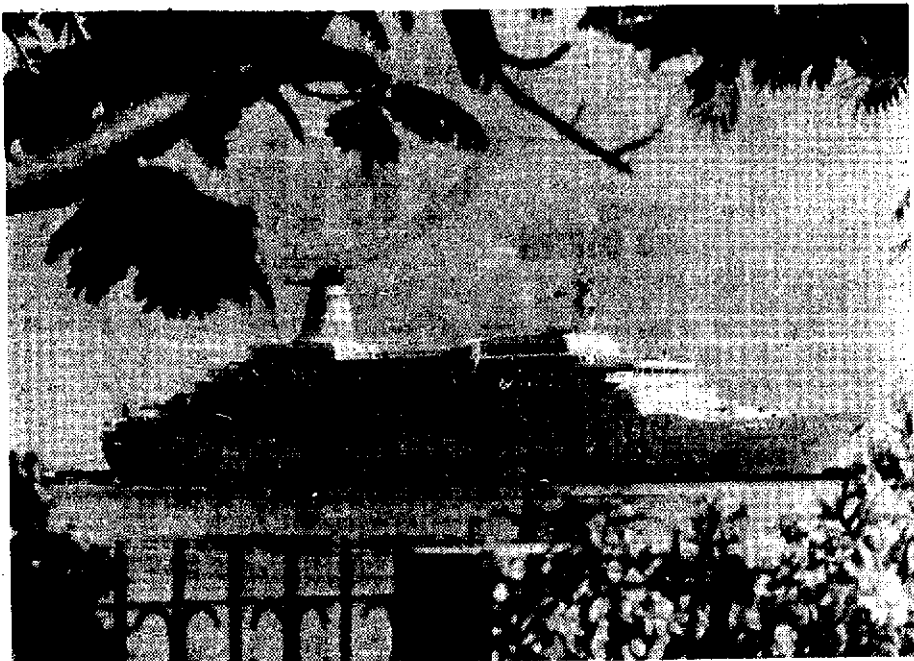

Lowest fare I could find on the 11-day cruises: $804. I'd figure on an average $1,000. Rock-bottom prices quoted by hotels and ships are apt to be next to the engine room. (And often continually occupied by the lowest ranking assistant manager.)

Ports are good: Puerto Vallarta — pricier since Liz and Dick made "The Night of the Iguana." Manzanillo. Shopping nada. Take a run out to the $35 million Las Hadas hotel and marvel how any architect could DREAM such a wild combination of spires, minarets and stairways to nothing much when you climb them.

ACAPULCO: The jet set in a PRICEY town. Lot of selection of everything from all Mexico. Expensive but the best.

Mazatlan: Newest and coziest "in" night bar: Senor Frog. I got good jewelry at El Indio. Just around the corner from El Shrimp Bucket, my favorite restaurant. (Where you ask for Chuy Juarez. A man for all seasons.)

Shops on Caribbean cruise ships compete with the dog-eat-dog free ports where they stop. Thus prices are better than Mexican coast cruise ships. I found SOME prices (cameras) cheaper on the French ships "Mermoz" and "Renaissance" than in free port Jamaica.

Nearby waters offer intriguing sights

You might not expect passenger shipping companies to urge that people spend vacations in their backyards, but that's what member lines of the Pacific Cruise Conference are doing.

It's the country's backyards (or front yards, depending on how you look at it) that they mean: the waters of Alaska, Hawaii, Mexico, Central and South America, the Caribbean. These backyard cruises have increased in popularity rapidly during the past few years for several reasons. All the lines on the West Coast are doing them, so there are frequent departures, year-round.

They come in varying time-lengths: if it's only a one-week vacation, there are cruises from Los Angeles along the west coast of Mexico, with calls at two or three ports. Two weeks easily get you to Alaska and back, or to five or six ports in Mexico.

WITH three weeks at your disposal, you can cruise to Mexican and Panamanian ports, transit the Panama Canal and island-hop through the Caribbean.

A wide range of fares are offered, and they're not a-la-carte. In addition to lodging and some of the world's most pleasurable and relaxing transportation, all meals, round-the-clock service and lavish entertainment programs are included in the price of the ticket.

But it's the spreading word of backyard beauty, long-over looked or inaccessible, that may be contributing most to the upswing in close-by cruising. Alaska's Glacier Bay, with its towering castles of pale-blue ice, is surely as breathtaking as any sight in the Far East.

The waters of the Caribbean are more brilliant and translucent than those of the Mediterranean. Even tiny Puerto Vallarta, with its cobblestone streets, river laundresses, big modern hotels and fine beaches, has something not exactly found in Paris or Vienna.

People are learning that it's not only faraway places that have strange-sounding names, exotic people, historic ruins, jungles and sun-burnished cathedrals.

IN PANAMA, the Cuna Indian women wear flaming red and yellow dresses and huge necklaces of beaten gold and hang rings in their noses. In Quintana Roo, Yucatan, some of the natives still speak in the ancient Mayan tongue.

At Tulum, on a cliff overlooking the Caribbean, stand the ruins of the Mayan temple to the Descending God (the Sun).

Strange-sounding names? How about Zihuatenejo, Ketchikan, Xel-ha, Rio Piragua, Curacao, Tegucigalpa?

All of these, and more, are in the backyards; and there's probably a ship sailing tomorrow to take you there.

Cruise passengers can find bargains

The Mexican Riviera

We've been shopping the Mexican coast with a pocketful of devalued pesos. What used to cost you $8 U.S. should cost only $5.

Only sure thing I came up with: You can now bring home Mexican jewelry duty-free. (Taxco silver is something nearly every tourist buys.) Now you can load up. Still have your $100 duty-free allowance for other things.

(So U.S. Customs told me in San Francisco.)

A jeweler in Acapulco said, "That should be of advantage to the American shopper. But you must know the devalued peso is not going to change the world price of gold and silver."

"By buying in pesos, you aren't going to buy $8 worth of gold or silver for $5. The better value will probably be in workmanship — it should cost less for labor."

"There should be a lower price on Mexican stones: Opals for instance."

PROBABLY lower — reaching for the $8 worth for $5: "All that stuff people buy in Mexican markets. Or tourist stores. Woven baskets. Leather work. Wood carvings.

"Mexican artists will probably sell at the same price in pesos. But your dollar will now get 20 pesos instead of the old 12.50."

A couple of years ago, Mexico made quite an announcement that certain tourist ports would be duty-free. The merchant could import goods without paying taxes or duty. Sell them at these lower prices as long as the tourist was taking them OUT of Mexico.

If this ever happened I never found it. In fact I've never found a shopkeeper who ever HEARD of it. The duty-free shops of the Caribbean

British flag now. Dining room stewards and chefs are Italian. A Genoa man trains such crews and sends them out — hand-picked with menus ready to go. A packaged Ports are good: Puerto Vallarta — pricier since Liz and Dick made "The Night of the Iguana." Manzanillo. Shopping nada. Take a run out to the $35 million Las Hadas hotel and marvel how any architect could DREAM such a wild combination of spires, minarets and stairways to nothing much when you climb them.

ACAPULCO: The jet set in a PRICEY town. Lot of selection of everything from all Mexico. Expensive but the best.

Mazatlan: Newest and coziest "in" night bar: Senor Frog. I got good jewelry at El Indio. Just around the corner from El Shrimp Bucket, my favorite restaurant. (Where you ask for Chuy Juarez. A man for all seasons.)

Shops on Caribbean cruise ships compete with the dog-eat-dog free ports where they stop. Thus prices are better than Mexican coast cruise ships. I found SOME prices (cameras) cheaper on the French ships "Mermoz" and "Renaissance" than in free port Jamaica.

PACIFIC PRINCESS CRUISES THE MEXICAN RIVIERA

bean are crammed with cut-cost Japanese cameras and radios and French perfumes. Not so in Mexico.

If you want these things on the Mexican coast, you find them in the ship's shop. Ships buy duty-free and tax free. The shop can pass along the savings. Of course they mark it up for a profit. And the amount of markup is up to them.

WE'VE BEEN cruising on "Pacific Princess." Fresh out of drydock. All redone inside since the Norwegians ran her.

British crew — she flies the crew and they're good. (I'm at the Captain's table. That COULD make a difference.)

Princess Cruises is so confident in better buys with the peso that they're running shopping cruises. "Pacific Princess" and "Sun Princess." (I used to be "The Spirit of London.")

Lowest fare I could find on the 11-day cruises: $804. I'd figure on an average $1,000. Rock-bottom prices quoted by hotels and ships are apt to be next to the engine room. (And often continually occupied by the lowest ranking assistant manager.)

Nearby waters offer intriguing sights

You might not expect passenger shipping companies to urge that people spend vacations in their backyards, but that's what member lines of the Pacific Cruise Conference are doing.

It's the country's backyards for front yards, depending on how you look at it that they mean: the waters of Alaska, Hawaii, Mexico, Central and South America, the Caribbean.

These backyard cruises have increased in popularity rapidly during the past few years for several reasons. All the lines on the West Coast are doing them, so there are frequent departures, year-round.

They come in varying time-lengths: if it's only a one-week vacation, there are cruises from Los Angeles along the west coast of Mexico, with calls at two or three ports. Two weeks easily get you to Alaska and back, or to five or six ports in Mexico.

WITH three weeks at your disposal, you can cruise to Mexican and Panamanian ports, transit the Panama Canal and island-hop through the Caribbean.

A wide range of fares are offered, and they're not a-la-carte. In addition to lodging and some of the world's most pleasurable and relaxing transportation, all meals, round-the-clock service and lavish entertainment programs are included in the price of the ticket.

But it's the spreading word of backyard beauty, long-overlooked or inaccessible, that may be contributing most to the upswing in close-by cruising. Alaska's Glacier Bay, with its towering castles of pale-blue ice, is surely as breathtaking as any sight in the Far-East.

The waters of the Caribbean are more brilliant and translucent than those of the Mediterranean. Even tiny Puerto Vallarta, with its cobblestone streets, river laundresses, big modern hotels and fine beaches, has something not exactly found in Paris or Vienna.

People are learning that it's not only faraway places that have strange-sounding names, exotic people, historic ruins, jungles and sun-burnished cathedrals.

IN PANAMA, the Cuna Indian women wear flaming red-and-yellow dresses and huge necklaces of beaten gold and hang rings in their noses. In Quintana Roo, Yucatan, some of the natives still speak in the ancient Mayan tongue.

At Tulum, on a cliff overlooking the Caribbean, stand the ruins of the Mayan temple to the Descending God (the Sun).

Strange-sounding names? How about Zihuatenejo, Ketchikan, Xet-ha, Rio Piragua, Curacao, Tegucigalpa?

All of these, and more, are in the backyards; and there's probably a ship sailing tomorrow to take you there.

Johnson achieves new heights

UCLA all-America Marques Johnson (54), shown here outreaching USC's Paul Henderson (34), had one of greatest games in Bruins' 78-69 win Saturday. Other players are Mary Safford (22) and Kiki Vandeweghe (55).

Marques Magnificent too much for Trojans

By GARY RAUSCH Staff Writer

USC saved its best for last on Saturday afternoon, but Marques Johnson literally played head and shoulders above the Trojans in delivering UCLA a 78-69 victory.

An L.A. Sports Arena crowd of 9,300 and a regional television audience sat in on one of Johnson's finest hours in a fabulous four-year career.

He did it all—and then some—as the Bruins overcame a 10-point Trojan lead to conclude their 11th consecutive Pacific-8 Conference championship season and 23rd win against four defeats this campaign.

Johnson led every player in scoring (25 points), shooting (11 of 14) and rebounds to career-equalling 18). Six of his field goals were slam-dunks.

He also chipped in three assists, two steals and a blocked shot. Seldom has the paying public seen Marques as magnificent.

"Marques Johnson is a super talent, a great leader on the floor and off and a wonderful person," beamed his coach, Gene Bartow. "I've never coached a player like him. I'm kinda glad he stayed around this season.

"Thirty years from now 13 players are going to look back and say what a thrill it was to be with a guy like Marques this season."

Johnson could have taken the professionals' money last spring, as did former roommate Richard Washington. He chose to remain in Westwood, hoping to guide UCLA to another NCAA championship.

SOUTH BEND — "I owe a lot to St. Jude," said Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps. "He's the saint of the impossible."

After racking up 29 victories without a loss, San Francisco's basketball team might have seemed invincible, but not to Phelps and Notre Dame.

The Fighting Irish are in the business of shattering West Coast winning streaks. With the help of a vocal home crowd and second-half heroics by Don Williams and Toby Knight, the Irish knocked off the Dons, 93-82, Saturday to end top-ranked San Francisco's hope of a perfect season.

press. They've never been pressed before," said Phelps. "I didn't think they could match up with us defensively."

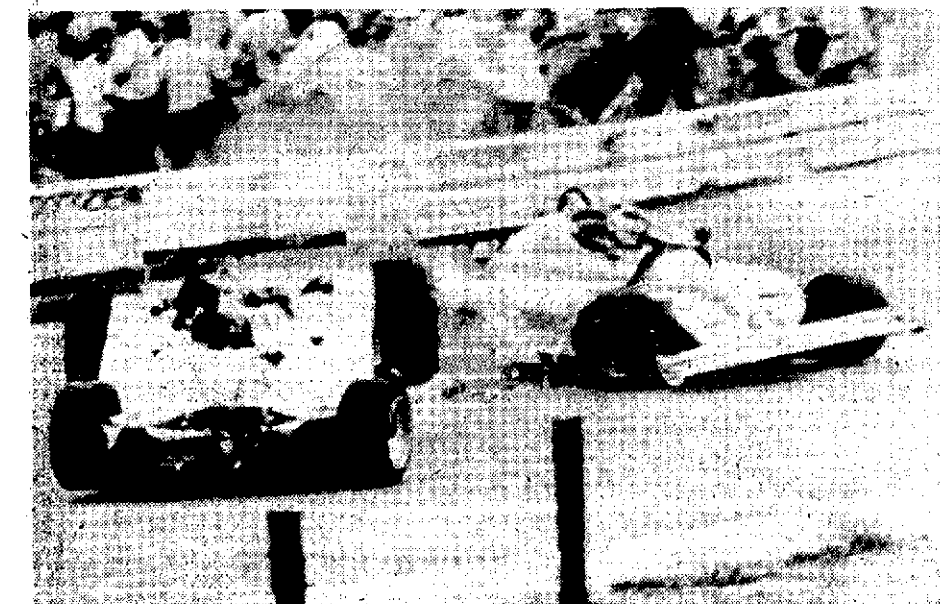

Three years ago the Irish snapped UCLA's 88-game winning streak and six years ago they broke the Bruins' 19-game streak, both victories coming at South Bend.

"The home crowd was very important for ourselves," said Phelps. "It inspired us . . . the crowd juiced us to keep us going."

San Francisco coach Bob Gailard agreed the fans had more of an effect on Notre Dame than on the visitors.

LBSU survives OT, gains final

By JIM McCORMACK Staff Writer

Clarence Ruffen stood out in a crowd of confusion Saturday night. Ruffen, who earned all-PCAA honors as a sophomore, hit two free throws with 24 seconds remaining in overtime to give Long Beach State a 65-64 victory over Cal State Fullerton.

An Anaheim Convention Center crowd of 6,416 saw the 49ers qualify for the finals of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tournament with their 20th win of the season.

The 49ers will meet San Jose State, a 75-74 winner over San Diego State in the title game today at 4 p.m. in the Anaheim facility.

LBSU coach Dwight Jones was asked if Saturday's victory was bigger than the 68-66 triple overtime triumph his club recorded over the Titans a year ago.

"Yeah," said Jones. "because this one was today."

Millikan breezes, 66-45

By FRANK BURLISON Staff Writer

Millikan High's basketball team proved that three rebounders are better than one Saturday night.

Because it had the three rebounders, Millikan will be playing in the CIF semifinals Friday night at the Long Beach Arena.

With Sherman Johnson, John White and Richard Oglesby controlling the backboards, the Rams eased past Ventura, 66-45, in a quarterfinal match before an estimated crowd of 3,300 at Long Beach City College.

The Moore League champions, now 25-4, will face top-seed Pasadena Friday, while fellow Moore League schools Poly and Compton battle in the other contest.

"I feel a lot better about the way we played tonight than I did Tuesday," said winning coach Bill Odell referring to his team's narrow 59-57 win over Murphy Tuesday. "We executed well and did a good job adjusting to their defense."

FOR ALL intents and purposes, the game was over for the visiting Channel League champion Ventura 49ers inbound to Ruffen, who gleefully held the ball as time expired.

Long Beach never trailed in overtime, but could never put the Titans away either.

Michael Wiley, who led the 49ers with 27 points, started things with a 14-footer and Richard Johnson followed with a rebound basket to give LBSU a 63-59 lead 1:20 into the extra session.

Fullerton moved back within one on a 19-footer by Anderson and a free throw by Davis, who later missed the first shot of a one-and-one that would have given the Titan the lead.

That was with 1:19 to play. Wiley grabbed the rebound and Long Beach called time at 1:08, then ran the clock down until Ruffen was fouled.

Davis had earlier put Fullerton into the extra period with a rebound basket 10 seconds before the end of regulation. That neutralized a Ruffen basket that had given Long Beach a 59-57 advantage 14 seconds earlier.

Johnson followed Wiley in Long Beach's scoring with 13 points. Ruffen had nine and game-high 12 rebounds.

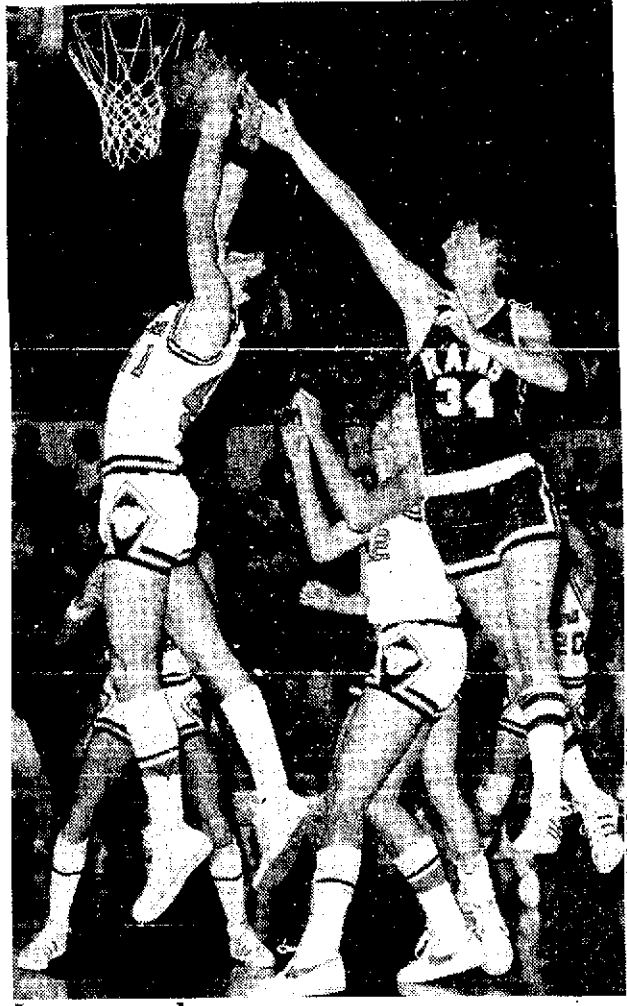

Davis had 15 points for Fullerton which finished its season 16-10.

Long Beach was perhaps fortunate to be down by only three, 30-27, at the intermission.

The 49ers were often their own worst enemy, committing 11 turnovers. Three came in succession and contributed significantly to an 8-0 spurt that enabled the Titans to turn a 12-8 deficit into a 16-12 advantage.

Marcel Dionne's 42nd goal and 100th point the season with seven seconds remaining enabled the Kings to salvage a pulsating 3-3 tie with the Pittsburgh Penguins Saturday night at the Forum before a capacity crowd of 16,005.

Operating with a two-man advantage after pulling goaltender Rogie Vachon with 30 seconds to go, Dionne capped the last-ditch comeback when he poked Tommy Williams' stand off the net.

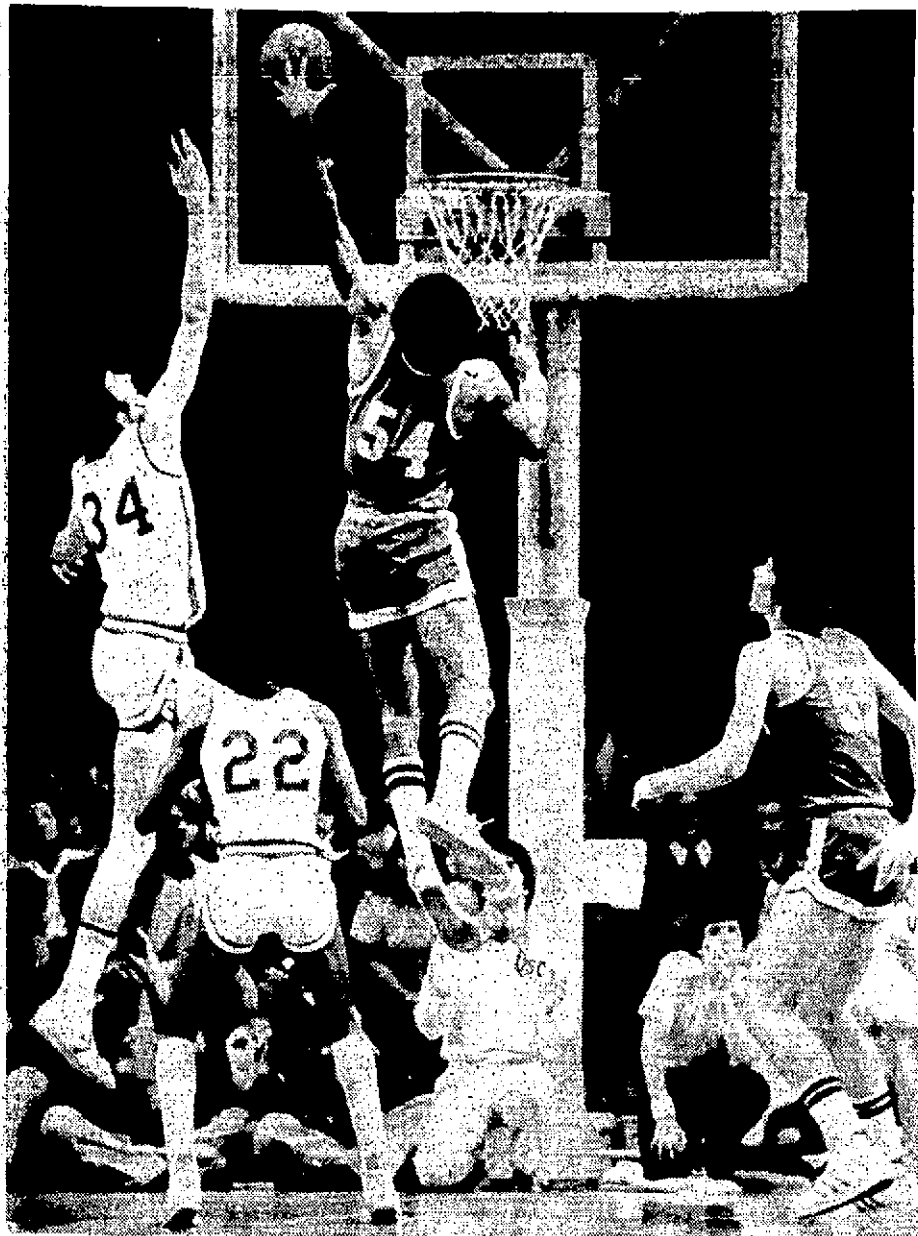

The standoff left the Kings two points behind the Penguins in the race for second place in the Norris Division and the home ice advantage in the NHL playoffs.

Dionne, who has been the dominant force behind the Kings' surge the last three weeks, also assisted on both of Bob Berry's goals to become the first King player to reach the 100-point plateau in a season.

The Kings' drive for the second spot appeared to be stalled when Greg Malone's two third-period goals forged the Pens ahead, 3-2.

Marques Magnificent too much for Trojans

By GARY RAUSCH

USC saved its best for last on Saturday afternoon, but Marques Johnson literally played head and shoulders above the Trojans in delivering UCLA a 78-69 victory.

An L.A. Sports Arena crowd of 9,300 and a regional television audience sat in on one of Johnson's finest hours in a fabulous four-year career.

He did it all—and then some—as the Bruins overcame a 10-point Trojan lead to conclude their 11th consecutive Pacific-8 Conference championship season and 33rd win against four defeats this campaign.

Johnson led every player in scoring (25 points), shooting (11 of 14) and rebounds (a career-equaling 18). Six of his field goals were slam-dunks.

He also chipped in three assists, two steals and a blocked shot. Seldom has the paying public seen Marques as magnificent.

"Marques Johnson is a super talent, a great leader on the floor and off and a wonderful person," beamed his coach, Gene Bartow. "I've never coached a player like

SOUTH BEND—"I owe a lot to St. Jude," said Notre Dame coach Digger Phelps. "He's the saint of the impossible."

After racking up 29 victories without a loss, San Francisco's basketball team might have seemed invincible, but not to Phelps and Notre Dame.

The Fighting Irish are in the business of shattering West Coast winning streaks. With the help of a vocal home crowd and second-half heroics by Don Williams and Toby Knight, the Irish knocked off the Dons, 93-82, Saturday to end top-ranked San Francisco's hope of a perfect season.

"We started the game in a press. They've never been pressed before," said Phelps. "I didn't think they could match up with us defensively."

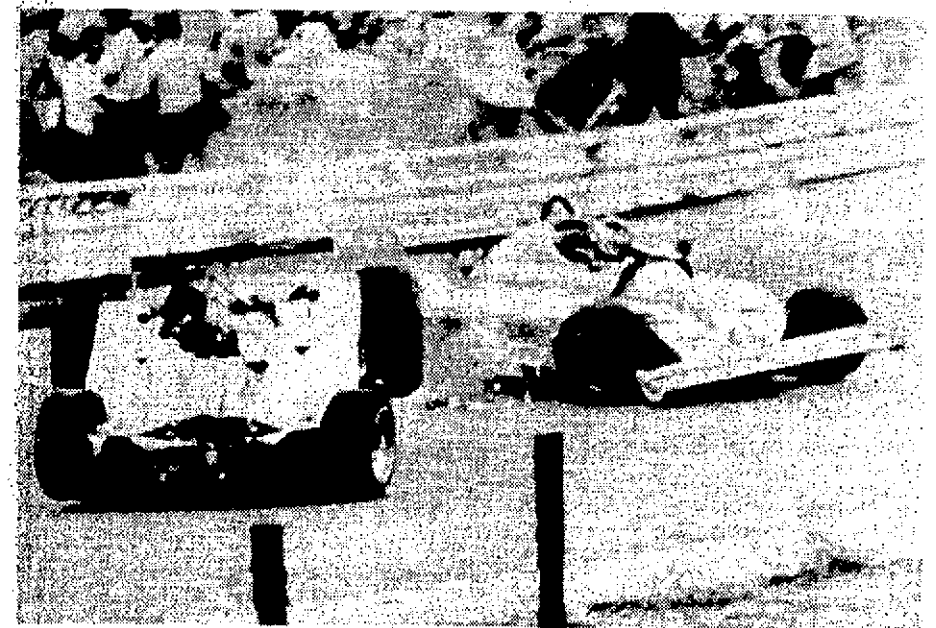

Three years ago the Irish snapped UCLA's 88-game winning streak and six years ago they broke the Bruins' 19-game streak, both victories coming at South Bend.

"The home crowd was very important for ourselves," said Phelps. "It inspired us... the crowd juiced us to keep us going."

San Francisco coach Bob Gail-lard agreed the fans had more of an effect on Notre Dame than on the visitors.

Clarence Ruffen stood out in a crowd of confusion Saturday night. Ruffen, who earned all-PCAA honors as a sophomore, hit two free throws with 24 seconds remaining in overtime to give Long Beach State a 65-64 victory over Cal State Fullerton.

An Anaheim Convention Center crowd of 5,416 saw the 49ers qualify for the finals of the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tournament with their 20th win of the season.

The 49ers will meet San Jose State, a 75-74 winner over San Diego State in the title game today at 4 p.m. in the Anaheim facility.

LBSU coach Dwight Jones was asked if Saturday's victory was bigger than the 68-66 triple overtime triumph his club recorded over the Titans a year ago.

"Yeah," said Jones, "because this one was today."

Millikan breezes, 66-45

Millikan High's basketball team proved that three rebounders are better than one Saturday night.

Because it had the three rebounders, Millikan will be playing in the CIF semifinals Friday night at the Long Beach Arena.

With Sherman Johnson, John White and Richard Oglesby controlling the backboards, the Rams eased past Ventura, 66-45, in a quarterfinal match before an estimated crowd of 3,300 at Long Beach City College.

The Moore League champions, now 25-1, will face top-seed Pasadena Friday, while fellow Moore League schools Poly and Compton battle in the other contest.

"I feel a lot better about the way we played tonight than I did Tuesday," said winning coach Bill Odell referring to his team's narrow 59-57 win over Murphy Tuesday. "We executed well and did a good job adjusting to their defense."

FOR ALL intents and purposes, the game was over for the visiting Channel League champion Ventura

And this one also put the 49ers a step closer to their first visit to the NCAA playoffs in four years.

A victory today will qualify Long Beach for an NCAA first-round game in Pocatello, Ida., next Saturday.

Ruffen's free throws gave Long Beach a 65-62 lead at the 0:24 mark, but as anyone who has followed the series between the teams would know, the game certainly wasn't over.

Mike Niles got the Titans within one with a rebound basket off a Greg Bunch air ball at 0:10. The Titans then fouled Long Beach's Dale Dillon with six seconds remaining.

Dillon missed the first shot and the Titans rebounded, outletting to guard Keith Anderson, who took off down court on a two-on-one fast break.

But Anderson, a sophomore guard from Verbum Dei, lost control of the ball 35 feet from the basket, enabling LBSU to gain possession with a second left. The 49ers inbounded to Ruffen, who gleefully held the ball as time expired.

Long Beach never trailed in overtime, but could never put the Titans away either.

Michael Wiley, who led the 49ers with 27 points, started things with a 14-footer and Richard Johnson followed with a rebound shot to give LBSU a 63-59 lead 1:20 into the extra session.

Fullerton moved back within one on a 19-footer by Anderson and a free throw by Davis, who later missed the first shot of a one-and-one that would have given the Titan the lead.

That was with 1:19 to play. Wiley grabbed the rebound and Long Beach called time at 1:08, then ran the clock down until Ruffen was fouled.

Davis had earlier put Fullerton into the extra period with a rebound basket 10 seconds before the end of regulation. That neutralized a Ruffen basket that had given Long Beach a 59-57 advantage 14 seconds earlier.

Johnson followed Wiley in Long Beach's scoring with 13 points. Ruffen had nine and game-high 12 rebounds.

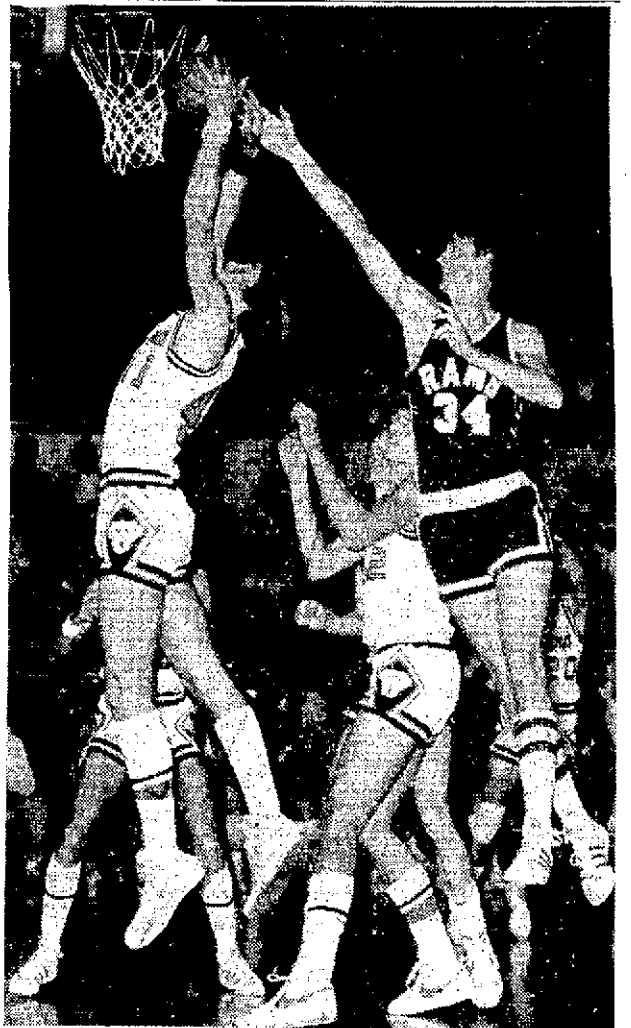

Davis had 15 points for Fullerton which finished its season 16-10.

Long Beach was perhaps fortunate to be down by only three, 30-27, at the intermission.

The 49ers were often their own worst enemy, committing 11 turnovers. Three came in succession and contributed significantly to an 8-0 spurt that enabled the Titans to turn a 12-8 deficit into a 16-12 advantage.

Al McGuire: Coach, philosopher, comedian —college basketball won't be quite the same Remember what they said in that old song? A good man is hard to find. Take Al McGuire. Twenty-four hours after the search began, he finally was located in Virginia.

His wife, Pat, reached at their room in a motel, provided the clue.

"Why don't you try the bar?" she suggested.

A barmaid answered the phone.

"Al McGuire, please."

She asked for a description.

"Just look around the room and you'll know which one he is."

There was a pause, then she giggled.

"I think I know."

Within seconds, McGuire was on the phone.

It's winding down to the finish, Al. Any regrets?

"No, Loel, like I said before, time is passing me by."

Time catching up with and passing McGuire? The North Wind couldn't pass Al McGuire.

Oh, some of his detractors might say McGuire is the North Wind. But most people, especially his fellow basketball coaches, recognize him as a genius, the kind the game can ill afford to lose.

But the numbers have gotten to McGuire. "I gotta make it now, while I can," he says.

SO, WITHIN the next two or three weeks, the man who has led Marquette University to a position of eminence in college basketball and earned renown as a coach, bon vivant and crowd orchestrator, will retire to become vice chairman of the board of Medalist Industries, a sports equipment firm doing nearly $100 million in business a year.

"It's time for the next stratum," says McGuire. "For me, there's more than yelling at guys who wear short pants. This is no last hurrah. I'm just moving on. I'm supposed to become chairman of the board in a year."

Irresistibly, he adds: "If they don't redshirt me."

The memories of McGuire are vivid. When the Warriors appeared in Long Beach four years ago, the contrast in the personalities of McGuire and Long Beach State coach Jerry Tarkanian was apparent.

Ten minutes before the Warriors and 49ers were to meet before a sellout crowd of more than 13,000, Tarkanian was seated on the Long Beach bench, already chewing away at a towel.

McGUIRE stood relaxed behind the Marquette bench, drinking a beer and eating a hot dog.

During the game, McGuire was on his feet constantly, engaging in a verbal war with his players and chewing at the officials, all the time whipping the crowd into a frenzy.

Once he marched purposefully to the scorer's table. Standing in front of his own scorer, arms flapping like a goony bird trying to struggle aloft, he shouted: "What in hell are these officials trying to do to me? Are they trying to steal it? I've never seen anything like it. My God, take my car, take my home, but don't steal my game."

He raved on and on to his own man, and the mood of fans was becoming ugly.

Finally, the Marquette scorer said: "That's enough, Al. Better sit down."

McGuire winked. "OK."

That was Al the Showman.

"Sure, I like to whip up the crowd," he admits. "Let's face it, we're part of show business and we're fighting for a percentage of the entertainment buck. If you forget that, you're going to go the way of the buffalo."

"I'm not afraid to make a fool out of myself. They call me eccentric. They used to call me nuts, but I haven't changed."

McGuire stories would fill a couple of volumes.

THE DAY before Marquette was to face Kansas in the opening round of the NCAA championships in 1974, some sports writers found McGuire hitchhiking down a highway in Greensboro, N.C.

"When does your practice start?" one of the writers asked.

"It began 10 minutes ago," McGuire replied.

"Do you plan to be there?" the writer inquired.

"It depends on whether I find a taco place in a hurry," said McGuire.

Seashells and balloons.

McGuire generally doesn't break up a fight at practice.

One day, Dave Delsman and Marcus Washington began throwing punches. Maybe McGuire was hungry for a taco or something. Anyway, he yelled: "Hey, Dels, if you want to hit somebody, hit me."

Delsman accepted the offer. He decked the coach.

Another time McGuire was trying to attract the attention of Bernard Toone, then a freshman.

"Hey, Bernard!" shouted Al. "Pay attention. This isn't school."

Early this season, the Warriors were having a difficult time against DePaul, and McGuire ripped into his players at halftime.

"Why don't we just let our trainer and team doctor stay home?" he said. "Nobody plays hard enough to get hurt. Hey, you guys are supposed to break your noses. Stitches are part of basketball. Girls like black eyes. Somebody fake an injury, at least."

McGUIRE HAS had open practices at Marquette. At one workout, there were priests and nuns and elementary school kids in attendance. One of Al's players made a mistake, got mad, threw a ball into the stands and shouted an obscenity.

McGuire approached the player and yelled, loud enough for all to hear: "Hey, Hughie, relax. Everybody makes mistakes. I made a mistake when I recruited you."

Early one basketball season, Marquette defeated Michigan. The game was held a couple of weeks after Michigan had beaten Ohio State in football to earn a trip to Pasadena.

When the press arrived in McGuire's dressing room, he said: "Well, fellows, it's always nice to beat a Rose Bowl team."

McGuire was a fair to middling pro. One time during his career with the New York Knicks he called a press conference to announce he was going to hold Bob Cousy of the Boston Celtics under double figures.

"And I did," McGuire recalls. "Cousy had only six points when I fouled out early in the first quarter."

"I think the 1960s and early 70s were more my moment, a time when it was burn, baby, burn, and having an eight. It allowed me an identity. All the student-athletes want now is a love affair and pizza parties."

"I've been a predominantly black coach. But coaches generally coach the way they played. I couldn't shoot, so I've been a defensive coach. We're a black team with a white offense."

"I'm the boss and the players know it. There's give and take, but in the end, I'm a dictator. But the last six or seven years, my dictatorial style has been challenged. I think those days are gone."

"I think I'm an entertainer."

I've never worked at blackboard, blown a whistle or organized a practice in my life."

"I've been offered at least 12 pro jobs, but I wouldn't like it because it would affect my lifestyle. Too many games, too much travel, not enough security. And I don't like the idea of the employee being paid more than the boss."

DAVE ANDERSON

Millionaires play in the sun to El Centro, Holtville

N.Y. Times Service

HOLTVILLE — At the Texaco station in this Imperial Valley farm town with a 3,686 population, Henry was pumping gas when a traveler asked, "Any millionaires live here?"

"None that I know of," said Henry, old and slim with a smile that softened a grizzled growth of gray beard. "Maybe one of two of the carrot and lettuce farmers. But they don't let on."

But out near the carrot and lettuce fields, out in a baseball complex known as Angeltown, four millionaires were sweating in the sun — Joe Rudi, Bobby Grich, Don Baylor and Frank Tanana of the Angels, who spend the first two weeks of spring training here near the Mexican border.

The millionaires are lodged with the other Angels in nearby El Centro, where the McDonald's yellow arches not only represent the tallest fixture in town but also the brightest of lights. "It's not that there are no fine ladies here," Frank Tanana was saying, "there are no ladies at all. Nothing to do but work."

And the Angels are working to be a contender in the American League West for the first time. Their leading millionaire, Joe Rudi, is perhaps the hardest worker of all.

"Joe Rudi," said Harry Dalton, the Angels general manager, "is out here every morning at 7:15 jogging two miles before any of the other players get here."

THAT'S leadership. That's why the Angels believed Joe Rudi was worth a $2,000,000 investment over five years — salaries of $200,000 for each of three years, then $240,000 and $250,000 plus a $1 million bonus. Joe Rudi is good people as well as being a good ballplayer.

When he was the Oakland A's left fielder, Billy Martin, the New York Yankees manager, once called him, "fundamentally, the best baseball player of this generation." He might be in center field for the Angels, with Don Baylor in left and Bobby Bonds in right. "If I don't have a good year for Mr. (Gene) Autry," Joe Rudi said of the Angels owner, "it won't be for lack of hard work."

Joe Rudi's reputation was common knowledge among baseball people. Harry Dalton knew Bobby Grich and Don Baylor when they were with the Baltimore Orioles and he was the general manager there.

"We just didn't go out and sign any free agents," Dalton explained. "We wanted quality of leadership."

BOBBY GRICH wanted the Angels because he had rooted for them when he was growing up in Long Beach.

"I used to jump in my '56 Ford, pay $1.25, then sneak down and sit behind the dugout and watch Jim Fregosi's and Bobby Knopp's every move," he said. "I'd love to be able to contribute to the Angels' first pennant."

He'll contribute as a shortstop with a $1,550,000 contract over five years — a salary of $150,000 for each of three years, then $250,000 for each of two years plus a $600,000 bonus. But he's not concerned about the adjustment from second base.

"You have to be quicker with a stronger throw," he said, "but even at second base, I always threw overhand."

Don Baylor mentioned that the Yankees and the Texas Rangers offered him more than his six-year Angel contract of $1.6 million — salaries of $150,000, $160,000 for each of three years, then $170,000 and $220,000 plus a $580,000 bonus. But he preferred to re-join Harry Dalton because of $2,000 the Orioles general manager had given him in 1971.

"The Orioles had to send me out again after I'd been the minor league player of the year and I knew I was ready for the majors," Baylor recalled. "But instead of paying me my minor league salary of $10,000 that year, Harry told me he'd pay me the major league minimum of $12,000 — a lot of general managers don't do that."

BAYLOR stole 52 bases with the A's last season after being traded by the Orioles for whom he hit 25 homers the year before. "And the baserunners here — Bobby Bonds, Jerry Remy and me — will have the liberty to run," Baylor said. "The manager's already told us that."

"But with all our millionaires," Tanana said, "it's now a matter of playing like millionaires."

The lanky lefthander worked early the other day because he had to drive to San Diego to take a physical exam for the insurance policy, worth $1 million, in his contract.

"You can leave early," Norm Sherry told him. "Just make me the beneficiary."

Eldon wrestles an 'altar' ego

Let's hear it for a God guy

Because Athletes In Action USA, a basketball team of religious bent, will play the representatives of Russia's goddess government at the Long Beach Arena Monday night, it would be easy to make more of the game than it is.

Lest one be led into temptation, consider that it is no more important than, say, the apocalypse.

"We're looking at it as any other game," says Eldon Lawyer, the 6-2 AIA guard, trying to sound convincing. "When we step onto the floor to play basketball, it's strictly

"When I was growing up I built my whole life around athletics. I had quite a problem with an ego. I really enjoyed seeing my name in the paper. Then I met the Lord."

— Eldon Lawyer.

basketball. As far as us concerning ourselves with them spiritually, we don't do that during the game at all."

Presumably, the infidel Russians—actually, the Moscow Red Army Basketball Club, featuring several Olympic players—could cry "foul" if AIA prays to win.

"Well, we do," says Lawyer, without apology. "We feel that it's important for us and our program to win because winning establishes our credibility. People will listen to winners."

IT'S IMPORTANT to AIA that people especially listen to their halftime program when, instead of going to the dressing room to relax, several players take over the p.a. system to offer their testimonies for Christ.

Perhaps this could be translated and piped into the Russians' room, too. By that time, they might need a spiritual uplift, as have such classy college teams as Marquette, Nevada-Las Vegas and the University of San Francisco, which until Saturday at Notre Dame and except for an earlier revelation against AIA in Long Beach, was undefeated and the No. 1-rated team in the country.

But Eldon Craig Lawyer does not go so far as to suggest that God

ELDON LAWYER
On guard vs. Russians will be on AIA's side against the Russians.

"You'd think so," he says, laughing heartily. "but it'll be interesting."

More seriously, he adds, "We'll go out and give 100 per cent and leave the results to the Lord. We pray for a win, but we also pray that God's will will be done during a game. We want to win and we're saying to the Lord, 'We really want to win, but if you want us to lose, if something better could come out of this game if we lost...'"

But Lawyer sees no benefit in losing.

"There's a lot weighing in the balance as far as our future is concerned. If we can beat the Russians, this will open doors for us to travel in other countries aboard... to share the gospel. Our goal is to represent the U.S. in the World Games in 1978."

From the quotebook

• CHARLIE FINLEY, again attacking Bowie Kuhn: "I have often called him a village idiot. I apologize to all the villages of America. He's the nation's idiot."

• GORDIE HOWE, on why he celebrated the 900th goal of his hockey career with a simple handshake: "When I scored my 800th, I tried to leap up in the air and I came down right on my butt."

AIA'S PEOPLE, all former college players, are regarded as amateurs, although they do receive annual living allowances of $10,000 each so they may pursue the program fulltime.

The AAU and IOC do not seem inclined to challenge the propriety of AIA's purpose just yet. No team's principles could be more above reproach.

Eldon says, "Nobody even mentions anything about rules—no smoking, no drinking—because that's just not part of our lifestyle. We have no curfew on the road."

"It's unique, really—almost Utopia for a coach. You don't have the problems you have on a secular team."

Lawyer, 26, lives in a comfortable Costa Mesa apartment with his wife of nearly four years, Connie, who is a secretary. They were married when Eldon graduated from Oral Roberts University.

"I didn't get any professional offers," says Eldon, whose forte is defense and playmaking.

At ORU, he was overshadowed by Richard Fuqua, a spectacular shooter who knocked around the NBA for awhile.

"I enjoyed playing with him," Eldon says, "but our team didn't keep assists. I'm sure I would have set a record that never would have been broken."

THAT'S ELDON'S ego showing through. It's been a problem since his high school days in Cassoday, Kan., a tiny community northeast of Wichita on Interstate-35 near the place where Knute Rockne crashed in 1930.

"It ain't even a truck stop," Eldon says. "It's only a hundred people. Cattle country. My dad worked for the railroad. He had a section of track he maintained."

"It's a great place to grow up. I'm really thankful I grew up there. Dad put up an old telephone pole, a backboard and a flimsy rim on the lot by the house. The high school gym was about as big as this living room."

Lawyer played all sports and, as the big fish in Cassoday's small pond, wasn't quite able to handle it.

"When I was growing up I built my whole life around athletics," he says. "I had quite a problem with an ego. I really enjoyed seeing my name in the paper. I made athletics my god. Then I met the Lord."

THE SUDDEN death of Eldon's grandfather was a blow to the family, and he admits it started him on the road to Christianity.

"Before that we all went to church on Sunday because it was the thing to do," he says. "In a small town, everybody knew if you weren't in church. But when my grandfather died I really started thinking."

"I started a battle of giving the Lord all my talents—you know, use 'em as you want, just use me as the vessel. I don't really care if my name is in the paper and all this. I really started a battle with that ego."

Lawyer didn't make a lot of headway until he transferred from a junior college to ORU. Even after graduation, while working as a successful insurance broker in Tulsa, Okla., the home of ORU, he wasn't satisfied.

"I was making quite a bit of money, but I wasn't happy with what I was doing inside. I wanted to share what God had done in my life and it was hard for me to do that while trying to sell somebody something."

"My wife and I were attending a Bible study and talking about the gifts the Lord has given each one of us and how we were to use those. Mine happened to be the gift of basketball. So we started praying that the Lord would open a door."

IT WASN'T long before Lawyer saw an article in the paper about AIA, then coached by Jim King, the former Laker.

"I called him up, came to the tryout camp and I've been with 'em ever since," he says.

Monday night Eldon will be assigned to guard Sergei Belov, the Russians' 6-3 guard who has been rated on a par with any in the NBA. Eldon always takes the opponents' strongest outside threat and has deflated some large egos, as he has his own.

"I think earlier, when AIA was just getting started, teams would beat 'em and think, well, they're just a bunch of little Christian sissies."

"But now we're so competitive we can beat major colleges across the country, usually on their own courts. We play aggressively, we play strong. We knock heads with 'em. I think they respect us."

But it's no longer an ego trip for Eldon.

"Now I just go out to play for the Lord," he says.

In that case, may heaven help the Russians.

Hubert Beasley anchored LBSU to sprint medley win Saturday at the Long Beach Relays with meet record 3:26.4 clocking.

A prep rarity, two high jumpers clear seven feet

Dwight who?

It hasn't gone that far yet — it will be a long time before anybody pushes Dwight Stones out of the picture — but Saturday at the Long Beach Relays there were a lot of people trying.

For the first time in California track and field history, two high school athletes cleared seven feet in the high jump during the same meet. Combined with a pair of Long Beach State jumpers, four athletes soared over the seven-foot mark on the same runway that Stones used while competing for the 49ers last year.

James Frazier of Fremont won the high school event on one fewer miss than Santa Monica's Dennis Smith. Both failed in attempts at 7-2, which would have topped the national prep standard of 7-1 1/2.

Frazier passed until 6-4, hit that height as well as 6-6 and 6-8 on his first jumps, then required two attempts to clear 6-10 and 7-0. Smith, all-CIF football player who recently signed to attend USC, didn't jump until the bar was at 6-6 and needed two jumps to achieve it and 6-8, 6-10 and 7-0. Scott Cox of Burbank was third at 6-6.

LONG Beach State sent Carl Miles and Mike Franz over the magic mark for a 1-2 placing in the open competition. It was the second week in a row that Miles has hit seven feet and a personal best for Franz, a junior whose previous pinnacle was 6-11 1/2.

"My goal for next week (against UCLA) is 7-2," said Franz elatedly afterward. "I want to beat Jay Meier."

Miles and Franz were joined by a number of 49ers in the victory column.

Greg Magee scored a double, jumping a personal best 25-2 to win the long jump, then going 51-5 1/2 to take the triple jump. Don Baird, just off the plane from an international meet in Canada, nonetheless won the pole vault at 17-4 before missing three times at 18 feet.

In the mile relay, the LBSU quartet of Leonard Ledet, Vince Taylor, Bryan Saunders and Hubert Beasley ran a meet-record 3:10.4. Beasley earlier had overhauled San Diego State with a 1:52.7 half-mile to anchor teammates Darryl Davis, Dave Lizardi and James Dykes to a meet record 3:26.4 victory in the sprint medley. Armando Cedejas, Howard Keeley, Ledet and Phil Wingard teamed to win a two-mile relay in 7:35.6.

Long Beach was second to San Diego State's 10:00.4 clocking in the distance medley with a 10:04.1 mark and was runnerup to the Santa Monica track club in the four mile relay. SMTCC clocked 16:57.4, LBSU 17:15.3.

THE OTHER meet records were turned in by Mike Cour of the San Diego track club, who ran the steeplechase in 9:14.8, and the Long Beach Lancers age group team, which clocked 52.6 in the 440 relay.

In the 5,000 meter walk, Larry Walker wiggled to an American record of 20:54.1.

Fremont was the dominant force during the morning high school events even without the achievements of its high jumper Frazier.

The school won five relays and set two meet records in the process. Most impressive were its 3:16 mile relay, shattering the old mark of 3:22.7 by Santa Monica last year, and a 4:26 clocking for the 440 relay. Fremont also triumphed in the 880 relay, zipping to a meet record 1:28.5, the two-mile relay (8:02.8) and the sprint medley (3:36.7).

Darrin Nelson of Pius X came within an inch of the meet record in the long jump by leaping 23-4 1/2. St. John Bosco sophomore Phil Gonzalez captured the invitational two-mile in 9:21.9 and Troy Smith of Burbank won the pole vault by clearing 13-6.

The meet concludes today with women's and girls age group events beginning at 10 a.m.

UCLA outrun by Sun Devils at Tempe

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP)—Arizona State captured the mile relay and Kyle Arney won the high jump to give the Sun Devils a 76-69 victory over UCLA in track and field Saturday.

ASU covered the mile relay distance in 3:06.5, finishing almost eight seconds ahead of UCLA.

Arney leaped 7-3 1/2 to win the high jump as the final scores were tallied.

UCLA swept the 800-meter run, the victory going to Conrad Suhr in 1:52.7.

The Bruins also swept the triple jump, the winning leap of 53-2 coming from Willie Banks.

ADS won nine events, including both relays.

A prep rarity, two high jumpers clear seven feet

Dwight who?

It hasn't gone that far yet — it will be a long time before anybody pushes Dwight Stones out of the picture — but Saturday at the Long Beach Relays there were a lot of people trying.

For the first time in California track and field history, two high school athletes cleared seven feet in the high jump during the same meet. Combined with a pair of Long Beach State jumpers, four athletes soared over the seven-foot mark on the same runway that Stones used while competing for the 49ers last year.

James Frazier of Fremont won the high school event on one fewer miss than Santa Monica's Dennis Smith. Both failed in attempts at 7-2, which would have topped the national prep standard of 7-1 1/2.

Frazier passed until 6-4, hit that height as well as 6-6 and 6-8 on his first jumps, then required two attempts to clear 6-10 and 7-0. Smith, all-CIF football player who recently signed to attend USC, didn't jump until the bar was at 6-6 and needed two jumps to achieve it, 6-8, 6-10 and 7-0. Scott Cox of Burbank was third at 6-6.

LONG Beach State sent Carl Miles and Mike Franz over the magic mark for a 1-2 placing in the

UCLA outrun by Sun Devils at Tempe

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP)—Arizona State captured the mile relay and Kyle Arney won the high jump to give the Sun Devils a 76-69 victory over UCLA in track and field Saturday.

ASU covered the mile relay distance in 3:06.5, finishing almost eight seconds ahead of UCLA.

Arney leaped 7-3 1/2 to win the high jump as the final scores were tallied.

UCLA swept the 800-meter run, the victory going to Conrad Suhr in 1:52.7.

The Bruins also swept the triple jump, the winning leap of 53-2 coming from Willie Banks.

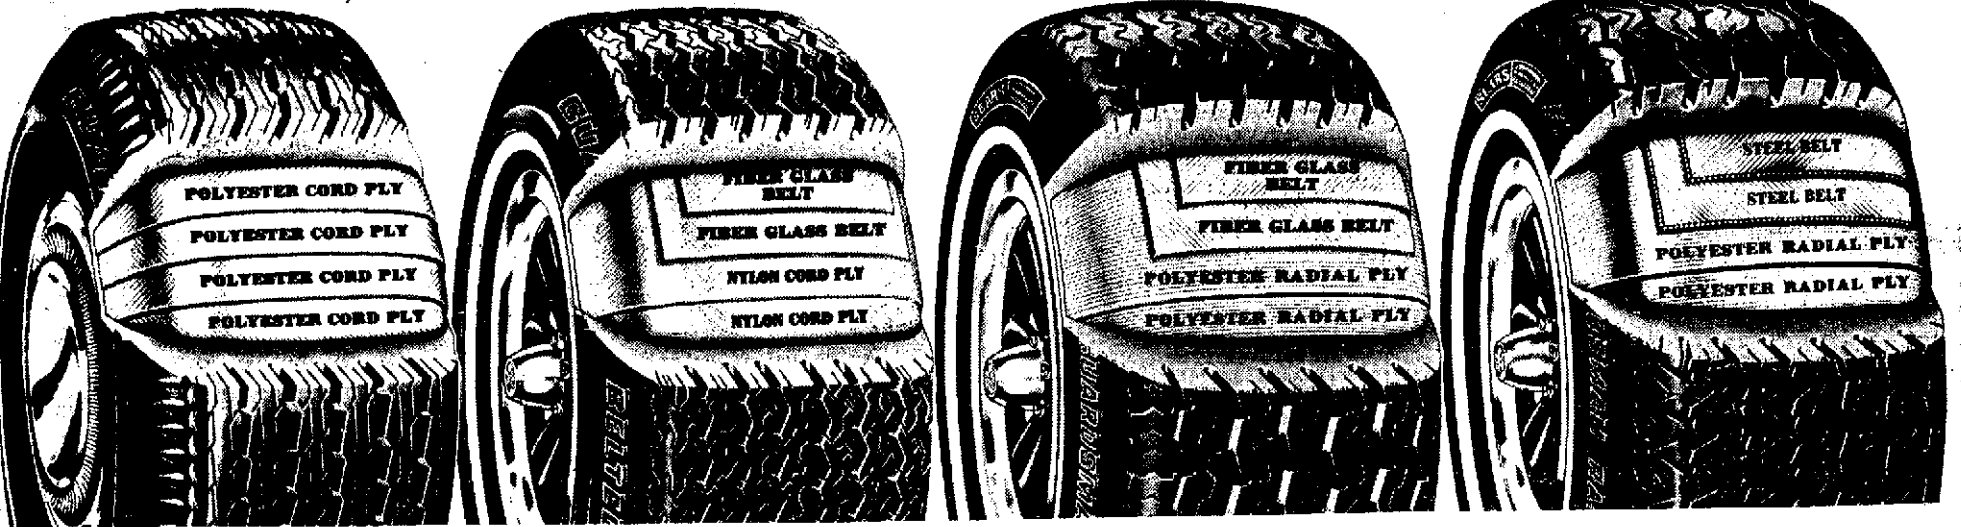

ADS won nine events, including both relays.

'Thank the Big Dodger in the Sky' Where's Lasorda? Everywhere!

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

VERO BEACH—Bill Russell trotted into the dugout during a long, exhausting workout Saturday and collapsed onto the bench, mopping sweat from his brow.

"Hey, Ropes," shouted Tommy Lasorda, the manager, "you tired?"

TOM LASORDA
Acting like a rookie

"No way," Russell yelled back.

"Do you hear that?" screamed Lasorda, turning now to the two dozen or so fans watching the workout.

"I just asked Billy Russell if he was tired. And he said no. Ladies and gentlemen, Billy Russell has been out here in the hot sun for four hours and he says he's not tired. That's because he lo-o-o-ves the game of baseball."

"I think you should all give Billy Russell a nice round of applause."

And they did, just like that, a nice round of applause, and a delighted Lasorda returned his attention to the field.

But only for a moment. A reporter from a nearby newspaper needed a few minutes with Lasorda.

"What paper you with?" Lasorda asked the young writer. "The Orlando Sentinel! I've been coming to Florida for 30 years and I just want to say, the Orlando Sentinel is the finest newspaper I've ever seen. What can I do for you?"

LASORDA had already done it, of course. The reporter asked a few questions, scribbled some notes and thanked Lasorda for his time.

"No," replied Tommy, "thank you for coming to me and asking me about baseball—the greatest game in the world. Let's you and me thank The Big Dodger in the Sky that we can be out here, on a beautiful day like this, with baseball."

Thomas Charles Lasorda, 49, cheerleader, confidence builder, preacher, babysitter, batting practice pitcher, loyalist and—oh, yes—rookie manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

One week on the job and he's set unbeatable records for media attention.

Writers follow him around, jotting down every word, every note, like maybe something he says will one day be chiseled in stone.

A national magazine sent two photographers to Dodgertown. In a day they used more film than the CIA.

"Better get a shot of you spitting tobacco," said one.

"Okay," said Lasorda, loading up and taking dead aim on the photographer's expensive Nikon.

THEN THERE are the TV crews. There were three on the scene Saturday, shooting Lasorda in the dugout, by the batting cage, chatting with kids—you name it.

"I gave each one of 'em an interview," said Lasorda, "and each one of 'em has somethin' different—an exclusive, right?—and they all go away happy."

Rick Monday, the newest Dodger, walked by. Lasorda, after making sure that he had a nice audience, said to Monday, "Rick, when I look at you, I see a lot of me in you."

Replied the slightly overweight Monday: "Yeah, it's all of those dinners you bought me when you were trying to sign me in high school."

He's non-stop. He always has been, of course, but until this spring he's had to stay on the sidelines. He was a player, then a scout, then a minor league manager and then a coach.

Now he's out there in front. Manager. He loves it and he doesn't mind telling anyone.

THE MAN he succeeded, Walter Alston, sits out of the sun, watching Lasorda's antics, and laughs.

"Hey, Tommy," shouted Alston, "what time is your intra-squad game tomorrow?"

"One o'clock, Skip," he says.

Skip? "You bet," says Lasorda. "He'll always be the skipper as far as I'm concerned. Heck, three days in a row I walked into the clubhouse and forgot who I was. I went into the coaches' room instead of the manager's office."

He knows, all right. He held a closed-door meeting before the first workout of spring training.

"It was a no-nonsense meeting," said one player. "No laughing, no clowning around, none of that stuff. He went right down the line with every guy, telling us just what he expects this spring. Geez, he even ran (Teddy) Martinez out of the meeting 'cause he showed up wearing a beard."

Meeting over, the doors open, time for batting practice and Lasorda, outside now, turns it on again for the fans standing near the clubhouse.

"Waddaya mean we need two-dozen baseballs for batting practice?" he said. "I'm throwin'. We only need one ball."

"How come you changed your number?" someone asks.

"I was number 52 last year," he said. "That's a linebacker's number. Now I'm number 2. Same number Leo Durocher wore. Leo must have figured one day I'd be a manager 'cause he was always telling me that the one thing to remember when you argue with umpires is to keep your hands in your pockets."

Maybe he hasn't caught up with the Cincinnati

Reds just yet, but he's captured the players' attention, the media's attention and the fans' attention. The boss's, too, for that matter. "Where's Lasorda?" asked club president Peter O'Malley. "I don't hear him."

Angels send Grich to see doctor

HOLTVILLE (Special)—Bobby Grich will probably spend the first week of the exhibition season in traction instead of playing shortstop for the Angels.

The decision to send the former Baltimore star home to be examined by Dr. Jules Rasinski was made Saturday, shortly before the Angels played their first intrasquad game of the spring.

Bob Clear's Champions defeated Del Crandall's Cowboys, 1-0.

"We're not going to fool around with this any longer," general manager Harry Dalton said. "Grich will be examined by Dr. Rasinski and he should be able to join us next weekend in Palm Springs."

There have been rumors that Grich has a slipped disc. The player denied it and the Angels say X-rays of Grich's back indicate the problem is muscular.

The four-time Gold Glove winner at Baltimore had been expected to resume full-scale workouts Saturday, but his back stiffened Friday night.

Another intra-squad game is scheduled today.

"I just asked Billy Russell if he was tired. And he said no. Ladies and gentlemen, Billy Russell has been out here in the hot sun for four hours and he says he's not tired. That's because he lo-o-o-ves the game of baseball."

"I think you should all give Billy Russell a nice round of applause."

And they did, just like that, a nice round of applause, and a delighted Lasorda returned his attention to the field.

But only for a moment. A reporter from a nearby newspaper needed a few minutes with Lasorda.

"What paper you with?" Lasorda asked the young writer. "The Orlando Sentinel! I've been coming to Florida for 30 years and I just want to say, the Orlando Sentinel is the finest newspaper I've ever seen. What can I do for you?"

LASORDA had already done it, of course. The reporter asked a few questions, scribbled some notes and thanked Lasorda for his time.

"No," replied Tommy. "Thank you for coming to me and asking me about baseball—the greatest game in the world. Let's you and me thank The Big Dodger in the Sky that we can be out here, on a beautiful day like this, with baseball."

Thomas Charles Lasorda, 49, cheerleader, confidence builder, preacher, babysitter, batting practice pitcher, loyalist and—oh, yes—rookie manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers.

One week on the job and he's set unbeatable records for media attention.

Writers follow him around, jotting down every word, every note, like maybe something he says will one day be chiseled in stone.

A national magazine sent two photographers to Dodgertown. In a day they used more film than the CIA.

"Better get a shot of you spitting tobacco," said one.

"Okay," said Lasorda, loading up and taking dead aim on the photographer's expensive Nikon.

THEN THERE are the TV crews. There were three on the scene Saturday, shooting Lasorda in the dugout, by the batting cage, chatting with kids—you name it.

"I gave each one of 'em an interview," said Lasorda, "and each one of 'em has somethin' different—an exclusive, right?—and they all go away happy."

Rick Monday, the newest Dodger, walked by. Lasorda, after making sure that he had a nice audience, said to Monday, "Rick, when I look at you, I see a lot of me in you."

Replied the slightly overweight Monday: "Yeah, it's all of those dinners you bought me when you were trying to sign me in high school."

He's non-stop. He always has been, of course, but until this spring he's had to stay on the sidelines. He was a player, then a scout, then a minor league manager and then a coach.

Now he's out there in front. Manager. He loves it and he doesn't mind telling anyone.

THE MAN he succeeded, Walter Alston, sits out of the sun, watching Lasorda's antics, and laughs.

"Hey, Tommy," shouted Alston, "what time is your intra-squad game tomorrow?"

"One o'clock, Skip," he says.

Skip?

"You bet," says Lasorda. "He'll always be the skipper as far as I'm concerned. Heck, three days in a row I walked into the clubhouse and forgot who I was. I went into the coaches' room instead of the manager's office."

He knows, all right. He held a closed-door meeting before the first workout of spring training.

"It was a no-nonsense meeting," said one player. "No laughing, no clowning around, none of that stuff. He went right down the line with every guy, telling us just what he expects this spring. Geez, he even ran 'Teddy' Martinez out of the meeting 'cause he showed up wearing a beard."

Meeting over, the doors open, time for batting practice and Lasorda, outside now, turns it on again for the fans standing near the clubhouse.

"Waddaya mean we need two-dozen baseballs for batting practice?" he said. "I'm throwin'. We only need one ball."

"How come you changed your number?" someone asks.

"I was number 52 last year," he said. "That's a linebacker's number. Now I'm number 2. Same number Leo Durocher wore. Leo must have figured one day I'd be a manager 'cause he was always telling me that the one thing to remember when you argue with umpires is to keep your hands in your pockets."

Maybe he hasn't caught up with the Cincinnati

Reds just yet, but he's captured the players' attention, the media's attention and the fans' attention. The boss's, too, for that matter.

"Where's Lasorda?" asked club president Peter O'Malley. "I don't hear him."

Angels send Grich to see doctor

HOLTVILLE (Special)—Bobby Grich will probably spend the first week of the exhibition season in traction instead of playing shortstop for the Angels.

The decision to send the former Baltimore star home to be examined by Dr. Jules Rasinski was made Saturday, shortly before the Angels played their first intrasquad game of the spring.

Bob Clear's Champions defeated Del Crandall's Cowboys, 1-0.

"We're not going to fool around with this any longer," general manager Harry Dalton said. "Grich will be examined by Dr. Rasinski and he should be able to join us next week-end in Palm Springs."

There have been rumors that Grich has a slipped disc. The player denied it and the Angels say X-rays of Grich's back indicate the problem is muscular.

The four-time Gold Glove winner at Baltimore had been expected to resume full-scale workouts Saturday, but his back stiffened Friday night.

Another intra-squad game is scheduled today.

LBSU cagers hopefully await bid to regionals

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

The pressure of regular season play is over, but Long Beach State basketball coach, Fran Schaaf, is hoping the break in tension is only temporary.

Bids are expected tonight for the AIAW regionals, scheduled Friday through Sunday at Cal State Fullerton, and Fran will be "very disappointed" if the 49ers are not selected for one of the four at-large positions.

LBSU, with an over-all record of 11-9, finished they recorded double figure wins.

The week's rest before regionals will be needed to get the 49ers back in top condition. Monica Havelka, suffering from a bruised ankle, played but was hampered against Fullerton. Lynn Stith received a knee bruise in the Northridge game, and Kathy Cantu hurt an ankle when she stepped in a hole while jogging. Four players are coming off the flu.

RAIN canceled pre-season competition so the Long Beach City College tennis team opened the league season cold against Fullerton Thursday.

The match was called because of darkness at the end of split sets with a score of 6½-2½. There has been a change in player procedure this season with team members playing interchangeably on the six singles and three doubles teams.

Coach Sally Monsoor has two returning players, Terri Berryman, No. 1 singles, and Terri Machado, in the No. 4 spot. A freshman from Millikan, Margaret Frost, is playing No. 2 singles. "She is a very strong player but lacks experience," Sally said.

Anne Middlebrooks is No. 3. "She is a good player — especially in doubles and at the net." Completing the lineup are Julie Lawson, 5; Sheri Crigger, 6 (she's the daughter of men's and coed tennis coach Benny Crigger); Chris Gutting, 7; Jill Ramsdell, 8; Stacy

Peacock, 9, and Candy Cashman, 10. All, except freshmen, Margaret and

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Candy, have played on the coed tennis team. Playing doubles are Terri Berryman and Margaret, No. 1; Anne and Terri Machado, 2; Stacy and Candy, 3, and Julie and Sheri, 4.

LACK of power has stymied the Long Beach City College softball team so far this season. The Vikings lost to Santa Ana, 9-4, and Mt. San Antonio, 7-1, last week.

The bright spot in LBCC's game, said coach Donna Prindle, is the improved defense. "And the team is showing signs of playing together now."

In the Santa Ana game, Kathy Kellis hit a home run and Karen Daley and Kelley McCartney, had RBIs.

Against Mt. SAC, Dawn Wiley, singled, stole second and scored on a throwing error. "She played a steady game in the outfield," Donna said. "Joan McLean played a fine defensive game at short stop."

The LBCC coed volleyball team knocked off East L.A. in two games 15-4, 15-0, double A's, and 15-2, 15-1, single A's. However Orange Coast College edged LBCC twice in three-game matches. The scores were 13-15, 15-13, 15-10, double A's, and 10-15, 15-3, 16-14, single A's.

The single A loss was a heartbreaker for the Vikings squad, which blew a 13-6 lead in the final game.

Singled out for excellent play by coach Marilyn Tom were Roxanne Martinez and Jim DeWitt, both returning players for the double A's, and Brad

Davis, team captain of the single A's. The Vikings meet Rio Hondo and Glendale this week.

LBSU cagers hopefully await bid to regionals

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

The pressure of regular season play is over, but Long Beach State basketball coach, Fran Schaafsma is hoping the break in tension is only temporary.

Bids are expected tonight for the AIAW regionals, scheduled Friday through Sunday at Cal State Fullerton, and Fran will be "very disappointed" if the 49ers are not selected for one of the four at-large positions.

LBSU, with an overall record of 11-9, finished

Risinger No.1

Independent Press-Telegram Women in Sports columnist Elaine Risinger has been awarded first prize in sports writing in the California Press Women's competition. Risinger was judged best among entries from throughout the state.

third in the conference after two losses each to UCLA and Fullerton, the one and two teams. Their other defeats were by Cal Poly Pomona, Delta State and Cal State Northridge, in a schedule that "didn't have one game without pressure," Fran adds, "I hope the committee keeps this in mind."

The other school in line for consideration for an at-large spot is Northridge, which plays in the small college league. LBSU and Northridge split a four-game schedule with Long Beach taking the edge in the point total. Long Beach State's losses were by one and two points but they recorded double figure wins.

The week's rest before regionals will be needed to get the 49ers back in top condition. Monica Havelka, suffering from a bruised ankle, played but was hampered against Fullerton. Lynn Stith received a knee bruise in the Northridge game, and Kathy Cantu hurt an ankle when she stepped in a hole while jogging. Four players are coming off the flu.

RAIN canceled pre-season competition so the Long Beach City College tennis team opened the league season cold against Fullerton Thursday.

The match was called because of darkness at the end of split sets with a score of 6½-2½. There has been a change in player procedure this season with team members playing interchangeably on the six singles and three doubles teams.

Coach Sally Monsoor has two returning players, Terri Berryman, No.1 singles, and Terri Machado, in the No.4 spot. A freshman from Millikan, Margaret Frost, is playing No.2 singles. "She is a very strong player but lacks experience," Sally said.

Anne Middlebrooks is No.3. "She is a good player — especially in doubles and at the net." Completing the lineup are Julie Lawson, 5; Sheri Crigger, 6 (she's the daughter of men's and coed tennis coach Benny Crigger); Chris Gutting, 7; Jill Ramsdell, 8; Stacy

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Candy, have played on the coed tennis team. Playing doubles are Terri Berryman and Margaret, No.1; Anne and Terri Machado, 2; Stacy and Candy, 3, and Julie and Sheri, 4.

LACK of power has stymied the Long Beach City College softball team so far this season. The Vikings lost to Santa Ana, 9-4, and Mt. San Antonio, 7-1, last week.

The bright spot in LBCC's game, said coach Donna Prindle, is the improved defense. "And the team is showing signs of playing together now."

In the Santa Ana game, Kathy Kellis hit a home run and Karen Daley and Kelley McCartney, had RBIs.

Against Mt. SAC, Dawn Wiley, singled, stole second and scored on a throwing error. "She played a steady game in the outfield," Donna said. "Joan McLean played a fine defensive game at short stop."

The LBCC coed volleyball team knocked off East L.A. in two games 15-4, 15-0, double A's, and 15-2, 15-4, single A's. However Orange Coast College edged LBCC twice in three-game matches. The scores were 13-15, 15-13, 15-10, double A's, and 10-15, 15-3, 16-14, single A's.

The single A loss was a heartbreaker for the Vikings squad, which blew a 13-6 lead in the final game.

Singled out for excellent play by coach Marilyn Tom were Roxanne Martinez and Jim DeWitt, both returning players for the double A's, and Brad

Davis, team captain of the single A's. The Vikings meet Rio Hondo and Glendale this week.

Cuzwuzwrong right there in $150,000 California Derby

ALBANY (AP)—"The horse was really game," said jockey Raul Ramirez after riding Cuzwuzwrong, a brown colt with a deformed right foot, to victory by a neck over Cathy's Reject in the $150,000 California Derby at Golden Gate Fields Saturday.

"I hit him left-handed coming around the turn and he came out a little, but when the other horse went past him, he dug in," said the Mexican jockey.

Make Amends, the 8-5 favorite, with apprentice Steve Cauthen up, disappointed the record crowd by finishing 11th and last in the 1 1/16 mile race.

"My horse broke well and we were laying right where we wanted, but he tried to lug out on the clubhouse turn and never seemed to get going again," said Cauthen.

In earning $85,000 for owner J.R. Sturges of Aspen, Colo., Cuzwuzwrong carried 112 pounds. He moved up early in the race to take the lead and held off the closing charge by Cathy's Reject, top weighted at 122 and ridden by Enrique Munoz, subbing for suspended Bill Shoemaker.

Cuzwuzwrong right there in $150,000 California Derby

ALBANY (AP) — "The horse was really game," said jockey Raul Ramirez after riding Cuzwuzwrong, a brown colt with a deformed right foot, to victory by a neck over Cathy's Rejeet in the $150,000 California Derby at Golden Gate Fields Saturday.

"I hit him left-handed coming around the turn and he came out a little, but when the other horse went past him, he dug in," said the Mexican jockey.

Make Amends, the 8-5 favorite, with ace apprentice Steve Caution up, disappointed the record crowd by finishing 11th and last in the 1 1/16 mile race.

"My horse broke well and we were laying right where we wanted, but he tried to lug out in the clubhouse turn and never seemed to get going again," said Caution.

In earning $85,000 for owner J.R. Sturgis of Aspen, Colo., Cuzwuzwrong carried 112 pounds. He moved up early in the race to take the lead and held off the closing charge by Cathy's Rejeet, top weighted at 122 and ridden by Enrique Munoz, subbing for suspended Bill Shoemaker.

Tall Ships wrap-around film highlights Anaheim boat show

H. Werner Buck will open his Western National Boat and Marine Show Wednesday at the Anaheim Convention Center for a five-day run. This is more than just another exhibition of boats. Buck has added something to it that should make it a rather spectacular event.

Tall and Proud is the title of a unique photographic review of Operation Sail 1976, and it will be shown continuously in one of the rooms of the Anaheim Convention Center. Tall and Proud is not a film in color for a single screen. It is the type of slide presentation that is shown in a circular theater, with a screen around the entire room.

Operation Sail presented the films on a 360-degree screen at the New York National Boat Show in January and it proved to be the sensation of that annual exhibition. Buck acquired the 14-minute photographic masterpiece for presentation at the Anaheim Convention Center.

In order to take the wrap-around photographs, the producers used the unique "Circlescan" cameras to capture a screening effect that makes the show patrons feel that they were in the middle of the Tall Ships Parade last July 4.

Wren Associates, Inc., developed the circlescan photographic process. The financial surplus that Operation Sail realized from Tall and Proud is being donated to the National Trust for Historic Preservation for its Maritime Preservation Program.

THE FAMILY boat show could be a better name than Western National etc. because emphasis has been placed on all types of boats that afford family pleasure. There will be fun boats, trailerable boats of all types, plus some of the expensive yachts that run into many thousands of dollars.

There will be an extensive display of nautical antique and ancient marine memorabilia. Owners of rare and seagoinitems, the older the better, have been invited to display their treasures at no cost. The exhibits will be judged and there will be three cash prizes—$500 for first place, $300 for second, $200 for third.

The categories could be old boats, lorries, canoes, skiffs, dinghies, anchors, diving gear, in fact, anything that would add to an old-salt collection of ancient items. If you have such and desire to enter it, simply telephone Werner Buck at 749-9331.

Show hours will be 3 to 10 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday; 3 to 10:30 Friday; noon to 10:30 Saturday, and noon to 8 Sunday, closing day. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children 5 to 15. There is no additional charge for the Tall and Proud showing which scheduled every hour the show is open.

DONNELL CULPEPPER

ON THAT TALL ship subject, it was our pleasure to see the first of five presentations by The Magnificent SEA and Its Sailing Vessels at the Los Angeles Music Center's Pavilion Wednesday night. Also, there were many old salts and new salts there to see Old Worlds for New. The Admirals' Cup '75 and some recent films of the 12-meter Enterprise which is having trials off San Diego along with her dockmate, Intrepid.

Old Worlds for New is the story of the Tall Ships that crossed the Atlantic from Plymouth, England, to Newport, R.I., to take part in the July 4 parade up the Hudson River.

There is only one way to describe the film, which was produced by Mike Murley and filmed under the direction of cameraman Aaron Aardvark. That description is breath-taking. It indeed is a shame that the film was restricted to one night at the Music Center, another at San Francisco and a third and final at Seattle.

Just as thrilling was the film of The Admirals' Cup '75, a British-made film, also done by Mike Murley and Aardvark.

The Magnificent SEA will present four other films for one night only at the three cities: L'Aventure Cousteau March 30 at the Music Center; Around Cape Horn and The Savage Seas April 20; Yankee Sails the Nile April 13, and The Rosenfeld Art and the Sea with Stanley Rosenfeld in person April 27.

OUTDOOR MINIS—The Louisiana Bass'n Gal Open, a bass-fishing tournament for women only, will take place in the Sammy Gill Marina of Toldeo Bend Reservoir, Texas, March 26-27. There is a $35 entry fee and anybody entering must be a member in good standing of the National Bass'n Gal Association. If you want more information about the tournament or the association, write to Sugar Rowden, Bass'n Gal president, 1029 Capetown Dr., Grand Prairie, Tex. 75050.

There's no doubt that warmer water early in the year has changed fishing techniques and dock totals for party boats even this early in the year. The January catch of kelp bass, for instance, as given to the DFG, was 2,100 as opposed to 282 in January of 1976. A similar rise occurred for barred sand bass: 2,755 in January of this year, as opposed to 345 in January of 1976. Bonito catches also went up to 1,221 from 282.

Apparently the people who like to travel in recreational vehicles are not worried any more about the fuel situation. The RVIA announced that 1976 was a record year, with $4.28 billion in sales and 541,000 units produced. That total far exceeded the $2.36 billion in 1972, the previous high year.

The DFG has released seven tule elk onto the Grizzly Island Wildlife Area in hope of establishing a new herd of the native California family animal. The elk were taken from the Tule Elk Preserve near Bakersfield, where there are 60 elk roaming on 850 acres.

Western films now biting the dust at box offices

By GENE SISKEL Knight News Service

MEL BROOKS
Tall in 'Saddles'

Move over, Doc Holliday — the latest corpse to arrive on Boot Hill is the western movie itself. The last two years have been disastrous for the Hollywood oater.

Variety's annual list of top moneymaking films tells the financial story. For 1975, not one western is listed among the year's top 45 grossing pictures. Richard Brooks' "Bite the Bullet" (an appropriate title) finished in 46th place but was a financial bust. The only other western on the 1975 list is Tom Laughlin's embarrassing "Master Gunfighter," an even bigger money loser. It's listed in 82nd place.

Last year's numbers are just as bad. Clint Eastwood's "The Outlaw Josey Wales" will be the only 1976 western to turn a profit before it's sold to television. But it was not the year's top-grossing western.

What was "Duke" Wayne, cover your ears. The biggest western hit of 1976 was the reissue of Mel Brooks' "Blazing Saddles" (1974), a parody of everything the classic western stands for.

There's more. Well down last year's financial list are Arthur Penn's "The Missouri Breaks," Don Siegel's "The Shootist," Tom Gries' "Breakheart Pass," Frank D. Gilroy's "From Noon Till Three," Irwin Kershner's "Return of a Man Called Horse" and Robert Altman's "Buffalo Bill and the Indians" — every one a box-office loser by a respected director.

The stars involved in these pictures include the biggest names in the business: Marlon Brando, Paul Newman, Jack Nicholson, Charles Bronson (twice), James Stewart and John Wayne.

The sound of the death rattle is everywhere. Following the success of "Blazing Saddles," two inept western comedies — "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox" and "The Great Scout and Cathouse Thursday" — last year outgrossed such quality westerns as "Buffalo Bill" and "A Man Called Horse." Do people prefer to laugh at the western myth now?

In 1971 Wayne was killed by a gunman for the first time in a western; Bruce Dern pulled the trigger in "The Cowboys." Five years later in "The Shootist," Wayne, playing a gunslinger riddled with cancer, is shot in the back by a bartender and then put out of his misery like a wounded horse by a teen-age boy.

What's next? John Wayne possessed by the devil in "The Exorcist at the O.K. Corral?"

The grim financial news can have only one effect: Fewer westerns will be slated for production.

That already has happened. Only one major film company has a western scheduled for release this year.

It's the same company — United Artists, which took a western bath last year with "The Missouri Breaks."

'Fiddler on the Roof'

CLO does right by a classic

By BOB SANDERS Staff Writer

By now "Fiddler on the Roof" has taken its place as an American classic, and Long Beach's Civic Light Opera company is doing it full justice in its current production.

Despite the acoustical inadequacy of the Jordan High School Auditorium, the show comes through most of the time with a strong flavor of pre-revolution Russia and a highly emotional mixture of Jewish humor and pathos.

Although "Fiddler" is basically a long show, the CLO production moves at a good pace most of the time. Cast, orchestra, staging and lighting are all excellent, making the entire production a delight to watch and hear.

In the demanding lead role of Tevye the milkman, veteran Gary Gordon turns in the superb performance he has led audiences around Southern California to expect of him.

His Tevye is full of fervor, humor and philosophical pathos, salted down with a canny slyness that makes it both memorable and enjoyable.

CLO newcomer Charlene Kase brings to the role of Golde, Tevye's domineering, hard-working, sometimes shrewish but always sympathetic wife, a strong voice and a classic grace.

The "Do You Love Me?" duet and the Fruma-Sarah dream sequence brought out the best of both Gordon's and Miss Kase's big talents.

The lovers' roles of Tevye's daughters and their suitors were handled with appropriate aplomb. Allyson Reed played a very appealing Tzeitel, while Roger Keller did a fine job as her shy but strong-loving husband.

Diana Monter brought

Hodel to life, particularly in her departure song with Tevye, while Bill Brown made her radical activist sweetheart believable.

Jim Whitson played the rather understanding role of Fyedka with sympathy and understanding.

Vital landlord-tenant issue...

Who's responsible for what?

Who's responsible for what?

In the sometimes-strained relationships that exist between landlord and tenant, about nine-tenths of the disputes revolve around this very basic question.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I discovered your column in the newspaper, recently as a foreigner I was very pleased to see that one can get advice and help of this sort through the newspaper.

My husband and I leased a home in the country. A few weeks ago the water pump broke and we had it repaired. Who has to pay the bill? Us or the landlord?

By the way, can you recommend an understandable brochure about real estate problems — taxes, mortgages, tenancy, etc?

Finally, you can add one more devoted reader to your column. Mrs. E.F.C. Coopersburg, Pa.

A. Thank you, that's very kind. Welcome aboard.

For many casual observers the standard lease form seems to put the lion's share of the burden on the tenant and lets the landlord off with virtually no responsibility for anything. That isn't quite the way it is, but it's certainly how it seems at times.

Ironically, the general rule is that neither party to a lease is really required to make repairs to surrender the premises at the expiration of the lease in as good a condition as it was at the beginning of occupancy — reasonable wear and tear by the elements expected. That would seem to put the entire burden on the tenant for anything, and everything, that goes wrong during his occupancy.

But there's one catch, the landlord is charged with making sure that the property is kept tenantable. If he doesn't then the tenant is free to consider the lease broken and that he has been "constructively evicted."

Obviously, a house can't remain tenantable very long with an inoperative water pump; so this would make the repair the landlord's responsibility. Fortunately, most landlords are pretty reasonable in this respect and know, full well, that major breakdowns like this are their baby.

I don't know of any really good, inexpensive, brochure on the subject of real estate. It's such a broad field that most "brochures" rapidly become "books."

The one I like best is North and Ring's "Real Estate Principles and Practices." It's pretty expensive and you would do well to consult it at the public library. It was written essentially for real estate people, but it's easy reading, nonetheless.

Dear Mr. Campbell: As an investment, my wife and I recently bought a 16-unit apartment building in a university town. We are now worried about how to manage and maintain it. As you can imagine, the turn-over in tenants is very high. Mr. W.T.P., Tempe, Ariz.

A. That's the pattern with university apartments. There will be anywhere from 32 to 64 brand new tenants in those 16 units every semester. Your best bet is to trade off free living quarters to a responsible couple (preferably married) in exchange for managerial and maintenance duties. Graduate students (my friends in this business tell me) are usually your best bet.

Dear Mr. Campbell: I own a small "strip" shopping center with eight small stores. For the first time, I have a tenant that I don't know how to cope with.

What started out as a regular bookstore has, in the past couple of years, turned into a hard-core pornographic store, that bothers both me and my other tenants. He claims that the lease doesn't specify what kind of books he would be selling there. Mr. F.V., San Diego.

A. Hogwash! Your tenant's argument won't hold water. It's a cheap cop-out. Give him sufficient notice and, if he isn't out by expiration time, begin eviction proceedings.

There isn't a court in the country that would buy his defense. You'd better work fast because this kind of an operation is hurting the value of your property more than a flash fire would hurt it.

Dear Mr. Campbell: What happens if I put my house up for sale, a buyer accepts the price and then I change my mind? Do I have to go through with the sale? — Mrs. G.B., Allenton, Pa.

A. Not unless you have already formally (with signature) accepted the proposition.

'PALOS VERDES' — ONE OF 10 MODELS OPEN AT COUNTRY HILLS

Country Hills presenting last phase: 85 new homes

Today is the grand opening of the last phase of new homes at Country Hills, the $50 million master-planned community located off Hawthorne Boulevard on the north slope of the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

There are 85 new homes in this last section, and many of these will have stunning views with daytime panoramas of greater Los Angeles and the distant mountains and night views of sparkling city lights. The luxurious new homes are available in 10 spacious and creative plans with up to five bedrooms.

Northwood's tract maps approved

The Irvine City Council has approved tract maps for 24 new home communities planned for the 1,400-acre Village of Northwood, east of the Santa Ana Freeway, in Irvine.

Information regarding the new homes may be obtained by writing Chuck Winslow, P.O. Box 17542, Irvine, CA, 92713, or calling (714) 559-1875.

Winslow said that of the 4,000 homes to be constructed by 18 of Southern California's top builders, 25 per cent will be single family residences.

The remaining 25 per cent will be devoted to patio homes, townhomes, apartments and an adult mobile home community.

The Village of Northwood is prime Orange County land bounded by the Santa Ana Freeway, Culver Drive, Jeffrey Road and Irvine Boulevard, with about 200 acres extending east of Irvine Boulevard to the foothills.

THE prime location on the prestigious Palos Verdes Peninsula has been a key to the phenomenal sales success of Country Hills. The first 393 homes sold out prior to completion. Heavy sales activity is anticipated on the homes of this last phase, which features some of the most spectacular views in the entire community.

In addition to the new homes, Country Hills consist of a large, 12.5-acre public park, owned and operated by The City of Torrance, and a new shopping center. A smaller center and a restaurant are also planned for the 130-acre development.

According to The City of Torrance, Recreation Department, the new DePortola Park at Country Hills will have improvements in excess of $835,000. Planned facilities include a tennis court, handball courts, bicycle path, bike racks, family picnic areas, a spray pool and landscaped lagoon system, a "tot lot" with children's play equipment, a practice ski slope, softball diamond, turf amphitheater, volleyball area, sand play area, jogging trail and a park building.

IN ADDITION to the new park, the surrounding area abounds in recreational and entertainment opportunities. Beautiful beaches are nearby, and so is Palos Verdes, with horse stables and riding trails, wooded nature areas for hiking and golf and tennis facilities.

Fine schools and churches of nearly every denomination are in the area, and restaurants and other entertainment attractions include the Marineland of the Pacific amusement park, the South Bay Botanical Gardens, Alpine Village, the Redondo Pier and King Harbor with their attractions.

The last phase homes are priced from $105,000 to $149,000. Developed by W & C Building Co.

Film star Myrna Loy reaches new stage in her 70s

NEW YORK — Myrna Loy came gingerly into Patsy's restaurant on W. 56th Street about 2 o'clock the other afternoon, slightly winded after rushing over from a rehearsal around the corner. She had just tossed back her short raccoon coat and sat down when some people in the back waved at her, and she waved back and smiled.

"Somebody you know?" I asked.

"My friends the waiters," she nodded. "Wonderful thing about having been on film — you have friends wherever you go."

Miss Loy has appeared in more than 120 films, playing belly dancers and girls with knives in their teeth, up to the leading woman to William Powell, Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy, Leslie Howard, Walter Pidgeon and Cary Grant. Now, at slightly beyond 70, she was excited at going to Palm Beach to play the mother role in "Barefoot in the Park," wherein she gets mixed up with "a crazy Hungarian," portrayed by Jean-Pierre Aumont.

"We've been working so hard — tomorrow I have to get my hair done," she told me. She refused a glass of wine. "No, no, I'm working," she said.

"I mostly do my own hair. I'm a real redhead, you know. It helped, I suppose, but it also caused me trouble. It was almost orange. The boys used to yell, 'Red-head, gingerbread, 5 cents a loaf.' I'd run and cry and skin my knees on the stairs. For a long time when I started I played Orientals and wore black wigs."

"I met a pilot who said he used to fly me from L.A. to New York back in the days when it took 15 hours. He said he'd often seen me asleep in the plane and had watched my red hair and freckled face in the sunlight."

Somebody had just seen "The Thin Man" on TV the other night.

"Yes, 1934 — a bit of time ago, isn't it? It was a sleeper." Again Miss Loy paused to insist that she wouldn't have any wine. "W.S. Van Dyke was the director. He'd been saying I was going to be a star. He had a thing about pushing people in his swimming pool to see how they'd react. I guess I passed the swimming pool test."

"It was supposed to be a little picture. It was a sensation."

No Oscar has ever come her way. "I never even got a nomination," Miss Loy said with a light laugh that has a familiar sound to her fans. "I got a Brussels award for 'Best Years of Our Lives' with Fredric March and Robert Sherwood. They never gave awards for comedy. It used to make me so mad. Comedy is so much more difficult to do."

It's very scary, she said, looking around and seeing so many of her contemporaries that have gone: "Pidge is still here. Cary Grant says he's retired; I guess he is, but he looks wonderful. Maurice Chevalier is gone. We did 'Love Me Truly.'"

"My first talkie was 'The Desert Song.' I was a bellydancer, and she rattled on the Red Shadow. The leading women were like Dolores Costello, who was John Barrymore's wife. I didn't remember working with her, but she said, 'What? She doesn't remember being chained to me on that boat?' That was the kind of picture we did."

"The four-letter-word pictures they make now are a form of desperation. They don't have the writers like they used to. You could call up Bob Benchley or Ben Hecht and say, 'Come over here and get us out of trouble.'"

In 1961 she started doing theater in "The Marriage-Go-Round" with Claude Dauphin: "I picked up a few awards, not for acting but for attendance at Westbury." Then she was in the revival of "The Women," which didn't last long but got to Broadway. Her last movie was "Airport '75," playing an Irish lady who drank boiler-makers."

She's fascinated by the theater and its differences from movies. She's impressed with an audience that laughs at the jokes.

Miss Loy has been married four times, but not lately, and isn't planning to be again. She's one of the founders of the American Place Theater and co-chairman of the National Committee Against Discrimination in Housing.

She's one of the most popular women in town, and she gets around. If you suddenly say, "Isn't that Myrna Loy?" it probably is.

THE WEEKEND WINDUP:

Charo (now taping a "Brady Bunch" TVer) said she's being upped to a headline spot at the Las Vegas Sahara ... Sylvester Stallone fans can see him in a bit role in the old Woody Allen film "Bananas" (as a punk who mugs an old lady) ... Karen Wyman, 24 now and mother of a 3-month-old son, is making a vocal comeback, and has Bing Crosby and Bob Hope cheering for her after she resumed in Miami Beach.

Mike Connors in long-term deal

Actor Mike Connors, who had an eight-year run on television as Mannix, has signed a long-term contract with Lorimar Productions to develop a new series.

The deal also includes development of feature films for TV and theaters.

Chamberlain role

Richard Chamberlain will star in "The Last Wave," a feature film which will start shooting in Australia next month.

YOUR HOROSCOPE
by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday
YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: This year's scramble for your fair share of the good things in the world results in self-reliance. You're more on your own than has been the case for a long time and, by the same token, less burdened by responsibility for others' welfare. Relationships reflect selective judgment. Today's natives use their intellectual curiosity in applied science, horticulture. Those born this year will come to large novel projects in the arts, scientific research.

ARIES (Mar. 21-April 19): Newly arrived competitors jockey the scene, make more of a hubbub than expected. You're due praise, likely won't get it. Home life runs smoother.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Maintenance ranges on economic levels from the proverbial stitch that saves nine to unfajor renovation. Sell off unproductive or outdated equipment, supplies.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Among cheerful stories is a factual news that shows how to achieve special advantage. Don't just talk, move fast! Share cultural interests but not extra expense.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Many questions are raised, objections made to proposed actions. You get away ahead by doing your own positive, right. Romantic notions find subtle encouragement.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Essential information turns up in the most unlikely places, but in confusing context. Being suitable people together for cooperation, revival of prospects.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Suspend your propensity to look for flawed details. People who should be familiar with local customs draw a blank. Need suggestions, guidance. Help out.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Old obligations come due. Must be seen to. Don't waste time on ceremony. Amend errors, serve self-interest. Conditions ease late in day; you can unbend a bit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Burn off excess energy via experiments, floating trial balloons, but settle down to serious business by noon. Focus on ironing out a few best items.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do your own thinking. Advisors that are too close to you lack objectivity. They adopt your outlook, or you discount theirs. New contacts are useful.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): People who usually lend a hand are too busy to be of much assistance on jobs with priority. Find a point to admire if asked to comment on somebody's work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Size up the current situation, estimate what you can do, choose a creative approach. Avoid important decisions yet; work out the background carefully.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Back to weekly routine, work for a relief of sorts. Opening for good earnings, interesting projects are underway. If you're late, associates get in first.

She read Classified Ads when little Billy's mother was a baby ... just as her daughter reads Independent, Press-Telegram Classified Ads today. That's because now, as it was in the past, there's no better place to find good buys in things baby needs ... cribs, strollers, chests, play pens, high chairs, baby scales, toys, diaper service — and, even a baby sitter when Grandmother is busy.

Turn to today's Classified Ads and see how many items and services you find to make life happier and easier for you and your baby.

career at

REALTY COMPANY

BERNIE JONES
Vice-President, Gen. Sales Mgr.

WHY A CAREER AT REX L. HODGES REALTY?

Answer: You have more going for you. "IT IS JUST THAT SIMPLE," stated Bernie Jones, Vice-President/General Manager. Rex L. Hodges Realty has been in business since 1929. That's over 48 years in the Long Beach/Orange County basin. We are a "Family of Companies." Today more than ever before we all value a family relationship. Our family extends from Robert C. Westmyer, owner of Rex L. Hodges Realty, to one of our newer salespersons Steve Smith, who recently joined Rex L. Hodges at our Westminster Village office. Steve formerly owned a large hamburger franchise. Everyday we are striving to make "Our Company" a better Company.

The Real Estate market is pretty well saturated in every city, so there has to be reason to choose REX L. HODGES REALTY and after 48 years in this business we know what the differences are: We also feel the programs we offer to salespersons, and also to the customers, who will be selling their homes, and the persons who will purchase homes in 1977 will enable you, the salesman, to provide 100% coverage. When Rex L. Hodges Realty offers the services, we are aware we have that extra edge coupled with 48 years of sound, confident service. A solid family atmosphere and you have a winner.

JUST LOOK AT THE DIFFERENCES

Growth: We recently opened our new Seal Beach office on Pacific Coast Highway. Juanita Newman, the manager, is a fine example of the great opportunity at Rex L. Hodges company.

If management is in your plans, plan a career with Rex L. Hodges Realty.

In 1976 Rex L. Hodges Realty purchased Pacific Bay Real Estate in Northern California serving the East Bay area including Oakland, Berkeley and Richmond. Now! That's growth, and we are negotiating with others at this very time.

Equity Loans! Your customers can take advantage of a "no payment" part of their equity loan and repay when their home has sold.

Training and Counseling: A professional never stops training and retraining. A license allows you to sell. Rex L. Hodges Realty shows you how to match the right buyer and the right home, and how to market that owner's home to get it sold. Real Estate is a very rewarding profession and yet there are many different problems that arise, and when a Company has fellows like Earl J. Christensen, Vice-President, and Terry Mulholland, Vice-President, you have two of the finest minds in General Real Estate in the State of California. When you join Rex L. Hodges you join our family and families seem to have a way of overcoming any or all of the difficulties that arise.

Trade in Program: An absolute must in the 70's. Our Trade-In Program is not some hit or miss proposition. It works. We pioneered "Trade-Ins" in 1929. Think about it.

H & H Development Co. H & H Development Co. is a subsidiary of Rex L. Hodges, a part of our family. We build apartments, condominiums, shopping centers and medical offices. We will also build for your clients on their buildable lots. All H & H properties are covered by a Builder's One Year Warranty. Another good reason to start your career at Rex L. Hodges.

HOME WARRANTIES:

When you purchase your next home specify you want an American Home Shield Warranty. (*This one year warranty protects your home against the defects or malfunction of the major systems, appliances, and hot water heater, garbage disposal, dishwasher and last but not least waste and drainline stoppages). So call the nearest Rex L. Hodges office and specify that you want an American Home Shield One Year Warranty and leave the shopping to us. When you sell your home please remember that when your home is listed with Rex L. Hodges Realty, if you so desire, your home will be covered by American Home Shield Warranty. Ask the salesperson about the details. Better still call and we will deliver the brochures with information. Well, we ran out of space, but I hope that maybe we have told the Rex L. Hodges story and remember there is a difference when you join our family.

Cordially yours,
Bernie Jones

MARK TRAIL

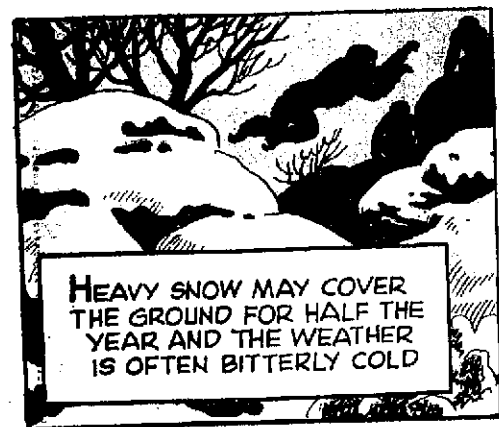

by Ed Dodd and Tom Hill

ON THE STORMY WINDSWEEP TIP OF HONSHU ISLAND IN JAPAN LIVES A SMALL BAND OF MONKEYS

THESE HARDY CREATURES ARE FOUND FARTHER NORTH THAN ANY OTHER PRIMATES

HEAVY SNOW MAY COVER THE GROUND FOR HALF THE YEAR AND THE WEATHER IS OFTEN BITTERLY COLD

DURING THE DAY THEY DESPERATELY HUNT FOR SEEDS, WINTER BUDS AND TREE BARK OR SEARCH THE SEASHORE FOR SHELLFISH AND SEAWEED

ED DODD 3-6 77 TOM HILL

WHEN NIGHT FALLS THESE "SNOW MONKEYS" GATHER IN ROCK CREVICES OR TREE BRANCHES, HUDDLING CLOSE TOGETHER TO KEEP FROM FREEZING!

OFF THE RECORD

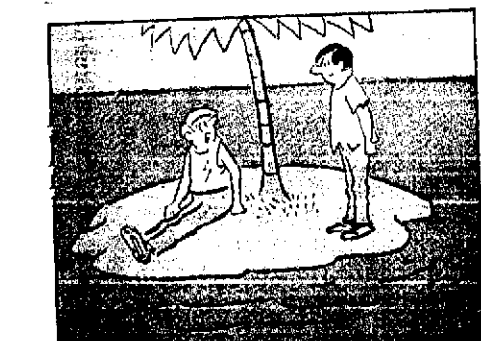

by ED REED

"Business is very slow — people are eating what they catch these days."

"I WOULD get a father who is not afraid he'll warp his child's personality."

"When I think of some of the girls I didn't bother to date..."

Join the Dr Pepper Rookie Soccer Club, and play soccer like the pros.

Here's what you get and how you join:

You get an official membership certificate in the Dr Pepper Rookie Soccer Club, a wallet-size card, and a pocket-size Pro Soccer Guide that explains all the rules of soccer, as well as the history.

You'll get a full-color, 20" x 30" poster that shows all the NASL team logos and a Dr Pepper Rookie Soccer Club Decal, which shows everyone that you're a member of this special club.

You'll also receive a free ticket to a professional soccer game (you must be accompanied by an adult).

You can get all this by just sending us 12 liners from inside the caps of any Regular or Sugar Free Dr Pepper bottles and only $1.00.

If you are between the ages of 6 and 15 years old, you can get your Dr Pepper NASL Rookie Soccer Club membership and official soccer ball now!

Clip this coupon and start saving today. When you have the required number of cap liners, mail to:

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

From Shakespeare to TV comedies — Stiers does it all

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

David Ogden Stiers has a way of standing out in almost any role in which he appears.

And it's not just that he stands 6-foot-3, which is enough to make most other performers look up to him.

He's a skillful actor, and has the knack of getting the most out of a part.

Until he was discovered by television a couple of years ago, David had been sharpening his skills on the stage from California to Broadway.

He has quickly become a much-wanted TV performer, especially for situation comedies. But he prefers doing classical drama.

Oh, the money and the exposure provided by the tube are nice, and he's very happy in his work, he told me at lunch the other day at Au Petit cafe on Vine Street in Hollywood. It's just that he gets more satisfaction out of doing the classics.

"What I'd like is to be able to afford to work at theaters that can't afford to pay me much," said the 34-year-old actor. "Perhaps television will enable me to do both."

As he intermittently puffed on a cigarette with a distinctive fragrance — "It's an Indonesian cigarette and is two-thirds cloves" — Stiers pointed out that he has been much busier since turning to television "than I ever would have dreamed."

HIS FIRST TV role came in an episode of "Kojak," but most of his appearances have been in comedy series. He was one of the stars of the CBS comedy series "Doc" in its second season last fall as the do-it-by-the-book director of the clinic at which Dr. Joe Bogert (Barnard Hughes) worked. Unfortunately, "Doc" failed to survive the surgery of a revamped format and cast, and it died early in the season.

The tall, blue-eyed actor with thinning brown hair also has been seen in three episodes of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," as a stuttering executive, and in "Rhoda" and other shows.

He played an attorney in the pilot movie for "Charlie's Angels," and, he said, could have been a regular in that series, "but I would have had to sign for seven years."

Next fall, David disclosed, he'll be a regular on the popular CBS comedy series "M-A-S-H."

"I've just gotten the word on that," he said. "I'll play a physician from Boston — a major, the second in command."

Coming up soon will be a role in a Neil Simon movie for the theaters titled "Cheap Detective," with such stars as Peter Falk, Louise Fletcher, Marsha Mason and Madeline Kahn.

"I can't tell you what a blessed career I've had," David remarked. "I have auditioned for 11 roles, and I have been offered each part."

"I'm that unusual person, a happy actor. I'm not only happy, I even love my agent. Have you ever known an actor who liked his agent?"

His agent, "the only one I've ever had," is Susan Smith. "She saw me doing classical drama in New York, and came to me."

STIERS LEAVES the comedy field for a performance in the two-hour drama special "A Circle of Children," which airs on CBS (Channel 2 locally) at 9 p.m. Thursday. He stars with Jane Alexander, Rachel Roberts, Nan Martin and young Matthew Laborteaux.

The drama, which is being recommended for viewing by the Mental Health Association, deals with the relations between students and teachers in a private school for emotionally disturbed children, including autistic youngsters. David plays Dan Franklin, one of the teachers.

Miss Alexander portrays Mary MacCracken, upon whose autobiographical book the drama is based. Mary is an affluent society matron who becomes a volunteer teacher at the school.

Miss Roberts plays Helga, a German immigrant with little formal education but a gift for working with the handicapped youngsters, and Miss Martin is the director of the school. Matthew plays one of the children.

"Matthew is a remarkable young actor," noted Stiers. "He's an autistic child himself, whose symptoms have been controlled by a change in his diet." The 10-year-old boy has been acting since he was 4, earned an Emmy nomination for afterschool special, "Papa and Me," and has appeared in a number of other TV shows and many commercials.

DAVID OGDEN STIERS ... in 'A Circle of Children'

"It's a moving, poignant drama that shows that autistic children can be helped," Stiers said. "I give a performance that is no better than adequate — it's not one of my best — but the program is well worth seeing."

DAVID BEGAN his acting career after graduating from North Eugene High School in 1960 (a native of Peoria, Ill., he had moved with his family to Eugene, Ore., when he was 15). He performed with a theater company in Eugene, the California Shakespeare Festival in Santa Clara, the San Francisco Actors Workshop, the Committee Revue and Theater in San Francisco and the Old Globe Theatre Shakespeare Festival in San Diego.

In 1969, after considerable stage experience, he went to New York to enter the Julliard School, where he studied for two years in the drama division. His studies included voice training in both speech and singing — he's a dramatic baritone. David has a love of classical music that matches his love of classical drama, and while at Julliard he narrated and conducted portions of Saint-Saens' "The Carnival of Animals" at Lincoln Center's Alice Tully Hall. He collects classical music records, and believes he has one of the most extensive private collections on the West Coast.

On Broadway, Stiers created the role of Feldman the Magnificent in the musical "The Magic Show"; portrayed Buck Mulligan in "Ulysses in Nighttown" with Zero Mostel; and appeared with John Houseman's City Center Acting Company in "Three Sisters," "Beggars' Opera," "Measure for Measure" and "Scapin."

With the acting company, Stiers said, "I carried 19 plays in my brain — we just needed two hours' notice."

The actor is directing John Osborne's "Look Back in Anger" at the 44-seat Metrose Theater in Hollywood. It opened Thursday night and will run Thursday through Sunday for five weeks.

David is unmarried, lives in the Hollywood Hills and doesn't own a car. Last year he took a spill on his bicycle while riding down a hill, and required 62 stitches in his face.

That didn't stop the big guy, though. Not only does he cycle, skateboard and body-surf, now he's into hang gliding.

Wonder what Shakespeare would have thought of that?

Kaplan denies reports of trouble in classroom

By KAY GARDELLA
New York News

NEW YORK — Reports that the natives are getting restless on the "Welcome Back, Kotter" series is just talk, according to Gabe Kaplan, the man who keeps the sweatshops in line on the ABC comedy series.

"Sure," he admits. "Ron Pallila, who plays Horshack, is trying out a new pilot. But I don't think it will go. I think it would be a mistake if he left the series now. In fact, the time isn't right for any of the cast to leave the show. Maybe in a couple of years it will be OK."

Gabe, who not only stars in the show but helped create and develop the idea with executive producer James Komack, has been the target of endless gossip suggesting he and John Travolta, who plays Vinnie Barbarino, have been waging a tug-of-war to determine who is the kingpin on the series.

TRAVOLTA, a New Jersey lad, has signed a lucrative film deal — he was recently seen in the TV film "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble" — and he has a hit record, "Let Her In," which has contributed to making him a full-time millionaire.

"I think John is a terrific actor and has helped the show immensely," said Kaplan. He went on to say, "If there is anybody on the show I'm close to, it's John. We're the best of friends."

"Despite his success, he's still the same as the day he first walked onto the show. He doesn't act like a guy with a million-dollar contract for three movies. Neither John nor I have said any of the things you may have read. John's career is growing and he deserves it."

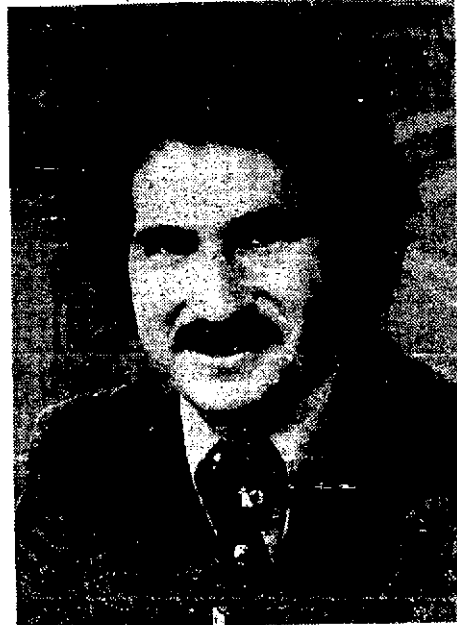

SO, FOR THAT matter, is Gabe Kaplan's. Last Tuesday night on an episode of NBC's "Police Story" entitled "One of Our Cops is Crazy," he tackled his first dramatic role. He waited a long time for the right one to come along, he said.

"The character I play is different from Kotter but someone I felt confident I could play," said Gabe before the show aired. "He's a compulsive narcotics officer who'll do anything to catch heroin dealers or dope pushers. He operates almost like a criminal. He looks for people's weaknesses and plays on them to get information."

"He even travels around in a car with a female mannequin and pretends they're lovers so people on the street making a deal will think it's just a guy and a girl in a car necking. They won't pay any attention to him. He does this so often his superior officer sends him up for a psychiatric examination."

ACCORDING TO Kaplan, the episode was based on an actual cop case in Los Angeles. This is true of many of the "Police Story" plots.

GABRIEL KAPLAN

For Kaplan, it was a big step. So, too, was "Welcome Back, Kotter," when he said he'd star in it after having had a hand in its creation.

He was a standup monologist in nightclubs, like the late Freddie Prinze, and had never worked with other people before. He fully realizes that the success of his series depends upon the sweatshops, and not just himself.

"I NEVER FELT I was the only star of the show, as some have accused me of saying. When I came up with the concept I knew there had been other teacher shows before like 'Mr. Novack' where the teacher was the main character."

"I wanted one where the pupils were equally as important. As it has developed, the kids have become very real to the public."

They've changed, too, according to Kaplan. Horshack is not just a mascot for the guys. His intelligence is showing. Barbarino is showing his vulnerability. And they're getting deeper into Washington and Epstein's lives.

"I'D ALSO like to add a girl sweatshop to the series," said Gabe, who gave us some news. He's getting married this summer to a 20-year-old aspiring actress named Lee Walsh. "I never wanted a monogamous situation but I'm 31 and now I want a family. So I've decided to take the step."

Gabe is not into drugs, alcohol or even tobacco. "I'm into health," he said. A former friend of Freddie Prinze, he said he thought the star's suicide was spur-of-the-moment.

"Had the gun jammed it probably would never have happened again. Freddie was like that. Once when we were shooting 'Welcome Back, Kotter' at NBC Burbank Freddie was there. He spent three weeks throwing pies at everybody. I asked him why he kept doing it, and he said: 'It's something to do, man.'"

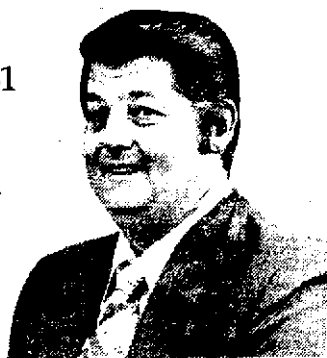

"Freddie liked to play it cool. I think his suicide was strictly an impulsive act. I don't think he meant to do it."

Kaplan denies reports of trouble in classroom

By KAY GARDELLA
New York News

NEW YORK — Reports that the natives are getting restless on the "Welcome Back, Kotter" series is just talk, according to Gabe Kaplan, the man who keeps the sweatshops in line on the ABC comedy series.

"Sure," he admits. "Ron Pallio, who plays Horshack, is trying out a new pilot. But I don't think it will go. I think it would be a mistake if he left the series now. In fact, the time isn't right for any of the cast to leave the show. Maybe in a couple of years it will be OK."

Gabe, who not only stars in the show but helped create and develop the idea with executive producer James Komack, has been the target of endless gossip suggesting he and John Travolta, who plays Vinnie Barbarino, have been waging a tug-of-war to determine who is the kingpin on the series.

TRAVOLTA, a New Jersey lad, has signed a lucrative film deal — he was recently seen in the TV film "The Boy in the Plastic Bubble" — and he has a hit record, "Let Her In," which has contributed to making him a full-time millionaire.

"I think John is a terrific actor and has helped the show immensely," said Kaplan. He went on to say, "If there is anybody on the show I'm close to, it's John. We're the best of friends."

"Despite his success,

Wilson flips for public TV

By MALCOLM N. CARTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Flip Wilson wouldn't crack a joke.

"It is not my intent to be funny because we have a serious purpose," the comedian allowed, adding that being funny was serious business anyway.

The "business" at hand, however, was his job as host of public television's "Festival '77." It's a 15-day orgy of special programming, fund raising and a 12-city tour starting today in Washington and ending in Dallas.

"FLIP HAS got his work cut out for him," said Lawrence K. Gross-man, president of the Public Broadcasting Service. He meant the $13.5 million fund-raising goal, which includes $10 million from new subscribers, matching grants, underwriting and direct mail contributions.

To lure contributors, public television stations will air at various times during the period such inducement as these:

— "Pleasure at Her Majesty's — Python & Friends Comedy Special," a gala benefit in which some of Great Britain's best comedy teams and satirists hold forth at Her Majesty's Theatre in London.

— "Bar Mitzvah Boy," billed as a bittersweet comedy play about the coming to manhood of a 13-year-old boy.

— "Sesame Street at Night?" with Gene Shalit, Lena Horne and others appearing.

— "Rock Follies," a live-part British import in which three young actresses have a go at rock stardom.

— "The Glory of Their Times," a baseball documentary by Bud Greenspan, whose "Olympiad" series graced PBX last year.

— "The Andersonville Trial," a rebroadcast of the Emmy-winning Civil War drama directed by George C. Scott.

— "Austin City Limits — Country Music and Then Some," starring the likes of Earl Scruggs, Willie Nelson and the Amazing Rhythm Aces.

— "Asmat — The Cannibal Craftsmen of New Guinea," a documentary about a tribe of head-hunters still living a Stone Age existence in the jungles.

"I'M JUST trying to make a little effort on my part to show appreciation for what I like," said Wilson. He is a man of many parts. Besides being an award-winning entertainer, he is also an avid golfer and was chairman of the American Cancer Society's 1976 crusade.

The father of four children said he has enjoyed the benefits of the country and now feels an obligation to return those benefits through public service.

"This year I think public broadcasting is a way of saying thanks to everyone," Wilson said. "It's not a big deal, and it's something I want to do."

'Number Our Days' is Oscar nominee

"Number Our Days," a film by KCET producer Lynne Littman, has been nominated for an Academy Award for Best Documentary: Short Subject.

Littman's half-hour film, which aired last October on KCET's "28 Tonight" series, is based on the field work of anthropologist Barbara Myerhoff, who studied and worked with a group of elderly Jews living in Venice, Calif.

"Number Our Days" is a portrait of these old people, who have built their lives around the Israel Levin Senior Adult Center in Venice.

Got a TV question?

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight News Service

Q. My mother says "Starky and Hutch" is going off the air because they don't get along. Is that true? —D.K.

A. If every show with less than friend costars went off the air, there wouldn't be much left. Word that Paul Michael Glasey ("Starky") and David Soul ("Hutch") aren't getting along surfaced not long ago.

As long as they have contracts for the show and the show is a hit, you can bet they'll both be around even if it takes a lot of acting on camera to look like friends.

Recently, another TV twosome came close to splitting. Cindy Williams, Shirley of ABC's "Laverne and Shirley," decided she was getting the short end of the stick on the show, what with costar Penny Marshall being the sister of creator-producer Garry Marshall. She was ready to walk out until some changes were made.

Disillusioning as it may be, even if actors are friendly on the set, working on a show is just a job to most of them. There is probably less off-camera socializing among actors than among co-workers in most jobs.

Program director

Bob Hamilton has been named program director of K-EARTH Radio in Los Angeles. It was announced by Allan D. Chlowitz, vice president and general manager of the station. Hamilton comes to K-EARTH from WFL in Philadelphia where he has been program director.

Q. You said Harold Gould never played Ron Howard's father in "Happy Days." Wrong. He did. It was in a segment of "Love, American Style." —K.L.

A. Viewer memories — helped by recent "Love, American Style" reruns — are better than TV's records. Gould was in the "Love" segment that inspired "Happy Days." But Tom Bosley is the only one to play Ron's dad in the ABC series.

Q. The best thing I've seen on TV this season was "Sybil." Will Joanne Woodward be doing any more TV? —D.L.B.

A. Woodward will costar with Laurence Olivier in a TV adaptation of William Inge's "Come Back, Little Sheba." It was produced in England in early February, and NBC says it will be seen in the U.S. later this season.

Making her dramatic TV debut in the play is Carrie Fisher, daughter of Debbie Reynolds and Eddie Fisher. Carrie's best known for her role as Lee Grant's daughter in "Shampoo."

Q. What will happen to "Chico and the Man" since the death of Freddie Prinze? Will they end the show, have reruns all the time, or will they have Tony Orlando do the show? —B.K.

A. NBC had five shows ready to be aired at the time of Prinze's suicide Jan. 29 and announced that the programs would be shown after editing to make sure no "tasteless" references to death were in the dialogue. Four more "Chico" shows have been taped to complete the 1976-1977 season.

Producer Jimmy K-mack and NBC did not replace Prinze. Mention will be made of Chico leaving the garage. As for next season, there's no decision.

Yet, NBC naturally wants the show to go on. One NBC executive said, "Chico" is the last comedy hit NBC has had."

Using Orlando is a thought — though no one in charge has brought it up. Tony and Freddie got a lot of TV mileage out of their resemblance and similar backgrounds. But any replacement will do a different character, not Chico.

Got a TV question?

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight News Service

Q. My mother says "Starky" and "Hutch" is going off the air because they don't get along. Is that true? —D.K.

A. If every show with less than friend costars went off the air, there wouldn't be much left. Word that Paul Michael Glaser ("Starky") and David Soul ("Hutch") aren't getting along surfaced not long ago.

As long as they have contracts for the show and the show is a hit, you can bet they'll both be around even if it takes a lot of acting on camera to look like friends.

Recently, another TV twosome came close to splitting. Cindy Williams, Shirley of ABC's "Laverne and . . ." decided she was getting the short end of the stick on the show, what with costar Penny Marshall being the sister of creator-producer Garry Marshall. She was ready to walk out until some changes were made.

Disillusioning as it may be, even if actors are friendly on the set, working on a show is just a job to most of them. There is probably less off-camera socializing among actors than among co-workers in most jobs.

Program director

Bob Hamilton has been named program director of K-EARTH Radio in Los Angeles. It was announced by Allan D. Chlowitz, vice president and general manager of the station. Hamilton comes to K-EARTH from WFI in Philadelphia where he has been program director.

Producer Jimmy Korman and NBC did not replace Prince. Mention will be made of Chico leaving the garage. As for next season, there's no decision.

SHIRLEY MacLAINE returns to television in a new special for CBS, "The Shirley MacLaine Special: Where Do We Go From Here?," at 10 p.m. Saturday on Ch. 2.

Shirley's back with new special

By BETTELOU
PETERSON
Knight News Service

Shirley MacLaine will be seen in her annual TV special for CBS at 10 p.m. Saturday.

In a recent interview, she perched on a sofa, legs casually tucked up under her, close-cropped red hair curling a bit around her ears and her freckled face touched only with a trace of lipstick for color. And she talked.

"It's very good," she said of the TV show with a grin. "It's called 'Where Do We Go From Here' and it's a look at the future of entertainment." George Schlatter and Digby Wolfe (two of the inventors of "Laugh-In") are producer and writer.

"George and I have wanted to work together for 10 or 15 years. Whenever we meet at parties, we'd sit in a corner and talk about what we'd do if we did a TV show together.

"He gives me a hernia, he makes me laugh so hard. He's so outrageously vulgar."

"But," she added, "not on the TV show."

The guests are not the usual found on TV variety shows, she said. First there is the Ballet Trockadero De Monte Carlo, a male group in female ballet attire. They are "so good you have to be quite sophisticated about ballet to appreciate some of their satire," Shirley said.

A Mexican cartoonist, an "electric" orchestra and laser light patterns complete a look at the future.

It's offbeat, she admits. But her previous efforts for CBS were not ordinary TV variety fare either. "If They Could See Me Now," in 1974, had guest Carol Burnett in a movie satire but the material, most from Shirley's nightclub act, was specially written and had few familiar numbers. The show won an Emmy.

"Gypsy in My Soul" in 1976 costarred Lucille Ball who, like Shirley, started her career in the chorus in a salute to the "gypsies," the girls and boys of the chorus line. That show won an Emmy, too.

CBS was delighted with the shows, which also had high ratings, and signed Shirley for three years. This week's show is the first in the new contract.

The CBS specials weren't her first foray into TV, but Shirley says (and hopes) that only she and trivia buffs remember "Shirley's World," which lasted a few weeks on ABC in 1971. She was supposed to play a photo-journalist who found adventure around the world. It turned out to be "Perils of Shirley" and she was happy to see it die.

Johnny Carson's slip showing, he'll start doing show live

By JAY SHARBUTT

AP Television Writer

Consider: On March 15, at 8:30 p.m., Johnny Carson starts doing his "Tonight" show live at NBC's emporium in Burbank. Now consider some A.C. Nielsen Co. figures.

A comparison of the show's ratings from September 1974 to late January 1975, and from September 1976 to late January this year, shows a drop of almost two ratings points, or 1.1 million homes.

True, Carson still rules the late-night roost. The latest September-January figures — the most recent available averages, Nielsen says — have him leading second-place CBS by more than two ratings points.

BUT IS HIS switch from taped to live shows an NBC move to dramatically boost those "Tonight" ratings?

No, says Robert T. Howard, head of NBC-TV; it's simply that Carson wants to do the show live as a change of performing pace. And NBC is game because it thinks it'll help the show compete better.

Howard said he doesn't think the show's ratings drop means that Carson, after 14-plus years on "Tonight," finally is slipping.

"What's happened is that the competition's really improved," he says.

HE MEANS ABC's switch 1½ years ago from late-night specials to a mix of cop show reruns, movies and one special a week, and CBS' shift this season from movies to reruns of such series as "Columbo" and "Kojak."

He concedes these changes have taken some of Carson's audience, but said NBC's decision to go live with "Tonight" — which began that way in 1954 — was because Carson asked for it, not because of any ratings woe.

Because of the time difference, when "Tonight" goes live, the West Coast still will get it on tape at 11:30 each weeknight.

CARSON occasionally is taken to task by critics because he gets more than 12 weeks of vacation each year and is absent Monday nights, when a guest host fills in for him. But he may appear more often now. Those ratings tend to drop when he's off the show for extended periods.

"I think he wants to cut that down a little bit," Howard said, referring to Carson's absences from the show. He had no estimate, though, of how much the silver-haired star will reduce his absentee rate.

But he said when Carson took a month off from "Tonight" late last summer, NBC found the ratings had dropped about one point — equal to 712,000 fewer homes — "and we had a lot of complaints from our affiliates."

THE RATINGS went back up upon his return. Howard said, but Carson subsequently felt he'd stayed away too long.

"He sets his own pace there, and he'll be taking a vacation, of course, but I don't think it'll be as long as it was last year," NBC's chief executive said in a phone interview from New York.

Howard was asked about a current Manhattan rumor that Carson, who moved "Tonight" from Fun City to Burbank in May 1972, now wants to move his 90-minute show back there permanently.

"There's no plan to move back to New York," he said, emphasizing that Carson's enthusiasm for the California life remains unabated. "I think it'd be the end of the 'Tonight' show as far as he was concerned if he was told he had to move back to New York."

Is it worth buying a color television?

We're a nation of owners. So why rent an every-day appliance?

But consider a moment. What benefits do you derive from owning a color television? A down payment, and interest charges on the balance while you pay the set off. Or a big cash payment, losing interest from your savings. And forever after, you still have repair bills. Potentially expensive repairs.

Rentacolor changes all that. No down payment. No interest charges. Just our reasonable monthly rental.

And no repair or service bills. None, ever. Rentacolor provides free service and repair by courteous, company-trained technicians. Guaranteed.

Why would anyone want to buy a color television?

Howard said he doesn't think the show's ratings drop means that Carson, after 14-plus years on "Tonight," finally is slipping.

What's happened is that the competition's really improved," he says.

HE MEANS ABC's switch 1½ years ago from late-night specials to a mix of cop show reruns, movies and one special a week, and CBS' shift this season from movies to reruns of such series as "Columbo" and "Kojak."

He concedes these changes have taken some of Carson's audience, but said NBC's decision to go live with "Tonight" —

which began that way in 1954 — was because Carson asked for it, not because of any ratings woe.

Because of the time difference, when "Tonight" goes live, the West Coast still will get it on tape at 11:30 each weeknight.

CARSON occasionally is taken to task by critics because he gets more than 12 weeks of vacation each year and is absent Monday nights, when a guest host fills in for him. But he may appear more often now. Those ratings tend to drop when he's off the show for extended periods.

"I think he wants to cut that down a little bit," Howard said, referring to Carson's absences from the show. He had no estimate, though, of how much the silver-haired star will reduce his absentee rate.

But he said when Carson took a month off from "Tonight" late last summer, NBC found the ratings had dropped about one point — equal to 712,000 fewer homes — "and we had a lot of complaints from our affiliates."

THE RATINGS went back up upon his return. Howard said, but Carson subsequently felt he'd stayed away too long.

"He sets his own pace there, and he'll be taking a vacation, of course, but I don't think it'll be as long as it was last year," NBC's chief executive said in a phone interview from New York.

Howard was asked about a current Manhattan rumor that Carson, who moved "Tonight" from Fun City to Burbank in May 1972, now wants to move his 90-minute show back there permanently. "There's no plan to move back to New York," he said, emphasizing that Carson's enthusiasm for the California life remains unabated. "I think it'd be the end of the 'Tonight' show as far as he was concerned if he was told he had to move back to New York."

BRING THIS COUPON WITH YOU

Is it worth buying a color television?

We're a nation of owners. So why rent an every-day appliance?

But consider a moment. What benefits do you derive from owning a color television? A down payment, and interest charges on the balance while you pay the set off. Or a big cash payment, losing interest from your savings. And forever after, you still have repair bills. Potentially expensive repairs.

Rentacolor changes all that. No down payment. No interest charges, just our reasonable monthly rental.

And no repair or service bills. None, ever. Rentacolor provides free service and repair by courteous, company-trained technicians. Guaranteed.

Why would anyone want to buy a color television?

"BARGAIN" CARPET

CAN COST TOO MUCH

THE TRUTH IS it costs as much to install "cheap" carpet as to custom install the best... and when you buy better carpet it lasts longer — as much as twice the wear. So you really pay less in the long run. We feature famous.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

THE INCOMPARABLE BOOK # 4

Many would have you believe that there are many other inspired scriptures, other than the Bible. When they say this, they mean the very same thing that is meant by the expression "inspired scriptures" as we found in one of our previous articles. They mean that their writings are also from God. These would include such books as the Book of Mormon, Pearl of Great Price, Science and Health, and others. I deny that these writings are from God.

In the first place, they are contradictory to that which is revealed in the Bible. As we learned in a previous article, God's Word—the Truth—does not contradict itself. Hence, these writings could not be from God for we would have God contradicting Himself.

Secondly, the Bible clearly indicates that the above mentioned writings could not be true. For, Jesus told his disciples in John 16:13, "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak from himself; but whatsoever things he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come." How much of the truth did Jesus say the apostles would receive? He said they would receive all the truth from the Spirit. Now if the Book of Mormon and other modern day writings are inspired of God, then one of three things must, of necessity, be true.

1. Jesus didn't know what he was talking about, for he said they would receive all truth.
2. Or, the Holy Spirit didn't do what he was supposed to do when He came. He didn't bring all the truth to the apostles.
3. Or, the apostles didn't do their job in presenting all that the Spirit gave them to say and write.

I am not willing to indict any of these different ones with failure. But if what is said is true, and it is, then we need to give heed to the Bible and the Bible only. For, "the faith" (truth) has been "once for all delivered to the saints" (Jude 1:3).

LUX Audio of America Ltd.
Ultimate High Fidelity Stereo Component

If you're thinking about a new receiver, perhaps you should be thinking about separates.

Today's new receivers are more powerful and versatile than ever. But they're also bigger and heavier. And often less convenient to install than separates. What's more, as you already know, you can't upgrade just part of a receiver. If you now want more power, more flexibility, better specifications and superior sound performance, you should consider a separate amplifier and tuner. The best way to find out is to let us demonstrate LUX amplifiers and tuners. We believe they sound better than anything else we have ever heard. Most of our friends agree. So visit us and hear for yourself. At the very least, you'll enjoy the music.

ONE EXAMPLE OF A LUX "RECEIVER"

T-110 Stereo FM Tuner LUX's latest FM tuner. MOS FET front end. Low section tuning capacitor. Phono input and 300 MC for FM multiplier. Special features include: information, 100% real time display circuit protection, 75-25 microsecond delay switches for use with external Dolby unit.

L-100 Integrated Stereo Amplifier LUX's most powerful 100 watts minimum continuous power per channel into 16 ohms, 20-20,000 Hz, with more than 0.004% total harmonic distortion throughout. Features include: exclusive linear equalizer for custom tailored phono response, variable phono input sensitivity and impedance, three turnover frequency switches for bass and treble, 19 dB retrace volume attenuator for quiet sleep of music, and more.

TV MOVIE TIPS

TODAY

"The Canadians" NOON, Ch. 5 (1961) Robert Ryan, John Dehner. Three Canadian Mounties convince the mighty Sioux who had destroyed Custer, to walk path of peace or be driven back to the U.S.

"Johnny Concho" 7:30 p.m., Ch. 9 (1956) Frank Sinatra, Phyllis Kirk, Keenan Wynn. Regeneration of a cheap, boastful tin-horn.

"The Gambler" 9 p.m., Ch. 7 (1974) James Caan, Paul Sorvino, Lauren Hutton. A hip college professor, with an insatiable desire to gamble, becomes heavily indebted to some casino owners and must raise the cash, or else.

"Wings of Fire" 11:40 p.m., Ch. 2 (1967) Suzanne Pleshette, Lloyd Nolan, Juliet Mills. Thrill-hungry aviatrix discovers only her victory in an upcoming air race can save the small air freight service she runs with her father.

MONDAY

"Howling in the Woods" 6:30 p.m., Ch. 2 (1971) Barbara Eden, Larry Hagman, Vera Miles. A modern horror story in which the marriage of two people deeply in love, is saved by the strange occurrences taking place at a Lake Tahoe Lodge.

"The Wind and the Lion" 9 p.m., Ch. 4 (1975) Sean Connery, Candice Bergen, Brian Keith, John Huston. When a desert chieftain who claims to be the last of the Barbary pirates kidnaps an American widow and her two children, he challenges the resolve of President Teddy Roosevelt.

TUESDAY

"Die, Die, My Darling!" Tallulah Bankhead, Stefanie Powers, Peter Vaughan. Maurice Kaufman. In England, a young girl about to be married visits the mother of her former fiancé who was killed in a car crash. The fanatic woman imprisons her.

"The Naked Runner" 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1967) Frank Sinatra, Peter Vaughan. An American businessman, living in London, is asked by British Intelligence to do a crucial job for them on a trip to East Germany with his young son.

WEDNESDAY

"The Mountain" 2 p.m., Ch. 9 (1956) Spencer Tracy, Robert Wagner, Claire Trevor. Two brothers climb a towering Alpine peak to reach the wreck-age of a crashed airline — one for humane reasons, the other to plunder the dead.

"An Eye for an Eye" 8 p.m., Ch. 2 (1966) Robert Lansing, Slim Pickens. After the murder of his wife and son a bounty hunter teams up with another and they set out to find the killer.

"Mr. Majestyk" 9 p.m., Ch. 2 (1974) Charles Bronson stars as a man who goes his own way against the Syndicate and finds its retaliation fast and brutal.

THURSDAY

"By Love Possessed" 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1961) Lana Turner, Jason Robards. Wealthy attorney's search for himself during a few shock-filled days as his whole life seems to tumble.

"Seawolf" 8 p.m., Ch. 9 (1974) Edward Meeks, Raymond Haymstorf, Beatrice Cardon. The year is 1903. It's the seafaring world of Jack London. A ship passes through the coastal waters off San Francisco. Suddenly there is a collision. Panic spreads through passengers and crew as they scramble for the lifeboats.

"A Circle of Children" 9 p.m., Ch. 2 Jane Alexander stars as an affluent suburbanite whose participation as a volunteer worker among emotionally disturbed children changes the shape of her own life.

FRIDAY

"The Desert Rats" 8 p.m., Ch. 5 (1953) Richard Burton, James Mason. Hard-driving English captain in command of Australian division, forces the desperate men to hold a key outpost against the North African blitzkrieg in WWII.

Q. Who were the wealthiest Presidents of the U.S.A.?
—Dominic Sentore, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Probably George Washington, who owned choice Virginia real estate; Theodore Roosevelt, who left an estate valued at $811,000; Woodrow Wilson, whose estate was valued at $600,000; Herbert Hoover, who left an estate valued at more than $1 million at his death in 1964; and Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose estate came to $1,085,500. Dwight Eisenhower became wealthy via his book "Crusade in Europe," oil investments managed by his friends while he was President and various gifts. John F. Kennedy was the recipient of a multimillion-dollar trust fund from his father. Lyndon Johnson, when one considers the holdings of his wife, Lady Bird, was probably the wealthiest of all U.S. Presidents. In 1943, Lady Bird bought radio station KTBC in Austin, Tex., for $17,500. Over the years, while Johnson was in government, additional radio and TV stations as well as real estate were acquired. In 1963, The Washington Post estimated the value of these holdings at $7 million, and they became worth much more. One reference book with material on the subject is "Facts About the Presidents," by Joseph N. Kane (pages 338-9).

DEAN MARTIN WITH CATHY HAWN, WIFE NO. 3

Q. I have been told that Dean Martin's lawyers will not allow him to marry anyone unless he first gets the girl to sign a pre-nuptial agreement limiting her financial settlement in case of a divorce. Is this true? Did Dean Martin make his last wife, Cathy Hawk, sign such an agreement?—G.D., Los Angeles.

A. Martin's lawyers have advised him to obtain such pre-nuptial agreements. He obtained one from Cathy Hawk before their marriage, and it saved him a fortune at divorce time.

SEN. HOWARD BAKER

TED SORESEN

Q. Did Howard Baker, the Senate Minority Leader, plunge the knife in Ted Sorensen's back because Sorensen has been married three times? Isn't that the real reason Sorensen had to back away from a confirmation fight as director of the Central Intelligence Agency? Also, how much of a tax deduction was Sorensen allowed for contributing his papers to the John F. Kennedy Library?—E. F., Cambridge, Mass.

A. Senator Baker plunged no knife in Sorensen's back. Sorensen removed himself from consideration for the CIA job because he could see a controversy developing that would lead to his defeat. Questions about his character and judgment offended him. In December 1968, after receiving an advance of $200,000 against royalties for his biography "Kennedy," Sorensen contributed his papers to the John F. Kennedy Library. He claimed a deduction of $231,923, of which $89,927 was finally allowed.

Q. I understand that Svetlana Peters, 50, daughter of Soviet dictator Joseph Stalin, lives in Southern California and has changed her name. What is her new name?—A.L., San Diego, Cal.

A. Lana Peters.

Q. When Redd Foxx, the TV and nightclub comic, recently married a Korean girl 20 years his junior, he was asked in Las Vegas where he had met his 34-year-old beauty. He is supposed to have given an unprintable answer. Can you reveal it?—F.K., Henderson, Ky.

A. It wasn't at all unprintable. Foxx simply said, "One day I opened my wallet and there she was." Yun Chi Chung, born in Korea but a resident of Los Angeles, is Foxx's third wife.

Q. Who is the oldest living great painter in the world today?—Bonnie Nathan, Deal, N.J.

A. Likely candidate: Marc Chagall, 90, Russian-born, naturalized French citizen whose works include the Metropolitan Opera House murals in New York City and the ceiling of the Paris Opera.

MARC CHAGALL

Q. Bob Haldeman, Richard Nixon's chief of staff, urged Nixon to give blanket pardons to everyone involved in the Watergate scandal. Why didn't Nixon, before his resignation, pardon his pals and prevent them from being convicted as felons?—C. Glenn, Newport Beach, Cal.

A. We will have to wait for Nixon's explanation, scheduled for publication in 1977. Most probably Nixon was afraid of pardoning some 20 people since it would reveal the extent of corruption and illegality in his Administration.

Q. Was the late Humphrey Bogart a wife-beater? I mean, did such actresses as Helen Menken, Mary Phillips, Mayo Methot and Lauren Bacall—who were married to Bogey—permit that sort of roughhouse?—Nellie Mae Young, Charleston, S.C.

A. Mayo Methot permitted it.

MICHAEL CAINE, DAUGHTER NATASHA, WIFE SHAKIRA

Q. Michael Caine, the actor, has an Indian wife named Shakira. They also have a child, Natasha. Does the child look more British or more Indian? Also, how old is she?—F.T., Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A. Natasha is 3, looks half-and-half.

Q. Who were the wealthiest Presidents of the U.S.A.?
—Dominic Sentore, Jersey City, N.J.

A. Probably George Washington, who owned choice Virginia real estate; Theodore Roosevelt, who left an estate valued at $811,000; Woodrow Wilson, whose estate was valued at $600,000; Herbert Hoover, who left an estate valued at more than $1 million at his death in 1964; and Franklin D. Roosevelt, whose estate came to $1,085,500. Dwight Eisenhower became wealthy via his book "Crusade in Europe," oil investments managed by his friends while he was President and various gifts. John F. Kennedy was the recipient of a multimillion-dollar trust fund from his father. Lyndon Johnson, when one considers the holdings of his wife, Lady Bird, was probably the wealthiest of all U.S. Presidents. In 1943, Lady Bird bought radio station KTBC in Austin, Tex., for $17,500. Over the years, while Johnson was in government, additional radio and TV stations as well as real estate were acquired. In 1963, The Washington Post estimated the value of these holdings at $7 million, and they became worth much more. One reference book with material on the subject is "Facts About the Presidents," by Joseph N. Kane (pages 338-9).

DEAN MARTIN WITH CATHY HAWN, WIFE NO. 3

Q. I have been told that Dean Martin's lawyers will not allow him to marry anyone unless he first gets the girl to sign a pre-nuptial agreement limiting her financial settlement in case of a divorce. Is this true? Did Dean Martin make his last wife, Cathy Hawn, sign such an agreement?—C.D., Los Angeles.

A. Martin's lawyers have advised him to obtain such pre-nuptial agreements. He obtained one from Cathy Hawn before their marriage, and it saved him a fortune at divorce time.

SEN. HOWARD BAKER

TED SORESEN

Q. Did Howard Baker, the Senate Minority Leader, plunge the knife in Ted Sorensen's back because Sorensen has been married three times? Isn't that the real reason Sorensen had to back away from a confirmation fight as director of the Central Intelligence Agency? Also, how much of a tax deduction was Sorensen allowed for contributing his papers to the John F. Kennedy Library?—E.F., Cambridge, Mass.

A. Senator Baker plunged no knife in Sorensen's back. Sorensen removed himself from consideration for the CIA job because he could see a controversy developing that would lead to his defeat. Questions about his character and judgment offended him. In December 1968, after receiving an advance of $200,000 against royalties for his biography "Kennedy," Sorensen contributed his papers to the John F. Kennedy Library. He claimed a deduction of $231,923, of which $89,927 was finally allowed.

WELFARE FACTS AND MYTHS

Is the Archie Bunker belief that all welfare clients live better than working people accurate?

Not according to a coalition of 18 major private social service agencies in New York City, where researchers recently published a report on the "Myths and Realities of Welfare in New York."

The notion that welfare clients are well-off is absurd, says the report.

"The maximum monthly welfare grant in New York City for a family of four, not including rent allowance, is $258, or $14.88 per week for each family member's basic necessities....A survey of welfare mothers in New York City in 1974 found that 56% were spending less for food than the cost of a nutritionally adequate diet; 86% of the families reported running out of food at the end of most check periods; and 41% said that their families experienced varying degrees of hunger at all times....More than 60% of the welfare clients in New York City are children under the age of 18 who do not enjoy the advantages afforded their peers in working families."

The popular misconception that all welfare recipients are lazy is widespread.

Says the report: "...only 3% of people receiving welfare are able to hold a job. Most clients are young children, mothers who try to care for them, and people with severe health problems. The few able-bodied adults who receive welfare are nearly all on the rolls because they couldn't find jobs."

AUDREY HEPBURN

TEAMING AUDREY & TATUM

Word out of Hollywood is that Audrey Hepburn has been signed to play Tatum O'Neal's mother in a "five-handkerchief tear-jerker" called "Six

TATUM O'NEAL

Weeks." It's about a 10-year-old child dying of leukemia while mama is living it up with a Washington, D.C., politico. Audrey and Tatum will each receive at least $750,000 if they make the film.

QUIET, GENERAL!

Gen. Robert Close, commander of Belgium's 16th Armored Division, has been ordered to zip his lip.

The general, who recently lectured at the NATO Defense College in Rome, made the mistake of giving his honest opinion on the Soviets versus the NATO nations in war.

According to Close, it would take the Soviets and their allies about 48 hours to overrun West Germany.

Close, who was a member of the Belgian wartime resistance and spent three years in concentration camps, is the author of "Defenceless Europe." He asserts that Warsaw Pact forces could advance to the Rhine River so quickly that NATO could never retaliate with nuclear bombs, for fear of killing West German civilians.

TARGETS

Two Georgia law firms that newsmen will keep their eagle eyes focused upon during the Carter Administration are King & Spalding in Atlanta and Langford, Pope & Bailey in Calhoun.

The first produced Charley Kirbo, Griffin Bell, Jack Watson and other Carter cronies. The second is the one in which Carter's son Jack practices law along with his father-in-law.

CACTUS THIEVES

Cactus thieves are plundering the California and Arizona deserts, stealing cacti to sell to landscape gardeners.

Some officials estimate that 20% of Arizona's cacti has already been illegally removed, disturbing the biological balance of the deserts.

RAILROAD SECRETARIES

The German Federal Railroad System really knows how to treat businessmen. On trips to Hamburg, Munich, Frankfurt and other large cities, it employs 75 attractive young women who work as typists, stenographers, interpreters. They also sew and nurse when the need arises.

The average age of these women is 23, and they work aboard 39 intercity and 21 trans-Europe express trains equipped with secretarial compartments and switchboards.

FOURTH FRENCH N-SUB

Jimmy Carter calls for a quick halt to the proliferation of nuclear weapons, and most of the world's statesmen give lip service to the same desire. But this has not prevented France from putting its fourth nuclear submarine, Indomitable, into active service.

A fifth nuclear sub, Thunderer, under construction, is scheduled to enter service in September 1979.

The Indomitable is the first French nuclear sub to carry new M-20—sea-to-ground strategic ballistic missiles equipped with nuclear warheads. The M-20 missiles have a range of more than 1500 miles. The Indomitable boasts a new nuclear engine which uses highly enriched uranium and pressurized natural water and consumes less fuel than previous reactors. Its top speed is faster than 20 knots.

To offer proper nuclear deterrence, most nations believe they must have the capability of delivering nuclear bombs via land (silos), air (bombers) and sea (submarines).

THE LATE PRINCE WILLIAM OF GLOUCESTER

LOVE AFFAIR REVEALED

Prince William of Gloucester, a cousin of Queen Elizabeth II of Great Britain, had a two-year love affair with an attractive Hungarian divorcée in Tokyo before he was killed at age 30 in a flying accident on Aug. 28, 1972.

The London Daily Express recently named the woman as Zsuzui Starkloff but did not reveal her age or whereabouts. It did point out, however, that the affair was "traumatic for the entire British Royal Family," since it recalled the love affair between American divorcée Wallis Simpson and King Edward VIII, who abdicated the British throne in 1936.

According to The Ex-

ZSUZUI STARKLOFF

press, Prince William met Zsuzui in 1968 when he was a second secretary at the British embassy in Tokyo. The British ambassador, Sir John Pilcher, cautioned the prince against the affair. But William and Zsuzui continued until he left Tokyo in 1970 to take over the family's 2500-acre farm in England.

William's mother, Princess Alice, invited her son's sweetheart to England and treated her well but explained that marriage was an impossibility, whereupon Zsuzui left and never saw her prince again.

A biography of Prince William, revealing the romantic details, will probably be published in this country later in the year.

NEW TV SERIES

The British Broadcasting Corporation, which has produced such outstanding TV series as "America," with Alistair Cooke, "Civilisation," with Sir Kenneth Clark, and "The Ascent of Man," with the late Jacob Bronowski, is currently telecasting a 13-part series on the rise of the industrial society during the last 200 years.

It is titled "The Age of Uncertainty" and stars John Kenneth Galbraith, the liberal economist who retired recently as Warburg Professor of Economics at Harvard. Galbraith, a leading Democrat, served as U. S. Ambassador to India during the John F. Kennedy Administration.

Galbraith is a teacher by profession, and his lectures on economic theories call for a proliferation of charts and audiovisual aids, which some British viewers complain about.

"The Age of Uncertainty" is more informative than entertaining and much harder going for the viewer than the previous BBC documentaries exported to this country.

Youths protest increasing unemployment. Of all jobless Americans, half are under 25; in the inner cities, where the problem is acute, masses of unemployed young are becoming discouraged and dependent or resorting to crime.

Senate Bill No. 1— Jobs for Youth

by Sen. Charles Mathias Jr. (R., Md.)

WASHINGTON, D.C.

"S 1" used to be a code number for a bill providing a harsh revision of the U.S. criminal code.

Now S.1 identifies a new jobs and economic growth bill I introduced on the first day of this 95th Congress.

America today is raising young people in the hundreds of thousands who have seldom, if ever, held a job. Almost half of the 7.8 million unemployed Americans are 24 or younger; unemployment among teenagers has been on the rise for 20 years and is running now at 20 percent.

In the inner cities, where poverty and decay persist even in the best of times, the effects of high unemployment are devastating. Among black teenagers, who are concentrated largely in the cities, unemployment has held at 25 percent or more throughout the past decade, surging in the past two years to epidemic proportions. The Bureau of Labor reports an unemployment rate of 36.1 percent for black teenagers, as against 18.1 for whites the same age. The National Urban League believes the figure for blacks exceeds 60 percent.

Unemployment among the urban young has had grave consequences for all Americans. There is no longer any doubt that chronic unemployment feeds urban crime. And nearly half of all violent crimes are committed by juveniles. Crime menaces all of us: the poor, the elderly, the shopkeeper, the suburban commuter. High crime rates drive both the black and white middle classes from the cities; recently, businesses have joined the exit to the suburbs. The cities' tax bases are melting as a result. Bankruptcy has become a clear and present danger for many cities.

Many jobless, few skills

As jobs and money leave the cities, young people flood the job market in greater and greater numbers, with fewer and fewer skills to offer. Few find work. Many give up trying. Ronald Brown of the National Urban League believes the result will be disaster. "We are creating a huge population of discouraged and permanently dependent people," he says, "with consequences we can only guess at." Those consequences are hinted at today in deteriorating city blocks, clots of restless, sullen teenagers on street corners, and growing de facto segregation.

The government has not been indifferent. Two billion dollars or more are spent each year on jobs and training for young people. But the programs have had mixed success, and the crisis of unemployment among the young continues. There is growing debate, criticism, and disenchantment.

The present Congress will be wrestling with a number of bills designed to achieve the elusive dream of guaranteeing a job at a decent wage to all Americans who are willing and able to work.

Rebuilding neighborhoods

S.1 would create a national youth service to employ those people between the ages of 16 and 24. Under contract with the Department of Labor, public and private organizations would hire youths from low-income families to rebuild and beautify their own neighborhoods. There is no panacea to crime and alienation, but if the deprived and troubled young people who are today fighting for survival on our city streets were paid to do productive work in their own communities, I believe our cities could begin to hope again.

Past jobs programs have often failed to train young people in skills that would serve them in future jobs. S.1 would authorize the Secretary of Labor to pay employers who train them for permanent employment. A similar policy has been tried with success in Western Europe. Some Common Market countries pay employers $100 for every month they employ and train a young person in his first six months out of school.

More parkland projects

S.1 would also expand the Youth Conservation Corps from a summer to a year-round program. The YCC hires young people for environmental projects on state and federal lands, much like the Civilian Conservation Corps of the 1930's. But the program is too small and the summer jobs too brief to be of lasting value. S.1 would authorize the hiring of 100,000 young people in its first year, 200,000 in its second, and 300,000 in its third. I believe my bill would roll back the horizon for young people whose lives have been confined to the asphalt world of the city. It would make dramatic and enduring improvements in our state and national parklands.

Most important, it would give the young truly useful work.

S.1 is innovative. But its scope is wide, and it addresses the inadequacies that marred previous jobs programs. And it involves private business in hiring and training, rather than looking solely to government. Congress must solve the problem of America's unemployed young. If it fails to do that, a great part of a generation will be consigned to lives of poverty and lawlessness. All Americans will feel the consequences.

These young men of 1930's found work in parklands under the Civilian Conservation Corps. Today's Youth Conservation Corps is similar, but is a summer program only.

Youths protest increasing unemployment. Of all jobless Americans, half are under 25; in the inner cities, where the problem is acute, masses of unemployed young are becoming discouraged and dependent or resorting to crime.

Senate Bill No. 1— Jobs for Youth

by Sen. Charles Mathias Jr. (R., Md.)

"S 1" used to be a code number for a bill providing a harsh revision of the U.S. criminal code. Now S.1 identifies a new jobs and economic growth bill I introduced on the first day of this 95th Congress.

America today is raising young people in the hundreds of thousands who have seldom, if ever, held a job. Almost half of the 7.8 million unemployed Americans are 24 or younger; unemployment among teenagers has been on the rise for 20 years and is running now at 20 percent.

In the inner cities, where poverty and decay persist even in the best of times, the effects of high unemployment are devastating. Among black teenagers, who are concentrated largely in the cities, unemployment has held at 25 percent or more throughout the past decade, surging in the past two years to epidemic proportions. The Bureau of Labor reports an unemployment rate of 36.1 percent for black teenagers, as against 18.1 for whites the same age. The National Urban League believes the figure for blacks exceeds 60 percent.

Unemployment among the urban young has had grave consequences for all Americans. There is no longer any doubt that chronic unemployment feeds urban crime. And nearly half of all violent crimes are committed by juveniles. Crime menaces all of us: the poor, the elderly, the shopkeeper, the suburban commuter. High crime rates drive both the black and white middle classes from the cities; recently, businesses have joined the exit to the suburbs. The cities' tax bases are melting as a result. Bankruptcy has become a clear and present danger for many cities.

Many jobless, few skills

As jobs and money leave the cities, young people flood the job market in greater and greater numbers, with fewer and fewer skills to offer. Few find work. Many give up trying. Ronald Brown of the National Urban League believes the result will be disaster. "We are creating a huge population of discouraged and permanently dependent people," he says, "with consequences we can only guess at." Those consequences are hinted at today in deteriorating city blocks, clots of restless, sullen teenagers on street corners, and growing de facto segregation.

HOLLYWOOD.

These are tough times for studio press agents here. The major studios are producing fewer films each year and what they make is cast with the same old names—Barbra Streisand, Robert Redford, Paul Newman, Steve McQueen and Jack Nicholson.

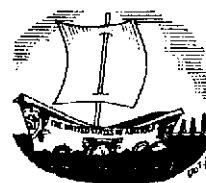

Moreover, most of the studios have long abandoned the practice of signing, developing, and publicizing a contract list of young players. Thus, the press agent is frequently cornered into publicizing the story instead of the star, a more difficult job, or of trying to build up an actor or actress for one film, a short-term objective.

At 20th Century-Fox they are giving the buildup to Marie-France Pisier, a 32-year-old French actress unknown in this country. She stars in the recently finished The Other Side of Midnight, based on a best-selling novel by Sidney Sheldon which is considered required "under-the-hair-dryer" reading. It concerns a French girl who, during World War II, is seduced, impregnated, and abandoned by a dashing Errol Flynn Dollars and sense. Americans are increasing their oil consumption again, but the nation's oil fields are producing 1.3 million barrels a day less than they did four years ago. The result: a growing reliance on imports. In fact, the bill for foreign oil last year came to about $160 for every man, woman, and child in the U.S. What to do? America needs a national energy policy that will encourage off-shore drilling for oil and gas, the use of coal, and, to the extent it's safe and environmentally sound, the development of new nuclear generating plants. Down the road are oil shale, solar energy, and synthetic fuels. But energy policy remains the first step.

Now the good news. Most Americans agree with the need for an energy policy. In a recent Roper Organization poll of more than 2,000 people, a federal energy policy was given high priority. About 90 percent of those interviewed said the U.S. needs a "plan to conserve present energy sources and develop new energy sources so we will not be dependent on foreign countries for energy." If the people recognize the nation's needs, maybe the government won't be too far behind.

"WE CAN COVER YOU AGAINST FIRE, FLOOD AND THUNDERBOLTS.
BUT, NO, WE HAVEN'T ANY ENERGY POLICY IF YOUR FURNACE RUNS DRY."

If he's so wise, why didn't he stay home? We're talking about a burrowing owl who found himself on Long Island when his natural habitat, according to the experts, is southern Florida. A friendly and knowledgeable human put the wandering bird on a jet for home, but the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service bumped him from the plane. It seems the law protects him from being "kidnapped" wherever he is found, even if it's the wrong place, with the wrong climate. Happily, this time the red tape was quickly cut, the owl got his plane ride after all, and presumably lived happily ever after.

Race to the pole. When Roald Amundsen and his party left Oslo in 1910, the world thought he was bound for the Arctic. But Amundsen secretly planned a race in the other direction, to become the first person to set foot on the South Pole. His story, filmed in the snowy wasteland beyond the Arctic Circle in Norway, is the concluding episode of Ten Who Dared, the "Mobil Showcase" series on great explorers. Check your local TV listings next week for time and station. And, to keep the series fresh in mind, you'll want to own the beautiful 336-page book, Ten Who Dared, about these and other explorers. You can by sending a check or money order for $14.95, plus applicable state and local taxes, to: Ten Who Dared, P. O. Box 1934, Kansas City, Missouri 64140.

Yes! Go a little crazy and get a lot of music... 11 records or tapes of your choice all at once! And just look at the wide range of recorded entertainment you have to choose from—not only the best and latest from the huge Columbia catalog... but also new releases and old favorites from A&M, Arista, Capitol, Epic, London, Mercury, MCA, Motown, MGM, Polydor, 20th Century, United Artists, and many, many other outstanding labels!

To order your 11 records or tapes just mail the application in an envelope, together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's $1.00 for your first 11 selections, plus 86¢ for shipping and handling). In exchange, you agree to buy 8 more selections (at regular Club prices) in the coming three years... and you may cancel your membership at any time after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off the regular Club prices.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

Your own charge account will be opened... the selections you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are: 8-track tapes and cassettes, $6.98 or $7.98; reel tapes, $7.98; records, $5.98 or $6.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

After completing your enrollment agreement (by buying 8 selections within 3 years), you may cancel membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan. So don't delay—act now!

Special Start-Year-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you at 50% off regular Club prices (only $3.49 for a record; $3.99 for a tape). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 11 introductory selections. This half-price purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 7 more (instead of 8) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number.

NOTE: all applications are subject to review; Columbia House reserves the right to reject any application.

Yes! Go a little crazy and get a lot of music... 8 records or tapes of your choice all at once! And just look at the wide range of recorded entertainment you have to choose from—not only the best and latest from the huge Columbia catalog... but also new releases and old favorites from A&M, Arista, Capitol, Epic, London, Mercury, MCA, Motown, MGM, Polydor, 20th Century, United Artists, and many, many other outstanding labels!

To order your 8 records or tapes just mail the application in an envelope, together with your check or money order for 99¢ as payment. In exchange, you agree to buy 6 more selections (at regular Club prices) in the coming three years... and you may cancel your membership at any time after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest... plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off the regular Club prices.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified.

You will always have at least 10 days in which to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days in which to decide, you may return it at our expense, for full credit.

Your own charge account will be opened... the selections you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently are: 8-track tapes and cassettes, $6.98 or $7.98; reel tapes, $7.98; records, $5.98 or $6.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multiple unit sets and Double Selections may be somewhat higher.)

After completing your enrollment agreement (by buying 6 selections within 3 years), you may cancel membership at any time. If you decide to continue, you'll be eligible for our generous money-saving bonus plan. So don't delay—act now!

Special Start-Year-Membership-Now Offer: you may also choose your first selection right now—and we'll give it to you at 50% off regular Club prices (only $3.49 for a record; $3.99 for a tape). Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 8 introductory selections. This half-price purchase reduces your membership obligation immediately—you'll then be required to buy just 5 more (instead of 6) in the next three years. Just check box in application and fill in number.

Is constipation part of growing older?

It's true that as you get older, your body does slow down and regularity can become a problem. But it doesn't have to be.

You don't have to suffer from constipation...not when there's Serutan to help you.

Serutan is the laxative especially formulated to help a sluggish system back to regularity. That's because Serutan with its natural ingredients, adds the necessary moisture and bulk your system tends to lose as you get older.

Serutan gently nudges your slowed down system along, so you eliminate smoothly and comfortably. You no longer have to experience the discomfort of painful elimination.

Try Serutan. Because constipation doesn't have to be a part of growing older.

TOM DOESN'T HAVE TO GO TO SCHOOL. POOR TOM.

He has a learning problem. Tom can learn, but not in a regular class. So he is "excused" from school.

He is "excused" from his right to the special education he needs to develop his full potential as a human being.

There are millions of kids like Tom, with all sorts of physical, mental, or emotional handicaps. And even today, less than half of them are getting the special education they need.

If one of them is your child, we have free information that can help.

type of American flyer. The girl aborts her pregnancy, uses her body to become a top film star, and eventually becomes the mistress of a fabulously wealthy Greek of the Aristotle Onassis stripe.

She spends much of her time and money searching out the flyer who seduced her. She subsequently finds him, hires him as her private pilot, humiliates him, then beds him down and tries to talk him into killing his wife.

"It is what you Americans call a soap opera," explains Marie-France Pisier, who, of course, plays Noelle, the French girl whose body movements in the film drive men wild with passion only to leave them weak, pliable, and submissive.

"I do not know how it will be received," adds Marie-France, "but I hope well, because I would like to make other films here."

"Hollywood," she says, "is like a clinic. Everyone comes here to get well, to find a career, a husband, stardom, to find something. I am one of the patients."

Marie-France, who claims to be getting $120,000 for her first American film, is a dark-haired, green-eyed intellectual who, in addition to being a veteran French actress ("I have worked in some 20 films, including TV."), is also a non-practicing lawyer.

"I earned my degree," she says, "at the University of Paris in six years, in between acting jobs. But it was mostly courses in international law which I took. My husband, George Kiejman—he is the practicing lawyer in our family. He represents motion picture and record companies."

Happy anniversary?

How long has Marie-France Pisier been married?

"I am not sure," she says frankly, closing her eyes and searching her memory. "I think we lived together for three years and have been married for two, or maybe it is the other way around. I think it is the other way. Lived two, married three."

Where did she meet her husband?

"I am not too sure," she repeats. "I think it was at a premiere of a film. Yes, yes, it was—a film called La Maison des Bories."

Is she happily married?

Where did she meet her husband?

"I am not too sure," she repeats. "I think it was at a premiere of a film. Yes, yes, it was—a film called La Maison des Bories."

Is she happily married?

"My husband and I"—she halts to find the correct words in English, a language she learned at the university and by listening to BBC radio programs from England—"we are understanding of each other. He has strayed maybe two or three times, and so have I. But in marriage—modern marriage—it is not so terrible. It is understanding. People are weak. Sexual attractions are strong. One must live completely. Life is adventure."

Born in South Vietnam

For Marie-France Pisier, adventure began in Dalat, South Vietnam, where she was born to Paula Caucanas and George Pisier, a colonial administrator. When she was 6 her father was transferred to Noumea, New Caledonia. She was reared there along with an older sister, Evelyn Bernard, who today teaches law, and a younger brother, Gilles, who majors in mathematics at the prestigious École Polytechnique in Paris.

Her parents, who have twice been married to and divorced from each other, returned to Paris when Marie-France was 12. "But having lived so long in the tropics, we found Paris too cold, and after only three months we moved to Nice in the south of France. There I went to the Lycée des Jeunes Filles for five years, acted in school plays, and was recommended by a journalist, Mario Brun of the Nice "Matin."

It was to France's famed film director François Truffaut that Marie-France was introduced. He cast her in Love at Twenty, launching her on a career which includes roles opposite Jean-Paul Belmondo and Jean-Louis Trintignant. Before coming to Hollywood, Marie-France played the wife in the French hit Cousin, Cousine, now being shown in this country and scoring big.

French translation

When she arrived here some months ago to star in The Other Side of Midnight, she began learning her lines of dialogue by first translating them into French in order to get their full meaning. Subsequently, as her English improved, she abandoned the practice.

Studio officials thought for a while that she might object to the semi-nude love scenes the script required her to engage in with actors John Beck and Raf Vallone, but Marie-France says she never gave them a second thought.

"If a nude scene makes sense," she explains, "if it adds to the mood and the motives of the characters, if it is necessary for the story, I have no objections. After all, most people do not go to bed with their clothes on."

Like many young French actresses, Marie-France Pisier is a social activist. She took part in the revolt of the university students in Paris in 1968, "because," as she explains it, "it is most difficult to be young in Paris. French society is structured against the young. There are no jobs for university graduates. France has become a society for the middle-aged. Young people have to wait until they are in their 40's before they even get an opportunity."

"And as for equality of the sexes, there is very little. French women are underprivileged."

Last year, along with other prominent French women, Marie-France Pisier signed a petition in support of legal abortions. She regards herself as a devotee of the politics of the French left.

At the moment, however, she is caught up with her career. "After this film," she says, "I hope there will be more work for me. Acting is such an uncertain profession—especially in Paris."

The same holds true in Hollywood these days. For the likes of Marie-France Pisier, no long-term contracts. Just a burst of publicity.

The problem with (yawn) rabbit food diets.

Even the average rabbit would be bored on a lot of those diets you've tried. Remember? The Carrot Stick Diet? The Grapefruit and Water Diet? No wonder you gave up!

To stay with a diet long enough to lose the weight you want, it should let you eat normal, sensible meals. It shouldn't interrupt your daily schedule, or leave you feeling empty or bored. And that's why the Ayds Plan has worked so well for so many dieters.

The Ayds Plan. It's for people, not rabbits.

The Ayds Plan is designed to include many of the foods you like. It lets you eat well, but it helps you to eat less. So you can lose weight. Without drugs. Or pills. Or monotonous rabbit food diets.

From 227 lbs...

...to 125 lbs.

The Plan is two-fold: first, there's the calorie-reduced diet. Second, Ayds itself, the delicious, vitamin-enriched candy. Enjoy one or two with a hot drink before meals. Ayds® Reducing Plan Candies naturally stimulate the blood sugar apparatus in your body which helps take the edge off your appetite. So you eat less. And lose more. Week after week.

to be the first diet she could really stick with. She hung in there long enough to lose over one hundred pounds!

Don't misunderstand us. Ayds won't work miracles for you. But it is a diet plan you can stay with for as long as you want to lose. Which is what you need to win. And most of all, we want you to win.

A RICH AND WONDERFUL PIE

by BETH MERRIMAN

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

As rich as Croesus, this Chocolate Candy Pie is not for the calorie-conscious—except when they take a day off from dieting! Some say it's like candy, others say it resembles brownies, but all agree it is unique and wonderful. Serve it in small portions with tangerines or other fresh fruit for contrast plus strong, black coffee in little cups. It's a dessert that lingers in your memory.

CHOCOLATE CANDY PIE

| 1/2 cup butter or margarine | 1/2 cup all-purpose flour |
| 1 cup sugar | 1/2 teaspoon rum flavoring |
| 2 eggs, separated | Few grains salt |
| 2 squares unsweetened chocolate,
melted and cooled | Chocolate snaps (cookies) |
| | Vanilla or coffee ice cream |

Cream butter until consistency of mayonnaise. Add sugar gradually while continuing to cream. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in melted chocolate. Beat in flour and rum flavoring. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff but not dry; fold in gently but thoroughly.

Spoon evenly into greased 8-inch pie pan. Insert cookies around rim. Bake at 325 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool. Garnish with small scoops of vanilla or coffee ice cream just before serving.

It's easy to do, the M.U.I. way... No need to quit your present job — start now... in your spare time!

AT HOME OR IN THE GARAGE — no outside classes to attend.

If you can tie a knot and drive a tack you can get into this fascinating business/hobby, quickly, easily. You start on the basics right away in the proven, practical M.U.I. Upholstery Program.
And before you're barely into it you can start doing the simple upholstering jobs that are all around you, waiting to be done... chairs, reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

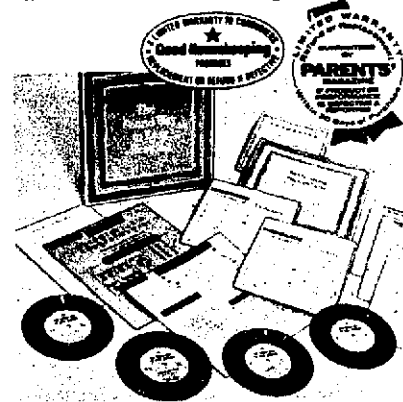

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word. He's reading!

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp some of the current methods taught in most schools today. Many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

Mrs. R. Quinn, Cheektowaga, N.Y.

Second grade—"Your course is the best teaching aid a teacher could have. I have been using it for the past 2 years for my basic second grade reading course. My class looks forward to the record quizzes. Their improvement in reading and spelling has been outstanding."

Mrs. Diane Williamson, Chickasaw, Ala.

Remarkable improvement—"I have seen my remedial groups advance 1½ to 2½ levels in reading in 6 months and show 85% to 90% improvement in spelling. A low achievement 6th grade group showed remarkable improvement. I have convinced many teachers in our school to use your course."

| 1/2 cup butter or margarine | 1/2 cup all-purpose flour |
| 1 cup sugar | 1/2 teaspoon rum flavoring |
| 2 eggs, separated | Few grains salt |
| 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled | Chocolate snaps (cookies) |
| | Vanilla or coffee ice cream |

Cream butter until consistency of mayonnaise. Add sugar gradually while continuing to cream. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in melted chocolate. Beat in flour and rum flavoring. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff but not dry; fold in gently but thoroughly.

Spoon evenly into greased 8-inch pie pan. Insert cookies around rim. Bake at 325 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool. Garnish with small scoops of vanilla or coffee ice cream just before serving.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar. But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.

Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

Teruo Hirose performs surgery on a man, 29, judged to have hopeless, inoperable cancer. Working with incredible speed and without blood transfusions, Hirose successfully removed tumorous adrenal gland, one kidney, spleen, parts of three other organs. The patient was doing fine one week later and waiting to go home.

Surgeon of the Impossible

by Lawrence Galton

In the operating room of a New York City hospital, a surgeon works quickly, deftly to bypass a blocked coronary artery. The objective: to get more blood to the deprived heart and relieve the patient's crushing chest pains and incapacitation.

But this is no usual operation. The patient is a Jehovah's Witness who cannot accept blood transfusions and, because of that, has been turned down by a dozen other surgeons. For much blood can be lost during such an operation—just to prime the heart-lung machine, four to five pints of donated blood are needed.

But here very little blood is lost. And the machine is not primed with blood but with a solution containing only salts like those found in human blood. The patient comes through the operation and today is a rehabilitated man.

The surgeon: Tokyo-born, 51-year-old Teruo Hirose, well-described as the surgeon of the "impossible."

To date, "Terry" Hirose has saved the lives of 4500 Jehovah's Witnesses and thousands of other patients through surgery—not only of the heart but of the esophagus, stomach, bowel, blood vessels and cancers.

And Dr. Hirose declares quietly that he has never lost a single patient for lack of a blood transfusion.

His speed and skill are incredible. In a typical morning, between 8 and 11, he will carry out three or four major operations. A gastrectomy, or stomach removal, usually takes three hours; Hirose has been timed doing it in 23 minutes. He does a gallbladder removal in 15 to 20 minutes, an open-heart operation in as little as three hours. And his patients lose only one-tenth the usual amount of blood, or even less.

In Hirose's primary field of heart surgery, he has been responsible for major refinements and developments of techniques and for innovative approaches to solving life-and-death problems. Not only did he develop new methods for getting more blood to the front of failing hearts, he was first to find a way to get more blood to the previously unreachable back of the heart.

Appointments and grants

Now Clinical Professor of Surgery at New York Medical College, Hirose holds appointments at half a dozen hospitals in the New York area, including St. Barnabas, Flower and Fifth Avenue, Maimonides, and St. Vincent's; fellowships in numerous major medical and surgical associations; has received many National Institutes of Health and other research grants, and has written more than 100 medical articles.

A naturalized American citizen, Hi-

Hirose's 15-hour day includes visits to patients in various hospitals. This woman is recovering from hernia surgery.

rose is the son of a senator and vice minister of education who was strongly opposed to Japan's military regime—as was his uncle, the last consul-general of Japan in New York just before World War II.

And it was because of his own and his family's antimilitarism that Hirose came into medicine. He had started out to be a lawyer but during the war, with law offering no exemption from military service, he switched to medicine, not with any conviction that he wanted to become a doctor. He was two years along in medical school when he became firmly convinced.

Postgraduate work

He not only obtained his M.D. degree from Chiba University near Tokyo but went on to special postgraduate work and earned a Ph.D. degree in surgery. At Chiba he served his residency and surgical assistantship under Prof. K. Nakayama, one of the world's most distinguished esophageal and gastric surgeons. Between 1954 and 1957, he had training in general and cardiac surgery at American Hospital in Chicago and Hahnemann Hospital and Medical College in Philadelphia.

After two years in Japan, he returned permanently to the U.S. in 1959 to become Research Fellow in Advanced Cardiovascular Surgery at Hahnemann and then Teaching Fellow and Chief Resident in Surgery at New York Medical College.

One of Hirose's earliest major contributions was made in 1966. To get more blood to the heart of a patient with a blocked coronary artery, the internal mammary artery on the chest wall was then being used. It can be spared, freed from its position, and one end of it implanted in a tunnel in front of the heart. After a time, as blood oozes from the internal mammary into the heart muscle, little blood vessels in the muscle grow out to connect up with the artery, distributing the blood where it is needed.

Reaching behind the heart

But it soon became evident that for many patients, internal mammary implantation was not nearly enough. They had a blocked coronary behind the heart, needed blood there, and went into congestive heart failure for lack of it. The internal mammary couldn't reach behind the heart; there was no known way to get blood there.

Hirose, remembering his extensive gastric surgery training under Prof. Nakayama, hit upon the idea of using a stomach artery, the gastroepiploic. It can be spared from the stomach—which has enough circulation without it—and freed to reach the back of the heart for implantation. The method worked by itself in patients needing more blood only in back; it worked, together with internal mammary implantation, in those needing more circulation all over.

After his demanding day, Hirose relaxes in heated pool and sauna in basement of his 26-room Rivendale, New York City, home, which also has rooms for billiards and table tennis.

SURGEON CONTINUED

In 1968, with Dr. Charles P. Bailey of St. Barnabas Hospital, Hirose reported another advance. Good as it was, internal mammary implantation didn't help all patients with front-of-the-heart coronary blockage—even those who benefited often waited months before improvement began. Rather than implant the chest artery, Hirose and Bailey connected it directly to a diseased coronary artery beyond the clogged area.

There were dramatic results, with patients immediately showing striking improvement. Typically, the first patient, a 46-year-old New York cabdriver who had not benefited from earlier surgery and needed large doses of nitroglycerin to relieve his agonizing chest pain, was free of pain almost immediately after the new operation and soon back at work requiring no nitroglycerin.

That same year, Hirose carried out his first open-heart operation without blood—in a 6-year-old Jehovah's Witness boy with a hole in the wall between the two pumping chambers.

The child desperately needed surgery. Hirose decided to try. He was convinced that it is the surgeon himself who, by his planning and technical performance, generally determines the amount of blood loss. He believed that he could tie off securely every little bleeding vessel he had to cut through as he operated. That might slow the operation, but he had become so adept that the procedure might still take less time than conventional surgery.

Hirose was also convinced that the heart-lung machine, which would pump and oxygenate the child's blood while his heart was stilled for the operation, did not have to be primed with blood. Instead, a solution with body salts could substitute. It did not matter that the patient's blood, flowing through the machine, would become mixed with the solution. All the blood plus the solution could be returned to the patient at the end and the solution soon excreted while the blood remained.

It worked. The child came through well. It has since worked well in many other patients.

Hirose had other contributions to make to heart surgery: a special device to minimize red blood cell destruction caused by the heart-lung machine in extended operations; a special apparatus to get oxygen into red cells without any of the usual turbulent flow and frothing and with only one-fourth the usual amount of blood needed for priming the machine.

But it wasn't long before Hirose found himself having to go beyond heart surgery.

A desperate call

One day he received a desperate call from the family of a Jehovah's Witness patient with a profusely bleeding ulcer and extreme anemia. She was hemorrhaging to death in a hospital, doctors unable to help because they saw no way to operate without transfusion. Hirose saved her, using the techniques he had developed for cardiac surgery.

One of his next non-cardiac Jehovah's Witness patients was a 23-year-old girl with ulcerative colitis advanced to the point of perforating the colon and producing peritonitis. Her temperature was spiking and she was unconscious, rapidly approaching death. Other surgeons had refused operation without transfusion. Hirose operated, removing all the pus and blood from the abdominal cavity and taking out the entire diseased colon. The girl recovered.

Another of Hirose's Jehovah's Witness patients was a young woman with a huge lung abscess that had destroyed a whole lobe. The lobe was removed and she is today a championship tennis player.

reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well.
 It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word.
 He's reading!

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read.
 Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp some of the current methods taught in most schools today. Many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

Mrs. R. Quinn, Cheektowaga, N.Y.

From D to A in 6 weeks—"Terry has made great progress in reading and spelling with your course. In 6 weeks his grade came up from D to A."

Mrs. Ed Marsh, Ladson, S.C.

IN 26,000 SCHOOLS teachers are highly enthusiastic

Second grade—"Your course is the best teaching aid a teacher could have. I have been using it for the past 2 years for my basic second grade reading course. My class looks forward to the record quizzes. Their improvement in reading and spelling has been outstanding."

Mrs. Diane Williamson, Chickasaw, Ala.

Remarkable improvement—"I have seen my remedial groups advance 1½ to 2½ levels in reading in 6 months and show 85% to 90% improvement in spelling. A low achievement 6th grade group showed remarkable improvement. I have convinced many teachers in our school to use your course."

Hirose and wife Tomiko walk in their Japanese rock garden. Born in Tokyo, educated in Japan and the U.S., Hirose opposed Japanese militarism, is now a naturalized U.S. citizen.

The Hiroses in their Japanese guest room. The home contains Japanese- and American-style living quarters, plus offices.

All told, of Hirose's 4500 non-transfusion patients of the Jehovah's Witness faith, some 4000 have had non-cardiac surgery, including hysterectomies.

Hirose's work with Jehovah's Witnesses has benefited his other patients. In its place, blood transfusion can be tremendously valuable and life-saving. But there is always some risk, even if minimal, of hepatitis or other adverse reactions. When transfusion is needed, Hirose believes it should be used; but the need can often be avoided by careful operative technique. And, Jehovah's Witness or not, he rarely uses transfusions even for such operations as whole lung removals and bypasses of leg arteries.

A friendly, bubbling, enthusiastic man, Hirose maintains a back-breaking schedule and loves it. His mornings are taken up with surgery; his afternoons with rounds of patients in the various hospitals in which he operates, surgical conferences, seeing new patients, and carrying out diagnostic procedures. From 8 to 11 p.m., he sees patients at his home in Riverdale, The Bronx.

It's a magnificent home, with 26 rooms, including a separate wing for offices, another for American-style living and sleeping quarters and guest rooms, and still another containing a Japanese tearoom and Japanese-style sleeping facilities. Outside is a magnificent Japanese rock garden. There are also game rooms—for billiards, table tennis—and down below a 15 x 40-foot heated pool and sauna room which Hirose uses from 11 p.m. to midnight to refresh himself. He has married again recently after the death of his first wife some years ago, has a son in college.

Today, at 51, Hirose looks, works and acts like a 35-year-old. By all odds, he has many years ahead to help patients and to innovate. Which, as his patients who come from all over the country and even from abroad understandably see it, is a very good thing, indeed.

I love tobacco. I don't smoke.

Walt Garrison,
football and rodeo star.

If I'm a guy who loves tobacco, how come I never take a puff?

Well, because I use "smokeless tobacco."

All it takes is a pinch of "smokeless" in between my cheek and gum. Feels real relaxing in there. And I get full, rich tobacco pleasure.

Another thing is, "smokeless tobacco" can't tie up my hands. So I can use it no matter what I'm doing.

If you'd like to go "smokeless," here's what you do. Just look for three great brands.

There's Skoal, my favorite, which has a wintergreen taste. Copenhagen, a straight tobacco. And Happy Days Mint.

All three dated for freshness. All three give you the tobacco pleasure you're looking for.

Smokeless tobacco.
A pinch is all it takes.

How to get rich

For many years, a relatively small number of people have had a "corner" on the immensely profitable mail order market.

These "little people" have been quietly running ads, mailing catalogs and pocketing cash profits... week after week, steady as clockwork.

Like Barry Sweeney who ran one ad in Family Weekly magazine. THIS SINGLE AD PULLED OVER 25,000 ORDERS AND PRODUCED A NET PROFIT OF $32,370!

Another beginner, John Sicher, got started by selling watches and calculators. His first ad, run in The Wall Street Journal, brought in a net profit of over $5,000 in just two days.

These exceptional cases illustrate the tremendous power of mail order advertising... and the excitement which lies in store for you when you place your first winning ad in a national magazine.

A rich and wonderful pie

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

As rich as Croesus, this Chocolate Candy Pie is not for the calorie-conscious—except when they take a day off from dieting! Some say it's like candy, others say it resembles brownies, but all agree it is unique and wonderful. Serve it in small portions with tangerines or other fresh fruit for contrast plus strong, black coffee in little cups. It's a dessert that lingers in your memory.

chocolate candy pie

1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, separated
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled

1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon rum flavoring
Few grains salt
Chocolate snaps (cookies)
Vanilla or coffee ice cream

Cream butter until consistency of mayonnaise. Add sugar gradually while continuing to cream. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in melted chocolate. Beat in flour and rum flavoring. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff but not dry; fold in gently but thoroughly.

Spoon evenly into greased 8-inch pie pan. Insert cookies around rim. Bake at 325 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool. Garnish with small scoops of vanilla or coffee ice cream just before serving.

FROM PARADE'S TEST KITCHEN

How can we be sure it's a miracle?

There isn't any such thing, skeptics will say. Whereas the superstitious are apt to regard any stroke of extraordinary good fortune as miraculous.

In between these two viewpoints lies the basic truth of these supernatural events which everyone should strive to understand. Because miracles do happen. To deny their existence is to contradict the testimony of Holy Scripture, for it was by performing miracles that Jesus led men to recognize His divine mission.

A miracle is, in its simplest terms, a manifestation of supernatural power... a sign of divine presence... an event through which God strengthens our faith and moves us to improve our conduct.

If you'd like to know more about miracles, their purpose and how to recognize them, write today for our pamphlet entitled "Miracles—Signs of God's Favor." It will be sent free and nobody will call on you.

If You Intend To Speculate

by Ira U. Cobleigh

On Jan. 31, here's what happened to three choice stocks: National Semiconductor tumbled 3½ points to 19 (1976 high was 55¾), Heublein slipped 1½ points to 27½ (1976 high was 59¼), and Eastman Kodak fell to 74½ (1976 high was 124¾). What's so important about these downspins? Just this: we're in a bull market, but the accent has definitely shifted away from blue chips to lower-priced shares of smaller companies.

Our advice: if you're a speculator on the prowl for stocks that can ascend, shop among the under-$20 mini-stocks!

Mini-stocks are a special breed, found mostly among companies grossing below $40 million annually. While some may be listed on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), many more are found on the American Stock Exchange (Amex) and the Over-the-Counter Market (OTC). Are they risky? Of course! But using common sense, you don't have to be a professional Wall Street analyst to pick winners.

Your first step is to decide what industries are in an uptrend. That's not too difficult. For example, there's a fuel crisis. Accordingly, even quite small companies that are successful in exploration and production of oil and natural gas or possess extensive coal reserves should increase their profits in 1977-78. Such companies as Buttes Oil and Gas, Inexo Oil, Wilshire Oil and Mesa Petroleum come to mind. (These are all mentioned without a whisper of recommendation or endorsement and only by way of illustration.) In coal, such big companies as Pittston (NYSE) and Westmoreland (OTC) are followed by such smaller ones as General Energy (OTC).

Don't forget uranium. That may be the real energy of the future. Atlas Corp. (NYSE) has been in this business for years; so has United Nuclear (NYSE). Silver is rising in price, so a look at Asarco, Callahan and Hecla (all NYSE) may be worthwhile, especially if inflation continues.

Waste materials are a problem. Younger companies are emerging in this area: R.L.C. Inc. (Amex), with a technique for handling chemical wastes, and Waste Resources Inc. for more common waste disposal. Insurance stocks are also prospering, for example Jefferson Pilot (NYSE), Southwestern Life (OTC) and American Family (NYSE), a specialist in cancer insurance. In medical care, Humana and Affiliated Hospital trade under $20 and now report higher earnings.

Be mindful of the Wall Street adage, "Stock prices are the slaves of earning power." Choose stock in a sound company whose profits are growing by 15-20 percent a year, and you'll probably make money.

It pays to be bought out

Also, there's money to be made in companies likely to be bought out. In the past year stockholders in Sea World, Koehring, Milgo Electronics, and S. and S. Corporation (a maker of coal-mining machinery) have all gained 50 percent or more by "buy out" offers for their holdings.

If you can't seem to locate a particularly exciting industry, try this: Jot down the 10 stocks with the most active price uptrend on the Amex for a single week. Get the latest data on the five that attract you most. Then buy the two whose earnings are rising fastest. You may be surprised at the results.

It's best to diversify into three or four speculative stocks and own them outright (no margin buying). Remember that if you're trading in mini-stocks, use only money you can afford to lose.

On the Amex in 1975 there were 200 stocks that doubled. In 1976 the standout performer, Resorts International "B," rose from 2½ to 22½. Look for stocks like these. They are there, waiting to be detected.

Economist Ira U. Cobleigh is author of "Happiness Is a Stock That Doubles in One Year."

Super-action Miracle Brush keeps your car "showroom new"... without water, waxes or hard work!

Brush lasts for years!

Do people judge you by the soiled, grimy-looking automobile you drive? Now you can keep your car gleaming clean and bright—with this shiny "showroom-new" look. And you don't need a hose, you don't need a bucket, you don't need costly waxes, pastes or cleaners. What's more, you don't have to line up every Saturday to plunk down $1.50 or $2.00 for a car wash.

All you need is this super-action Miracle Brush and a few minutes of spare time.

Never again be ashamed of how your car looks!

This remarkable, chemically-treated Miracle Brush cleans and polishes your whole car in minutes—without water, waxes or hard work. It's almost like magic! Millions of dirt-hungry fibers attract dust and grime automatically—by molecular magnetism then gobble it up! You never have to rub or scrub. Simply glide the Miracle Brush over your car. It actually cleans as it polishes... is 100% safe even for new car finishes—even for a Rolls, Caddy or Continental!

Switch to this amazing no-water method!

Say goodbye forever to hoses, buckets and sponges! Never again risk rust, rattles, squeaks—and wet feet! This amazing, easy-care, no water way to clean your car is already used and preferred by millions. Bring back the gleaming-clean beauty of your automobile. Drive with pride... win compliments from friends and neighbors. Best of all, save $75.00 to $100.00 in car wash money! Your chemically-treated Miracle Car Brush costs only $3.99—and stays effective up to 12 months. (Then you can renew it.) Brush itself lasts for years!

Quickly pays for itself!

Figure out how much car washes are costing you—and you'll see how the Miracle Brush pays for itself in only two to four weeks! And—incredible as it may seem—it MUST work the way we say... or it costs you nothing! Check our no-nonsense 90-day guarantee... and be convinced. Then mail the risk-free coupon today for sure!

Build up to a full year's grade in reading skill in just six weeks with the Sound Way to Easy Reading.

As soon as your child starts playing the records and using the charts of The Sound Way to Easy Reading you will know why it works so well. It takes the mystery out of learning to read because it teaches your child by the phonics method (the method by which most parents learned to read years ago).

Teaches with records

With this course your child discovers that letters have sounds. When he starts sounding out the letters he hears himself saying the word. He's reading!

The records drill him in the sounds of the 26 letters of the alphabet and their blends. By the time he completes the first record (about two weeks for the average child) he can read 300 words. After finishing all four records he has been taught 123 basic phonics sounds.

Once he knows these sounds he can read up to 85% of the words in the English language. It works for children of all ages—in the earliest grades and even in high school. Its records tell your child exactly what to do, so he can teach himself without any help from you.

A semester-long study involving 214 pupils in four Chicago schools proved that the classes given The Sound Way to Easy Reading showed marked improvement in reading and spelling over the control groups.

Don't think it's all your child's fault if he hasn't learned to read. Many of our brightest children are not able to grasp some of the current methods taught in most schools today. Many educators insist that at least 40% of our children must have formal training in phonics—that they will never master reading without it!

These are the records and self-quizzing cards that can help your child gain as much as a full year's grade in reading in just a few weeks.

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

As rich as Croesus, this Chocolate Candy Pie is not for the calorie-conscious—except when they take a day off from dieting! Some say it's like candy, others say it resembles brownies, but all agree it is unique and wonderful. Serve it in small portions with tangerines or other fresh fruit for contrast plus strong, black coffee in little cups. It's a dessert that lingers in your memory.

| 1/2 cup butter or margarine | 1/3 cup all-purpose flour |
| 1 cup sugar | 1/2 teaspoon rum flavoring |
| 2 eggs, separated | Few grains salt |
| 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted and cooled | Chocolate snaps (cookies) |
| | Vanilla or coffee ice cream |

Cream butter until consistency of mayonnaise. Add sugar gradually while continuing to cream. Add egg yolks one at a time, beating well after each addition. Beat in melted chocolate. Beat in flour and rum flavoring. Beat egg whites with salt until stiff but not dry; fold in gently but thoroughly.

Spoon evenly into greased 8-inch pie pan. Insert cookies around rim. Bake at 325 degrees for 30 minutes. Cool. Garnish with small scoops of vanilla or coffee ice cream just before serving.

Grass Seed Will Never Grow A Lawn Like This!

From Part Shade To Full Sun!
Save Now. Special
Introductory Offer.
Up To 200 Amazoy
Zoysia Grass
Plugs FREE

FULLY DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT. Amazoy lawns take cookouts, parties, lawn furniture. You could even play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Rarely (if ever!) needs watering.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass—enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

We Tell People, "Walk On It"

Instead of saying "Keep Off The Grass," we invited visitors to walk on it. It was an unforgettable experience for them—like walking on a thick pile carpet.

After walking on it, visitors learned that Amazoy Zoysia turf was crabgrass-proof, and the next question never failed: "How can I get some?"

Other Lawns Burn Out

Now, grass is my company's business; but it was a long time before an order of Amazoy Zoysia Grass was accepted. First we wanted to see how good this grass was. We really found out!

One summer the heat was so great you could fry eggs on the highway. Daily the sun blazed from cloudless skies; the drought worsened; whole ponds dried up. Meanwhile crabgrass flourished and took over lawns by the thousands.

IT RESISTS DROUGHT, STAYS GREEN THRU HEAT WAVES

Through it all, our deep-rooted Amazoy Zoysia stood out like a green island in a brown wasteland.

Thrives In Poor Soils

When I planted it in sandy, clay soils and sub-soil, it took hold and thrived. Other grass in the same soils struggled and died.

I compared it to other grasses in the winter, too. Ordinary grasses may die or turn sparse and scraggly due to frost and winter, but in such weather my Amazoy Zoysia merely went off its green color... it stayed so thick you could walk on it and not get your feet muddy.

Through zero-cold winters and blistering summer droughts... through onslaughts by weeds and diseases... our Meyer Zoysia had proved it could "take it." It had earned the right to be called AMAZOY, our Trade Mark published coast to coast and border to border.

By Mike Sandin

Years ago I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I worried about it more than any other thing around the house.

Then things changed. My company obtained a new grass just released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture. In honor of

HOW AMAZOY CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER LONG!

If costly chemicals fail to control crabgrass for good, how does Amazoy Zoysia do it? Your deep-rooted, fully established Amazoy lawn grows so thick and luxurious that crabgrass seeds just do not germinate!

Your lawn chokes out not only crabgrass, but other weeds all summer long—year after year.

You will never need to spend a cent on crabgrass and weed killers again. So if you have wanted to get away from costly and dangerous lawn herbicides, Amazoy is your answer.

Your Own Supply Of Plug Transplants

Your established Amazoy lawn provides you with plugs for other areas as you may desire.

HERE'S WHY AMAZOY PLUGS ASSURE SUCCESS WHERE OTHER GRASSES FAIL

Due to Amazoy's national reputation, other grasses may be offered that sound like it. But Amazoy's pre-cut plugs look different, ARE different. They are deep-rooted, winter-hardy plugs produced exclusive for transplanting.

Each large sturdy plug contains 3 square inches or more of living vigorous Zoysia turf, complete with vigorous root system in its original enriched soil.

NEVER NEEDS REPLACEMENT

AMAZOY Saves Money. Cut Work. Never a seed to sow again with Amazoy! Year after year your lawn grows thicker, like a deep pile carpet. Defies enemies that kill other lawns.

PEOPLE WRITE TO ME

As Mrs. Harry Whitlow writes to me from the heart of wintry New England:

"... How pleased we are with our Zoysia lawn! We had a lawn that was a disgrace. My husband used weed killers for every known weed, but next season new weeds sprang up. We dug the lawn up twice and reseeded before we learned about Amazoy. It does everything you say."

"Mowed It 2 Times," Writes Woman

Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around hers are brown from drought ours just stays green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in... last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing we never have to pull any weeds... it's just wonderful!"

Wonderful! Now, Amazoy Zoysia IS wonderful! Plant it now and you'll cut mowing by never have another weed problem all summer. For the rest of your life.

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into hole in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas, plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds.

Easy planting instructions with order.

AMAZOY CUTS WATERING, CUTS MOWING BY 75%

Your drought-resistant Amazoy lawn not only cuts your water bills, it cuts your work in other ways: it cuts pushing a noisy mower under a broiling summer sun by 75%. It resists blight, disease, most insects. IT WILL NOT WINTER-KILL TO 30° BELOW ZERO. After killing frosts, just goes off its green color, regains fresh new beauty every Spring—a true perennial that ends re-seeding forever!

THERE IS NO SEED

Reports U.S. Dept. of Agric., referring to Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Experts advise planting only live grass to be sure of getting winter-hardy grass perf. by U.S. Govt., Meyer Z-52.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Or correct problem areas such as slopes where Amazoy halts erosion, in hard-to-cover spots, around swim pools, in play areas, etc.

NO SOD

Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed—such as weeds, disease, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. Amazoy is sold ONLY in pre-cut plugs... never a slab of field grown sod YOU must cut up in order to plant.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER IS... FREE WITH ORDERS OF 100 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

MORE THAN A HALF-BILLION PLUGS SOLD, OUTSELLS OTHERS 10 TO 1!

The controlled transplant quality of Amazoy has made it another word for Meyer Z-52 Zoysia... the world's best known Zoysia Grass. If you don't want to take another chance with lawn disappointment, switch to the grass that assures your success: Amazoy. We guarantee every plug will grow, no matter your soil or why other grasses have failed you.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected by U.S. Govt.; Released in Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area.

We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means. © Zoysia Farm Nurseries, 1977

EVERY PLUG GUARANTEED TO GROW IN YOUR AREA IN YOUR SOIL

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER-KILL — Has survived temperatures 20° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT-KILL — When other grasses burn out, Amazoy turns its loveback!

EVERY PLUG MUST GROW WITHIN 45 DAYS OR WE REPLACE IT FREE!

Since we are hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we have to be sure of our product.

Isn't It Time YOU Switched To The Grass Making Others Obsolete?

It simply doesn't make sense to take another chance on grass that fails you when you want it most. To plant more of the same bluegrass seed just asks for more of the same, disappointing results. Order Amazoy NOW... let it spread into thrillingly beautiful turf. And remember this:

If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.

But longer cigarettes usually have more tar.

Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

Testing TV Programs

Parents should select the TV programs their children watch. More than 50 studies have shown that youngsters develop more aggressive behavior by watching violent programs. So declares the California Medical Association's "Health Tips."

Citing Nielsen index figures, "Tips" says the average child has watched 15,000 hours of television and 18,000 video murders by high school graduation time. Moreover, children's TV programming averages six times more violence per hour than adult programming.

TV violence, the association asserts, is harmful to children in three ways:

- They learn and remember—and many copy—aggressive behavior;
- It is easier for them to be violent, and they are less anxious about it;

- It heightens, rather than "drains off," their aggressiveness.

A basic set of questions developed by San Francisco's Committee on Children's Television, Inc., should be asked by parents in choosing programs suitable for their children:

- Does the program appear suitable for the child's age level? Does it present conflicts that a child can understand? Are positive ways shown to resolve those conflicts?

- Does the program stimulate constructive activities and enhance the quality of a child's play?

- Does the program separate advertisements from program content?

- Does the program show racial groups and sex roles positively?

- Does the program present social issues that a child can understand, with worthwhile ideals, values and beliefs?

- Does the program have artistic qualities and a pace that allows the child to absorb and think about the material presented?

Students at Harvard, Yale and Princeton were polled on how they ranked themselves intellectually compared to President Jimmy Carter, who was graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, Class of 1947.

At Harvard, half the students said they were brighter than Carter; at Princeton, 48 percent; and at Yale, 45 percent.

Teruo Hirose performs surgery on a man, 29, judged to have hopeless, inoperable cancer. Working with incredible speed and without blood transfusions, Hirose successfully removed tumorous adrenal gland, one kidney, spleen, parts of three other organs. The patient was doing fine one week later and waiting to go home.

Surgeon of the Impossible

by Lawrence Galton

In the operating room of a New York City hospital, a surgeon works quickly, deftly to bypass a blocked coronary artery. The objective: to get more blood to the deprived heart and relieve the patient's crushing chest pains and incapacitation.

But this is not usual operation. The patient is a Jehovah's Witness who cannot accept blood transfusions and, because of that, has been turned down by a dozen other surgeons. For much blood can be lost during such an operation—just to prime the heart-lung machine, four to five pints of donated blood are needed.

But here very little blood is lost. And the machine is not primed with blood but with a solution containing only salts like those found in human blood. The patient comes through the operation and today is a rehabilitated man.

The surgeon: Tokyo-born, 51-year-old Teruo Hirose, well-described as the surgeon of the "impossible."

To date, "Terry" Hirose has saved the lives of 4500 Jehovah's Witnesses and thousands of other patients through surgery—not only of the heart but of the esophagus, stomach, bowel, blood vessels and cancers.

And Dr. Hirose declares quietly that he has never lost a single patient for lack of a blood transfusion.

His speed and skill are incredible. In a typical morning, between 8 and 11, he will carry out three or four major operations. A gastrectomy, or stomach removal, usually takes three hours; Hirose has been timed doing it in 23 minutes. He does a gallbladder removal in 15 to 20 minutes, an open-heart operation in as little as three hours. And his patients lose only one-tenth the usual amount of blood, or even less.

Hirose's 15-hour day includes visits to patients in various hospitals. This woman is recovering from hernia surgery.

In Hirose's primary field of heart surgery, he has been responsible for major refinements and developments of techniques and for innovative approaches to solving life-and-death problems. Not only did he develop new methods for getting more blood to the front of failing hearts, he was first to find a way to get more blood to the previously unreachable back of the heart.

Appointments and grants

Now Clinical Professor of Surgery at New York Medical College, Hirose holds appointments at half a dozen hospitals in the New York area, including St. Barnabas, Flower and Fifth Avenue, Maimonides, and St. Vincent's; fellowships in numerous major medical and surgical associations; has received many National Institutes of Health and other research grants, and has written more than 100 medical articles.

A naturalized American citizen, Hi-

rose is the son of a senator and vice minister of education who was strongly opposed to Japan's military regime—as was his uncle, the last consul-general of Japan in New York just before World War II.

And it was because of his own and his family's antimilitarism that Hirose came into medicine. He had started out to be a lawyer but during the war, with law offering no exemption from military service, he switched to medicine, not with any conviction that he wanted to become a doctor. He was two years along in medical school when he became firmly convinced.

Postgraduate work

He not only obtained his M.D. degree from Chiba University near Tokyo but went on to special postgraduate work and earned a Ph.D. degree in surgery. At Chiba he served his residency and surgical assistantship under Prof. K. Nakayama, one of the world's most distinguished esophageal and gastric surgeons. Between 1954 and 1957, he had training in general and cardiac surgery at American Hospital in Chicago and Hahnemann Hospital and Medical College in Philadelphia.

After two years in Japan, he returned permanently to the U.S. in 1959 to become Research Fellow in Advanced Cardiovascular Surgery at Hahnemann and then Teaching Fellow and Chief Resident in Surgery at New York Medical College.

One of Hirose's earliest major contributions was made in 1966. To get more blood to the heart of a patient with a blocked coronary artery, the internal mammary artery on the chest wall was then being used. It can be spared, freed from its position, and one end of it implanted in a tunnel in front of the heart. After a time, as blood oozes from the internal mammary into the heart muscle, little blood vessels in the muscle grow out to connect up with the artery, distributing the blood where it is needed.

Reaching behind the heart

But it soon became evident that for many patients, internal mammary implantation was not nearly enough. They had a blocked coronary behind the heart, needed blood there, and went into congestive heart failure for lack of it. The internal mammary couldn't reach behind the heart; there was no known way to get blood there.

Hirose, remembering his extensive gastric surgery training under Prof. Nakayama, hit upon the idea of using a stomach artery, the gastroepiploic. It can be spared from the stomach, which has enough circulation without it—and freed to reach the back of the heart for implantation. The method worked by itself in patients needing more blood only in back; it worked, together with internal mammary implantation, in those needing more circulation all over.

Drug Conviction

Last month Keith Richard, one of the Rolling Stones, was found guilty after a three-day trial in England of possessing cocaine.

Young girls jammed the courtroom to hear the verdicts. They cheered loudly as the jury foreman declared him not guilty on the first charge of possessing LSD. Hisses and boos greeted the second verdict: guilty of possessing a few grains of cocaine found in a sniffing tube in his car. Crucial evidence was a newspaper picture of Richard wearing a similar tube on a chain a few days before his arrest.

This was the second drug conviction for the 33-year-old guitarist. A third conviction in England inevitably calls for a jail sentence.

Also important is the possibility that Richard will lose his U.S. visa because of the drug conviction — undoubtedly the main reason why his lawyer, Peter Rawlinson, will probably appeal the guilty verdict.

The Rolling Stones planned an American tour later this year, one almost guaranteed to earn millions. If Keith Richard is barred from entering the U.S., Rolling Stone vocalist Mick Jagger, who appeared at his trial, will have to hire a substitute guitarist in a hurry.

ALL OF THESE 1,726 PRIZES for better cooking will be awarded by Kraft, the maker of fine cheese products. Look over this selection of cheese products from Kraft, and tell us how America spells cheese. Follow the rules below.

OFFICIAL SWEEPSTAKES RULES

1. To enter the "How Does America Spell Cheese?" Sweepstakes, send your hand-lettered name, address, and response on the entry blank provided or on a plain 4" by 6" piece of paper to Kraft Cheese Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 443, Chicago, Illinois 60677. All entries must be accompanied by the Kraft trademark from the package of any Kraft Cheese product, or by the words "Kraft Cheese" hand-lettered on a separate 4" x 6" sheet of paper. NO PURCHASE REQUIRED. Only hand-lettered or hand-printed entries will be accepted.
2. You may enter as many times as you like, but each entry must be mailed in a separate envelope postmarked no later than May 22, 1977 and received no later than May 31, 1977.
3. Winners will be determined in a random blind-fold drawing conducted by an independent judging organization. Entries will not be judged by their answer to the question "How Does America Spell Cheese?" Your chances of winning depend on the number of times you enter and on the number of other entries received. Winners will be notified by mail approximately 30 days after the sweepstakes is closed.
4. All prizes will be awarded. Substitution of prizes is not permitted, and there are no cash alternatives to the second, third, fourth, and fifth prizes. Only one prize to a family, State, Federal, and other taxes imposed on a prize winner in this Sweepstakes will be the sole responsibility of the prize winner. Winners may be asked to execute an affidavit of release and eligibility. In the event a winner declines to accept a listed winning prize, that person will be disqualified and a supplemental drawing or drawings will be held from the balance of non-winning entries to award the unaccepted prize.
5. This Sweepstakes is void outside the U.S., in Missouri and where prohibited or otherwise restricted. Entrants must be 18 years of age or older. Employees of Kraft, Inc. and its subsidiaries, its advertising agencies, and judging organization, and their immediate families are not eligible.
6. All decisions of the judges are final. All entries become the property of Kraft Foods.
7. Lists of winners will be sent to entrants who send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Kraft Cheese Sweepstakes Winners List, P.O. Box 6737, Chicago, Illinois 60677.

After his demanding day, Hirose relaxes in heated pool and sauna in basement of his 26-room Riverdale, New York City, home, which also has rooms for billiards and table tennis.

SURGEON CONTINUED

In 1968, with Dr. Charles P. Bailey of St. Barnabas Hospital, Hirose reported another advance. Good as it was, internal mammary implantation didn't help all patients with front-of-the-heart coronary blockage—even those who benefited often waited months before improvement began. Rather than implant the chest artery, Hirose and Bailey connected it directly to a diseased coronary artery beyond the clogged area.

There were dramatic results, with patients immediately showing striking improvement. Typically, the first patient, a 46-year-old New York cabdriver who had not benefited from earlier surgery and needed large doses of nitroglycerin to relieve his agonizing chest pain, was free of pain almost immediately after the new operation and soon back at work requiring no nitroglycerin.

That same year, Hirose carried out his first open-heart operation without blood—in a 6-year-old Jehovah's Witness boy with a hole in the wall between the two pumping chambers.

The child desperately needed surgery. Hirose decided to try. He was convinced that it is the surgeon himself who, by his planning and technical performance, generally determines the amount of blood loss. He believed that he could tie off securely every little bleeding vessel he had to cut through as he operated. That might slow the operation, but he had become so adept that the procedure might still take less time than conventional surgery.

Hirose was also convinced that the heart-lung machine, which would pump and oxygenate the child's blood while his heart was stilled for the operation, did not have to be primed with blood. Instead, a solution with body salts could substitute. It did not matter that the patient's blood, flowing through the machine, would become mixed with the solution. All the blood plus the solution could be returned to the patient at the end and the solution soon excreted while the blood remained.

It worked. The child came through well. It has since worked well in many other patients.

Hirose had other contributions to make to heart surgery: a special device to minimize red blood cell destruction caused by the heart-lung machine in extended operations; a special apparatus to get oxygen into red cells without any of the usual turbulent flow and frothing and with only one-fourth the usual amount of blood needed for priming the machine.

But it wasn't long before Hirose found himself having to go beyond heart surgery.

A desperate call

One day he received a desperate call from the family of a Jehovah's Witness patient with a profusely bleeding ulcer and extreme anemia. She was hemorrhaging to death in a hospital, doctors unable to help because they saw no way to operate without transfusion. Hirose saved her, using the techniques he had developed for cardiac surgery.

One of his next non-cardiac Jehovah's Witness patients was a 23-year-old girl with ulcerative colitis advanced to the point of perforating the colon and producing peritonitis. Her temperature was spiking and she was unconscious, rapidly approaching death. Other surgeons had refused operation without transfusion. Hirose operated, removing all the pus and blood from the abdominal cavity and taking out the entire diseased colon. The girl recovered.

Another of Hirose's Jehovah's Witness patients was a young woman with a huge lung abscess that had destroyed a whole lobe. The lobe was removed and she is today a championship tennis player.

Hirose and wife Tomiko walk in their Japanese rock garden. Born in Tokyo, educated in Japan and the U.S., Hirose opposed Japanese militarism, is now a naturalized U.S. citizen.

The Hiroses in their Japanese guest room. The home contains Japanese- and American-style living quarters, plus offices.

All told, of Hirose's 4500 non-transfusion patients of the Jehovah's Witness faith, some 4000 have had non-cardiac surgery, including hysterectomies.

Hirose's work with Jehovah's Witnesses has benefited his other patients. In its place, blood transfusion can be tremendously valuable and life-saving. But there is always some risk, even if minimal, of hepatitis or other adverse reactions. When transfusion is needed, Hirose believes it should be used; but the need can often be avoided by careful operative technique. And, Jehovah's Witness or not, he rarely uses transfusions even for such operations as whole lung removals and bypasses of leg arteries.

A friendly, bubbling, enthusiastic man, Hirose maintains a back-breaking schedule and loves it. His mornings are taken up with surgery; his afternoons with rounds of patients in the various hospitals in which he operates, surgical conferences, seeing new patients, and carrying out diagnostic procedures. From 8 to 11 p.m., he sees patients at his home in Riverdale, The Bronx.

It's a magnificent home, with 26 rooms, including a separate wing for offices, another for American-style living and sleeping quarters and guest rooms, and still another containing a Japanese tearoom and Japanese-style sleeping facilities. Outside is a magnificent Japanese rock garden. There are also game rooms—for billiards, table tennis—and down below a 15 x 40-foot heated pool and sauna room which Hirose uses from 11 p.m. to midnight to refresh himself. He has married again recently after the death of his first wife some years ago, has a son in college.

Today, at 51, Hirose looks, works and acts like a 35-year-old. By all odds, he has many years ahead to help patients and to innovate. Which, as his patients who come from all over the country and even from abroad understandably see it, is a very good thing, indeed.

I love tobacco. I don't smoke.

Walt Garrison,
football and rodeo star.

If I'm a guy who loves tobacco, how come I never take a puff?

Well, because I use "smokeless tobacco."

All it takes is a pinch of "smokeless" in between my cheek and gum. Feels real relaxing in there. And I get full, rich tobacco pleasure.

Another thing is, "smokeless tobacco" can't tie up my hands. So I can use it no matter what I'm doing.

If you'd like to go "smokeless," here's what you do. Just look for three great brands.

There's Skoal, my favorite, which has a wintergreen taste.

Copenhagen, a straight tobacco. And Happy Days Mint.

All three dated for freshness. All three give you the tobacco pleasure you're looking for.

my FAVORITE jokes

by JACKIE VERNON

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jackie Vernon, talking about the rocky start of his career, recalls this funny and memorable happening: "When I was breaking into show business, working in some depressing cities, I used to carry a photo of Charlie Chaplin, my idol, and I'd talk to it. Then I started writing him letters. I'd start a letter on Monday and go through to Sunday night, like a diary, send it off to him, and start another. This went on for about two years.

"Ten years later, after I became successful on TV, I was booked into the Palladium in London and staying at the Savoy Hotel. One night the hotel manager said: 'Everyone's so excited. Charlie Chaplin and his wife are having dinner here.' I said: 'Oh, gosh, can I possibly meet him?' He said: 'I'll see if I can arrange it.' Then he returned and said: 'He'd love to meet you.' He introduced me, saying: 'Mr. Chaplin, this is Jackie Vernon, the young American comedian at the Palladium.' Chaplin looked up and said: 'Oh, yes, Jackie Vernon. Tell me, why did you stop writing?' "

Jackie will be entertaining at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas in April.

Here is some of his comedy:

I've got four kids and not one of them will come when I call. They'll probably grow up to be doctors.

My wife and I bought a waterbed and lately I find she's drifting away.

I knew there was a CIA agent at the company picnic when I saw this guy talking into a deviled egg.

I have absolutely no sense of direction. I get lost on escalators.

In my neighborhood most of the kids were muggers. I couldn't do it 'cause I was too shy.

Remember the old days when politicians started their campaign speeches with "If elected..." instead of "If convicted..."?

Sometimes I think the only things running smoothly in this country are the rivers. Well, they ought to—they're certainly well oiled.

A cosmetics company is coming out with a new hair-removal cream invented by an Air Force general. You put it on your legs and 30 minutes later each hair self-ejects.

We're living in what is known as The Space Age, and if you've ever ridden on public transportation you know how ridiculous that is.

I think it's terrible how some people spoil their children, like my neighbor. His son has the only sandbox with reclining seats.

My brother-in-law is on a new kick. It's called "Isometric Thinking." Every day he puts a pillow on the couch and presses his head against it.

I don't know what they're putting into pesticides today, but I just bit into an apple and the worm bit back.

My grandmother approached the century mark and we all made plans for a gala celebration. I said: "How would you like to go for a ride in an airplane?" She said: "I ain't going to ride in no flying machine. I'm just gonna sit here and watch television like the good Lord intended I should."

You know, most people think I was born in show business. I'm just happy that most people give me credit for being born.

My parents didn't have me baptized. They bought me a license.

When I went to high school I was voted the most likely to go to college. I was also voted the most likely to flunk out.

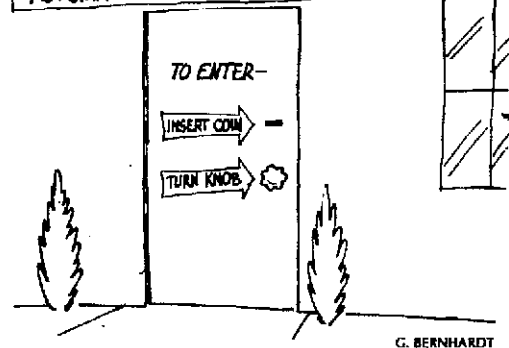

I had to do something, so I enrolled in a trade school. On the third day I was traded to Louis' Third Street Gym and Delicatessen for two medicine balls, a day-old bagel and a midget wrestler.

Malpractice insurance has become a specialized field. There are now eye, ear, nose and throat lawyers.

How can we be sure it's a miracle?

There isn't any such thing, skeptics will say. Whereas the superstitious are apt to regard any stroke of extraordinary good fortune as miraculous.

In between these two viewpoints lies the basic truth of these supernatural events which everyone should strive to understand. Because miracles do happen. To deny their existence is to contradict the testimony of Holy Scripture, for it was by performing miracles that Jesus led men to recognize His divine mission.

A miracle is, in its simplest terms, a manifestation of supernatural power... a sign of divine presence... an event through which God strengthens our faith and moves us to improve our conduct.

If you'd like to know more about miracles, their purpose and how to recognize them, write today for our pamphlet entitled "Miracles—Signs of God's Favor." It will be sent free and nobody will call on you.

If You Intend To Speculate

by Ira U. Cobleigh

On Jan. 31, here's what happened to three choice stocks: National Semiconductor tumbled 3½ points to 19 (1976 high was 55½), Heublein slipped 1½ points to 27½ (1976 high was 59½), and Eastman Kodak fell to 74½ (1976 high was 124¾). What's so important about these downspins? Just this: we're in a bull market, but the accent has definitely shifted away from blue chips to lower-priced shares of smaller companies.

Our advice: if you're a speculator on the prowl for stocks that can ascend, shop among the under-$20 mini-stocks!

Mini-stocks are a special breed, found mostly among companies grossing below $40 million annually. While some may be listed on the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE), many more are found on the American Stock Exchange (Amex) and the Over-the-Counter Market (OTC). Are they risky? Of course! But using common sense, you don't have to be a professional Wall Street analyst to pick winners.

Your first step is to decide what industries are in an uptrend. That's not too difficult. For example, there's a fuel crisis. Accordingly, even quite small companies that are successful in exploration and production of oil and natural gas or possess extensive coal reserves should increase their profits in 1977-78. Such companies as Buttes Oil and Gas, Inexco Oil, Wilshire Oil and Mesa Petroleum come to mind. (These are all mentioned without a whisper of recommendation or endorsement and only by way of illustration.) In coal, such big companies as Pittston (NYSE) and Westmoreland (OTC) are followed by such smaller ones as General Energy (OTC).

Don't forget uranium. That may be the real energy of the future. Atlas Corp. (NYSE) has been in this business for years; so has United Nuclear (NYSE). Silver is rising in price, so a look at Asarco, Callahan and Hecla (all NYSE) may be worthwhile, especially if inflation continues.

Waste materials are a problem. Younger companies are emerging in this area: R.L.C. Inc. (Amex), with a technique for handling chemical wastes, and Waste Resources Inc. for more common waste disposal. Insurance stocks are also prospering, for example Jefferson Pilot (NYSE), Southwestern Life (OTC) and American Family (NYSE), a specialist in cancer insurance. In medical care, Humana and Affiliated Hospital trade under $20 and now report higher earnings.

Be mindful of the Wall Street adage, "Stock prices are the slaves of earning power." Choose stock in a sound company whose profits are growing by 15-20 percent a year, and you'll probably make money.

It pays to be bought out

Also, there's money to be made in companies likely to be bought out. In the past year stockholders in Sea World, Koehring, Milgo Electronics, and S. and S. Corporation (a maker of coal-mining machinery) have all gained 50 percent or more by "buy out" offers for their holdings.

If you can't seem to locate a particularly exciting industry, try this: Jot down the 10 stocks with the most active price uptrend on the Amex for a single week. Get the latest data on the five that attract you most. Then buy the two whose earnings are rising fastest. You may be surprised at the results.

It's best to diversify into three or four speculative stocks and own them outright (no margin buying). Remember that if you're trading in mini-stocks, use only money you can afford to lose.

On the Amex in 1975 there were 200 stocks that doubled. In 1976 the standout performer, Resorts International "B," rose from 2½ to 22½. Look for stocks like these. They are there, waiting to be detected.

Economist Ira U. Cobleigh is author of "Happiness Is a Stock That Doubles in One Year."

Grass Seed Will Never Grow A Lawn Like This!

From Part Shade To Full Sun!

Save Now. Special
Introductory Offer.
Up To 200 Amazoy
Zoysia Grass
Plugs FREE

FULLY DROUGHT AND WEAR RESISTANT. Amazoy lawns take cookouts, parties, lawn furniture. You could even play football on it and not get your feet muddy. Rarely (if ever!) needs watering.

Grass Seed Is For The Birds! Zoysia Saves Time, Work, Money

Amazoy is the Trade Mark Registered U.S. Patent Office for our Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

In honor of the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass — enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

We Tell People, "Walk On It"

Instead of saying "Keep Off The Grass," we invited visitors to walk on it. It was an unforgettable experience for them — like walking on a thick pile carpet.

After walking on it, visitors learned that Amazoy Zoysia turf was crabgrass-proof, and the next question never failed: "How can I get some?"

Other Lawns Burn Out

Now, grass is my company's business; but it was a long time before an order of Amazoy Zoysia Grass was accepted. First we wanted to see how good this grass was. We really found out!

One summer the heat was so great you could fry eggs on the highway. Daily the sun blazed from cloudless skies; the drought worsened; whole ponds dried up. Meanwhile crabgrass flourished and took over lawns by the thousands.

IT RESISTS DROUGHT, STAYS GREEN THRU HEAT WAVES

Through it all, our deep-rooted Amazoy Zoysia stood out like a green island in a brown wasteland.

Thrives In Poor Soils

When I planted it in sandy, clay soils and sub-soil, it took hold and thrived. Other grass in the same soils struggled and died.

I compared it to other grasses in the winter, too. Ordinary grasses may die or turn sparse and scraggly due to frost and winter, but in such weather my Amazoy Zoysia merely went off its green color... it stayed so thick you could walk on it and not get your feet muddy.

Through zero-cold winters and blistering summer droughts... through onslaughts by weeds and diseases... our Meyer Zoysia had proved it could "take it." It had earned the right to be called AMAZOY, our Trade Mark published coast to coast and border to border.

By Mike Sandin

Years ago I was like nearly everyone else with a lawn. I worried about it more than any other thing around the house.

Then things changed. My company obtained a new grass just released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture.

In honor of the explorer, Frank Meyer, it was named Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass.

We received only a small amount of this Grass — enough to plant test plots in our Nursery Farm.

From that small beginning, these few precious clumps of Zoysia Grass spread until they built a lawn so thick and beautiful that visitors stopped to admire it.

HOW AMAZOY CHOKES OUT CRABGRASS AND WEEDS ALL SUMMER LONG!

If costly chemicals fail to control crabgrass for good, how does Amazoy Zoysia do it? Your deep-rooted, fully established Amazoy lawn grows so thick and luxurious that crabgrass seeds just do not germinate!

Your lawn chokes out not only crabgrass, but other weeds all summer long — year after year.

You will never need to spend a cent on crabgrass and weed killers again. So if you have wanted to get away from costly and dangerous lawn herbicides, Amazoy is your answer.

Your Own Supply Of Plug Transplants

Your established Amazoy lawn provides you with plugs for other areas as you may desire.

HERE'S WHY AMAZOY PLUGS ASSURE SUCCESS

WHERE OTHER GRASSES FAIL

Due to Amazoy's national reputation, other grasses may be offered that sound like it. But Amazoy's pre-cut plugs look different, ARE different. They are deep-rooted, winter-hardy plugs produced exclusive for transplanting.

Each large sturdy plug contains 3 square inches or more of living vigorous Zoysia turf, complete with vigorous root system in its original enriched soil.

NEVER NEEDS REPLACEMENT

AMAZOY Saves Money, Cut Work. Never a seed to sow again with Amazoy! Year after year your lawn grows thicker, like a deep pile carpet. Defies enemies that kill other lawns.

PEOPLE WRITE TO ME

As Mrs. Harry Winslow writes to me from the heart of wintry New England:

"... How pleased we are with our Zoysia lawn! We had a lawn that was a disgrace. My husband used weed killers for every known weed, but next season new weeds sprang up. We dug the lawn up twice and resodded before we learned about Amazoy. It does everything you say."

"Moved It 2 Times," Writes Woman

Mrs. M. R. Mitter writes me how her lawn "... is the envy of all who see it. When everybody's lawns around here are brown from drought ours just stays green as ever. I've never watered it, only when I put the plugs in... last summer we had it mowed (2) times. Another thing, we never have to pull any weeds — it's just wonderful!"

Wonderful! Yes, Amazoy Zoysia IS wonderful! Plant it now and you'll cut mowing by 1/2, never have another weed problem all summer, for the rest of your life!

PLUG AMAZOY INTO OLD LAWN, NEW GROUND OR NURSERY AREA

Just set Amazoy plugs into hole in ground like a cork in a bottle. Plant 1 foot apart, checkerboard style.

When planted in existing lawn areas, plugs will spread to drive out old, unwanted growth including weeds.

Easy planting instructions with order.

AMAZOY CUTS WATERING, CUTS MOWING BY 3/4

Your drought-resistant Amazoy lawn not only cuts your water bills, it cuts your work in other ways: it cuts pushing a noisy mower under a broiling summer sun by 3/4. It resists blight, disease, most insects. IT WILL NOT WINTER-KILL TO 30° BELOW ZERO. After killing frosts, just goes off its green color, regains fresh new beauty every Spring — a true perennial that ends re-seeding forever!

THERE IS NO SEED

Reports U.S. Dept. of Agric., referring to Meyer Z-52 Zoysia. Experts advise planting only live grass to be sure of getting winter-hardy grass per. by U.S. Govt., Meyer Z-52.

For Slopes, Play Areas, Bare Spots

Or correct problem areas such as slopes where Amazoy halts erosion, in hard-to cover spots, around swim pools, in play areas, etc.

NO SOO

Sod of ordinary grass carries with it the same problems as seed — such as weeds, disease, frequent mowing, burning out, etc. Amazoy is sold ONLY in pre-cut plugs... never a slab of field grown sod YOU must cut up in order to plant.

PATENTED STEP-ON PLUGGER 12" FREE WITH ORDERS OF 600 PLUGS OR MORE

Amazoy exclusive! No one else can offer you this patented 2-way plugger. Saves bending, time, work. Light, rugged, invaluable for transplanting. Cuts away competing growth as it digs plug holes.

MORE THAN A HALF-BILLION PLUGS SOLD, OUTSELLS OTHERS 10 TO 1!

The controlled transplant quality of Amazoy has made it another word for Meyer Z-52 Zoysia... the world's best known Zoysia Grass. If you don't want to take another chance with lawn disappointment, switch to the grass that assures your success: Amazoy. We guarantee every plug will grow, no matter your soil or why other grasses have failed you.

Meyer Z-52 Zoysia Grass Was Perfected By U.S. Govt.; Released In Cooperation With U.S. Golf Assoc. as a superior grass.

Order guaranteed Amazoy now, get your bonus plugs FREE. Your order will be delivered at earliest correct time for planting in your area. We ship all orders the same day grass is taken from the soil, shipping charge collect via most economical means. © Zoysia Farm Nurseries, 1977

EVERY PLUG GUARANTEED TO GROW IN YOUR AREA IN YOUR SOIL

- AMAZOY WON'T WINTER-KILL — Has survived temperature 30° below zero!
- AMAZOY WON'T HEAT-KILL — when other grasses burn out, Amazoy turns its lovely!

EVERY PLUG MUST GROW WITHIN 45 DAYS OR WE REPLACE IT FREE

Since we are hardly in business for the fun of it, you know we have to be sure of our product!

Isn't It Time YOU Switched To The Grass Making Others Obsolete?

It simply doesn't make sense to take another chance on grass that fails you when you want it most. To plant more of the same bluegrass seed just asks for more of the same, disappointing results. Order Amazoy NOW... let it spread into thrillingly beautiful turf. And remember this:

If it isn't Amazoy, you're not getting the plugs that made Zoysia famous.

TAKE A LOOK AT THESE NEW IDEAS FOR YOUR HOME AND FAMILY ■ BY PETER DRYDEN

TO PRESERVE YOUR RECORDS: Phonograph records deteriorate through normal playing. New help is a dry lubricant you spray on, then buff. The coating is less than 3-millionths of an inch thick, has cleaning and anti-static properties, reduces needle wear and maintains high fidelity (claims the maker). Kit with material for treating both sides of 25 LP's: $6.99 suggested retail price. Ball Corp., Consumer Products Division, Dept. PP, 345 S. High St., Muncie, Ind. 47302. (above left)

FOR CAR AND HOME: You may find many uses for this handy combination of sponge, rubber squeegee, scraper and scrubber. Small enough to fit in most glove compartments, it serves for cleaning the windshield, scraping away frost and ice, clearing fogged windows inside the car. At home it can be used for washing and drying windows, mirrors, countertops, appliances. $2.59. Savage Corp., Dept. PP, 842 Linbard Lane, Birmingham, Ala. 35226. (above right)

PEBBLE PLANT TRAY: You should be able to care for your houseplants more easily using this 12" x 24" x 2" plastic tray with ribbed bottom for strength. It holds pebbles, water, up to eight 6" or 32 2/4" pots; and the plants can absorb the water as needed for days. In green, brown, black or white. $5.98 ppd. Franklin Products, Dept. PP, Box 1342, Bismarck, N. Dak. 58501. (above left)

STEREO RADIO CASSETTE RECORDER: Providing stereo sound for recording and playback, this compact unit has two 5" dual-cone speakers and two built-in condenser microphones. It can record stereo FM directly from a built-in tuner and allows you to monitor recordings with stereo headphones. Also featured are two telescopic antennas, meters to show tuning signal and playback level and battery power, tape counter to index recordings and automatic level control. $199 ppd. Bruce Co., Dept. PP, Box 53, Cedar Grove, N.J. 07043. (above right)

VERSATILE SEWING AID: With a new craft board that opens to 18" x 48", you can adjust patterns, size and block needlecraft, pin down macrame work, enlarge patterns and pictures, create your own patchwork designs and make appliques, embroidery, paper crafts and scallops (claims the maker). Printed on one side are 1/8" and 1" grid patterns with design medallion, tri-star and nine-patch square pattern for tracing; on the other side are diagonal, bias and other lines. $11.20 ppd. Fantastic Fit Products, Dept. PP, 1200 Mt. Diablo Blvd., Suite 321, Walnut Creek, Cal. 94596.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Testing TV Programs

Parents should select the TV programs their children watch. More than 50 studies have shown that youngsters develop more aggressive behavior by watching violent programs. So declares the California Medical Association's "Health Tips."

Citing Nielsen index figures, "Tips" says the average child has watched 15,000 hours of television and 18,000 video murders

by high school graduation time. Moreover, children's TV programming averages six times more violence per hour than adult programming.

TV violence, the association asserts, is harmful to children in three ways:

- They learn and remember—and many copy—aggressive behavior;
- It is easier for them to be violent, and they are less anxious about it;

- It heightens, rather than "drains off," their aggressiveness.

A basic set of questions developed by San Francisco's Committee on Children's Television, Inc., should be asked by parents in choosing programs suitable for their children:

- Does the program appear suitable for the child's age level? Does it present conflicts that a child can understand? Are positive ways shown to resolve those conflicts?

- Does the program stimulate constructive activities and enhance the quality of a child's play?

- Does the program separate advertisements from program content?

- Does the program show racial groups and sex roles positively?

- Does the program present social issues that a child can understand, with worthwhile ideals, values and beliefs?

- Does the program have artistic qualities and a pace that allows the child to absorb and think about the material presented?

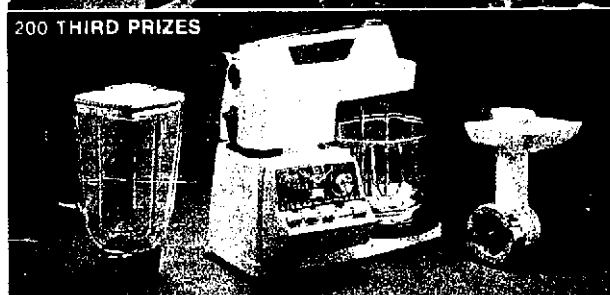

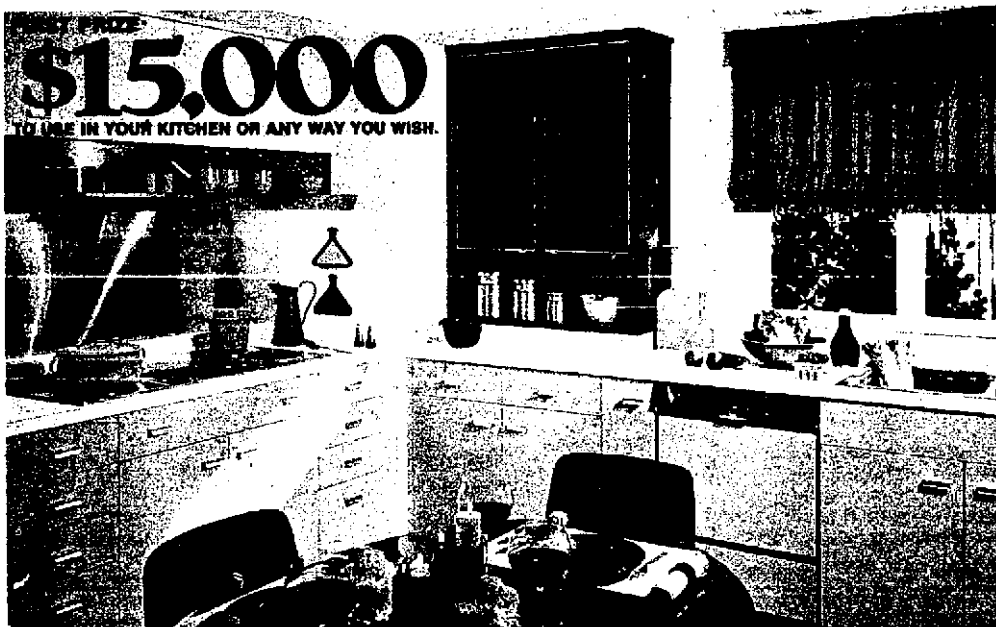

Immodesty

Students at Harvard, Yale and Princeton were polled on how they ranked themselves intellectually compared to President Jimmy Carter, who was graduated from the U.S. Naval Academy, Class of 1947.

At Harvard, half the students said they were brighter than Carter; at Princeton, 48 percent; and at Yale, 45 percent.

Drug Conviction

Last month Keith Richard, one of the Rolling Stones, was found guilty after a three-day trial in England of possessing cocaine.

Young girls jammed the courtroom to hear the verdicts. They cheered loudly as the jury foreman declared him not guilty on the first charge of possessing LSD. Hisses and boos greeted the second verdict: guilty of possessing a few grains of cocaine found in a sniffing tube in his car. Crucial evidence was a newspaper picture of Richard wearing a similar tube on a chain a few days before his arrest.

This was the second drug conviction for the 33-year-old guitarist. A third conviction in England inevitably calls for a jail sentence.

Also important is the possibility that Richard will lose his U.S. visa because of the drug conviction — undoubtedly the main reason why his lawyer, Peter Rawlinson, will probably appeal the guilty verdict.

The Rolling Stones planned an American tour later this year, one almost guaranteed to earn millions. If Keith Richard is barred from entering the U.S., Rolling Stone vocalist Mick Jagger, who appeared at his trial, will have to hire a substitute guitarist in a hurry.

Spell Cheese?" Sweepstakes

You can win one of 1726 fabulous prizes from Kraft, including $15,000, by telling us how you think America spells cheese.

1ST PRIZE:

KITCHEN

$15,000 is yours to remodel, renovate, or completely re-outfit your kitchen. New appliances, new cabinets, new floorplan, new utensils — anything you want, and we'll give you $15,000 to do it with. Or use the money any way you wish.

25 SECOND PRIZES:

RADARANGE® by Amana®

The Amana® Touchmatic™ Radarange® first microwave oven with a brain, offers you a whole new kind of flexibility. It can thaw, then cook, then turn itself off — all with one setting. The built-in computer and digital clock/timer give you control with the touch of a finger.

200 THIRD PRIZES:

APPLIANCE KITCHEN CENTER™ by Oster®

A blender, mixer, and grinder all in one. The blender gives you ten Controlled-Cycle speeds, the grinder can handle any kind of food from raw meat to nuts, and the mixer comes with two bowls for every mixing job. It's an all-purpose appliance that will be handy in any kitchen.

500 FOURTH PRIZES:

FRY BABY™ FRYER from Presto

A fully automatic deep fryer with no temperature to set or watch. And it uses only two cups of cooking oil! The snap-on lid lets you store oil without spills or odors. It's protected by a non-stick surface and comes equipped with lift-and-drain spoon.

1000 FIFTH PRIZES:

TEFLON II™ BAKEWARE SET from Chilton

This 5-piece bakeware set fits all your baking needs. The set includes one Bread and Loaf Pan, one Cookie and Biscuit Pan, one 12-cup Muffin Pan, and two 9-inch Layer Cake Pans. All with strong, white TEFLON II™ interiors and natural aluminum exteriors.

ALL OF THESE 1,726 PRIZES for better cooking will be awarded by Kraft, the maker of fine cheese products. Look over this selection of cheese products from Kraft, and tell us how America spells cheese. Follow the rules below.

OFFICIAL SWEEPSTAKES RULES

1. To enter the "How Does America Spell Cheese?" Sweepstakes, send your hand-lettered name, address, and response on the entry blank, provided or on a plain 4" x 6" piece of paper to Kraft Cheese Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 443, Chicago, Illinois 60677. All entries must be accompanied by the Kraft trademark from the package of any Kraft Cheese product, or by the words "Kraft Cheese" hand-lettered on a separate 4" x 6" sheet of paper. NO PURCHASE REQUIRED. Only hand-lettered or hand-printed entries will be accepted.
2. You may enter as many times as you like, but each entry must be mailed in a separate envelope postmarked no later than May 22, 1977 and received no later than May 31, 1977.
3. Winners will be determined in a random blind-fold drawing conducted by an independent judging organization. Entries will not be judged by their answer to the question "How Does America Spell Cheese?" Your chances of winning depend on the number of times you enter and on the number of other entries received. Winners will be notified by mail approximately 30 days after the sweepstakes is closed.
4. All prizes will be awarded. Substitution of prizes is not permitted, and there are no cash alternatives to the second, third, fourth, and fifth prizes. Only one prize to a family. State, Federal, and other taxes imposed on a prize winner in this Sweepstakes will be the sole responsibility of the prize-winner. Winners may be asked to execute an affidavit of release and eligibility. In the event a winner declines to accept a listed winning prize, that person will be disqualified and a supplemental drawing or drawings will be held from the balance of non-winning entries to award the unaccepted prize.
5. This Sweepstakes is void outside the U.S., in Missouri and where prohibited or otherwise restricted. Entrants must be 18 years of age or older. Employees of Kraft, Inc. and its subsidiaries, its advertising agencies, and judging organization, and their immediate families are not eligible.
6. All decisions of the judges are final. All entries become the property of Kraft Foods.
7. Lists of winners will be sent to entrants who send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Kraft Cheese Sweepstakes Winners List, P.O. Box 6797, Chicago, Illinois 60677.

my FAVORITE jokes

by JACKIE VERNON

EDITOR'S NOTE: Jackie Vernon, talking about the rocky start of his career, recalls this funny and memorable happening: "When I was breaking into show business, working in some depressing cities, I used to carry a photo of Charlie Chaplin, my idol, and I'd talk to it. Then I started writing him letters. I'd start a letter on Monday and go through to Sunday night, like a diary, send it off to him, and start another. This went on for about two years."

"Ten years later, after I became successful on TV, I was booked into the Palladium in London and staying at the Savoy Hotel. One night the hotel manager said: 'Everyone's so excited. Charlie Chaplin and his wife are having dinner here.' I said: 'Oh, gosh, can I possibly meet him?' He said: 'I'll see if I can arrange it.' Then he returned and said: 'He'd love to meet you.' He introduced me, saying: 'Mr. Chaplin, this is Jackie Vernon, the young American comedian at the Palladium.' Chaplin looked up and said: 'Oh, yes, Jackie Vernon. Tell me, why did you stop writing?'"

Jackie will be entertaining at the Sahara Hotel in Las Vegas in April.

Here is some of his comedy:

I've got four kids and not one of them will come when I call. They'll probably grow up to be doctors.

My wife and I bought a waterbed and lately I find she's drifting away.

I knew there was a CIA agent at the company picnic when I saw this guy talking into a deviled egg.

I have absolutely no sense of direction. I get lost on escalators.

In my neighborhood most of the kids were muggers. I couldn't do it 'cause I was too shy.

Remember the old days when politicians started their campaign speeches with "If elected..." instead of "If convicted..."?

Sometimes I think the only things running smoothly in this country are the rivers. Well, they ought to—they're certainly well oiled.

A cosmetics company is coming out with a new hair-removal cream invented by an Air Force general. You put it on your legs and 30 minutes later each hair self-ejects.

We're living in what is known as The Space Age, and if you've ever ridden on public transportation you know how ridiculous that is.

I think it's terrible how some people spoil their children, like my neighbor. His son has the only sandbox with reclining seats.

My brother-in-law is on a new kick. It's called "Isometric Thinking." Every day he puts a pillow on the couch and presses his head against it.

I don't know what they're putting into pesticides today, but I just bit into an apple and the worm bit back.

My grandmother approached the century mark and we all made plans for a gala celebration. I said: "How would you like to go for a ride in an airplane?" She said: "I ain't going to ride in no flying machine. I'm just gonna sit here and watch television like the good Lord intended I should."

You know, most people think I was born in show business. I'm just happy that most people give me credit for being born.

My parents didn't have me baptized. They bought me a license.

When I went to high school I was voted the most likely to go to college. I was also voted the most likely to flunk out.

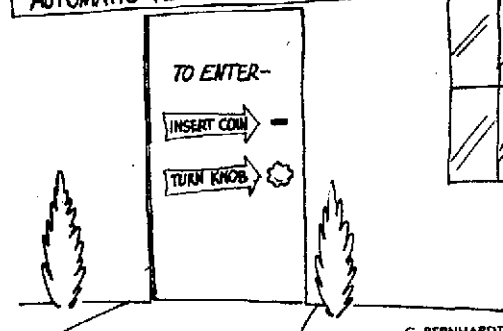

I had to do something, so I enrolled in a trade school. On the third day I was traded to Louis' Third Street Gym and Delicatessen for two medicine balls, a day-old bagel and a midget wrestler.

Malpractice insurance has become a specialized field. There are now eye, ear, nose and throat lawyers.

I was reading about a woman who has so many wrinkles she uses a facial cream called prune whip.

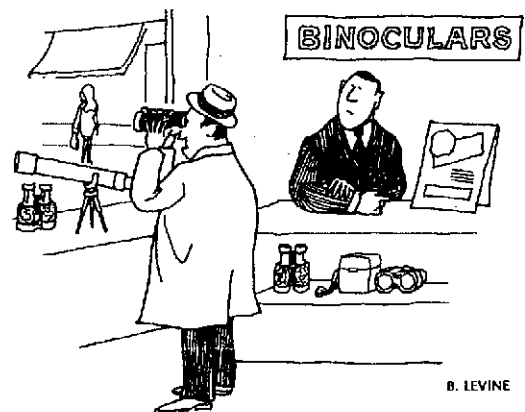

My uncle drank 20 martinis a day and died at the age of 94, and that was only because he got a bad olive.

Imagine! A 50 foot
Privet Hedge that dresses up your landscape as it protects it... for less than 8¢ per foot of hedge! For faster effect and more dense growth, order 50 plants for only $7.75 and plant every 12 inches. Free cultural instructions help develop in shortest time possible. We ship the ligustrum Species, planting stock we think best suits your climate, and of same size stock and time quality as feature offer above.
*Varieties personally selected by our experts as being suitable for most parts of the U.S.
In severely cold climates, check for hardiness. Blooms illustrated are reasonably accurate as to shape of varieties named although they may vary because nature often turns out tints and shapes found nowhere else. EVERGREENS—in extremely hot Southern Climates check for growth ability. Our 3 Year Guarantee protects you.

All-in-One Assortment Provides Complete Landscape At Low Cost!

- 1-TULIP TREE (Liriodendron). Tall, shady. Blooms with tulip-like flowers each about 2 1/2" across
- 2-ROSE OF SHARON (Hibiscus). 5-6 ft. shrub. Large single blossoms. Beautiful color
- 1-SWEET WOOD ORANGE (Philadelphus coronatus). 10 to 12 feet, clusters of flowers closely resemble creamy white orange blossoms in color and fragrance.
- 1-RED OSIER DOGWOOD (Cornus stolonifera). White spring flowers. Dark red spreading branches are a winter show
- 1-DOGWOOD (Cornus florida). 8-11 ft. shrub. Flowers are white or pink, in attractive clusters
- 1-BUSH HONEYSUCKLE (Lonicera tatarica varietal). Vigorous 8-10 ft.
shrub. White to pink flowers in spring
- 1-CORALBERRY (Spatholobus orbiculatus). 5-7 ft. shrub. Very attractive in fall with crimson foliage and reddish-purple berries
- 1-WEIGELA (Weigela florida varietal). Lovely 8-10 ft. shrub covers itself with masses of rose pink flowers
- 1-WHITE SPIREA (Spirea varietal). Early spring blooming varieties
- 1-HONEYSUCKLE VINE (Lonicera japonica varietal). Sweet scented white flowers changes to yellow. Clime trailing, etc.
- 1-PINK SPIREA (Pink flowering varieties). 4-6 ft. shrub used as a central plant with white spirea. Pink flowers in clusters
- 1-WEIGELA (Weigela florida varietal). 8-12 foot shrub, with golden blooms and early spring
- 1-REDBUD TREE (Cercis canadensis). Heights to 40 ft. Rose-pink flower clusters cover twigs early spring
- 1-SILVER MAPLE (Acer saccharinum). 5-7 ft. shrub. Leaves are silvery bright green above, silvery white below
- 1-HYDRANGEA P.A. (Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora). Comes to you in bloom for growing in sun or shade by following simple directions. Giant white flower clusters turn lovely pink in late summer
- 1-GOLDEN WEEPING WILLOW (Salix alba varietal). Spectacularly beautiful in winter as in summer. Slender yellow branches curve gracefully almost to the ground. Bonus for ordering by Deadline Date
